FATAL FIRE IN NOVATO

A Novato man, John R. D. Cheek, died yesterday when fire gutted the front part of this trailer while he was napping on the couch. Firemen said a discarded cigarette started the blaze about 4 p.m. at 7060 Redwood Highway and $8,000 damage was done to the trailer and its contents. A passerby, Edward Carpenter of Laguna Beach, spotted the fire and pulled Cheek from the burning trailer but he was already dead.

Nixon Working On A Plan To Avoid Rationing Of Gas

Announcement Expected From Simon Tomorrow

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon said today he was attempting to work out a program to avoid gasoline rationing.

It was the most direct comment Nixon has yet made about the likelihood of rationing.

When a photographer wished him a Merry Christmas during a picture-taking session in the Oval Office with federal energy czar William E. Simon, Nixon said:

"We're trying to work out something so there will be no rationing."

Simon will hold a news conference tomorrow and was expected to announce that the administration does not plan to invoke rationing to help ease the energy shortage.

Nixon considers the lifting of the Arab oil embargo against most of Europe and Japan will be "a step in the right direction" but continues to believe that oil should not be used as an economic weapon, Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren told reporters later.

Warren said that although the Arabs are continuing to maintain the oil boycott against the United States and the Netherlands "We will continue to work toward a solution to the Middle East problem and the oil problem."

Warren spoke after Nixon met for nearly an hour with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F Dobrynin in the Oval Office, Warren said Nixon discussed the oil problems with Kissinger and Simon.

Nixon's meeting with Kissinger had been expected. But his conversation with Dobrynin came as something of a surprise. Reporters learned that he was in the White House only after seeing his limousine parked nearby.

The three men, meeting alone, were expected to confer about an hour.

"They're just getting together to talk about general foreign policy matters," Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said.

Warren recalled that Nixon spoke alone with Dobrynin for 40 minutes last week.

Photographers were summoned to the Oval Office to take pictures of the Nixon-Kissinger-Dobrynin meeting. Reporters were not allowed to cover the picture-taking session.

On Monday Nixon and Kissinger met for more than an hour and on Christmas Day they spoke by telephone for a half hour.

Nixon also had an appointment with former New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, and his successor, Malcolm Wilson.

Rockefeller, a potential candidate for the Republican presidential nomination in 1976, is one Republican leader who has conspicuously side-stepped any sharp criticism of White House involvement in the Watergate scandal, and has maintained his lines of communication with Nixon. But Rockefeller's efforts to persuade Nixon to deal with New York City's mass transit problems with federal aid so far have been unsuccessful.

Nixon had not previously met Wilson since he took over the state house in Albany after serving 15 years as the lieutenant governor.

Nixon put off a previously planned post-Christmas vacation to Key Biscayne, Fla., but it appeared likely he may decide to fly to the Florida White House later this week for a long weekend over New Year's.

Some 100 White House aides, Secret Service agents and reporters were holding reservations on commercial airlines on the prospect that Nixon would be going to Florida.

Nixon mixed business with pleasure Christmas day, spending the morning in his oval office conferring with his chief of staff, Gen. Alexander M. Haig.

He talked by telephone for more than 30 minutes with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger on latest developments in the Arab-Israeli peace conference in Geneva. Kissinger was expected to return to Geneva in January for another round of consultations to prod both sides into speeding up a military disengagement and moving toward negotiations for a settlement of their 25-year conflict.

The President also had some family time with his wife, two daughters and sons-in-law.

In the late afternoon, the Nixons gathered in the White Hose Red Room for a Christmas turkey dinner with a few friends, including the President's personal secretary, Rose Mary Woods.

In other developments, Presidential aides and his legal team were moving toward completing another set of "white papers" to clear up allegations against Nixon in Watergate- related matters.

Mideast Talks Go Nowhere

GENEVA (UPI) — Israeli and Egyptian military delegations adopted such tough bargaining positions today at start of their talks on separating their forces along the Suez Canal that there was no progress. Each side dismissed the other's proposals as unacceptable.

Israeli sources said their stand is that Israel's troops on the west bank of the canal and inside Egypt should simply move back to the east bank, in other words switching places with Egypt's 3rd Army on the east bank, or Israeli side of the canal.

Egyptian sources said this is the same position Israel took in the unsuccessful disengagement talks at Kilometer 101 on the Cairo-Suez road in November and remains "totally unacceptable."

Egyptian officials said privately that their opening position is that Israeli troops should move back as far as a line from El-Arish in the north of the Sinai to Ras-Mohammed in the south, thus giving Egypt about two-thirds of the Sinai.

Israeli sources said this would be "out of the question."

The Egyptian sources said their delegation to the military working group on disengagement has a fall-back position which would be for Israeli troops to move back behind the Sinai passes which are about 20 miles from the canal.

Egypt would remain west of the passes while the United Nations would act as a buffer on the passes themselves.

A third Egyptian proposal under consideration, the sources said, is for the 3rd Army to remain on the east bank with Egypt maintaining an "administrative presence" of civilians and police between the canal and the passes.

Israeli sources said their delegation is unlikely to move from the simple switching sides proposal until early next year after Israel's elections Dec. 31.

Egyptian officials close to Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmi, who remained in Geneva following last week's foreign ministers conference, said this will mean no progress can be made.

They said Egypt further will oppose any negotiations on substantial political matters until the disengagement process is either completed or close to completion.

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan said yesterday the talks have better than a 50 per cent chance of succeeding. But reports in Israeli and Egyptian newspapers hinted at a hardening of positions with neither side prepared to make major concessions.

Through its press, Israel said it did not intend to make new proposals to Egypt for the disengagement of their armies along the Suez Canal front that were not made at the unsuccessful talks at Kilometer 101 on the Cairo-Suez road. Those talks were broken off Nov. 28.

Cairo newspapers said Egypt was not prepared to withdraw any of its troops or weapons from the Suez Canal's east bank (the Israeli side) as part of arrangements for separating the forces.

Lt. Gen. Ensio Siilasvuo of Finland, head of the U.N. Emergency Force, will be neutral chairman of the completely private negotiations between the two delegations, with Gen. Mordecai Gur heading the Israeli side and Brig. Taha al Maghdoub the Egyptian.

The two-man Israeli delegation also included Col. Dov Sion, Dayan's son-in-law. The Egyptian delegation included Col. Fuad Hueidy and Dr. Nabil el Arabi from the foreign ministry, acting as a political adviser.

U.N. officials said there would be no official statements after the disengagement sessions although both sides, as well as Siilasvuo, may comment on the general atmosphere.

Life Along The Lake Appealing To Disillusioned Texas Couple

DALLAS (UPI) — In the neighborhood where Bob and Toni Blackman used to live their children didn't have much room to play and the rent was high.

There were rats and roaches and the Blackmans claim their landlord wasn't interested in eliminating the pests.

So the Blackmans bundled up their four boys and three-monthold daughter and moved into a tent on the wooded shores of Lake Ray Hubbard.

"We just decided we'd be better right here," he said of the lake front 25 miles outside of town.

The Blackmans, who are in their early 30s, pitched their tent along a creek 100 yards from the lake, dragged in an empty cable spool for a table and built a brick stove in the dirt.

"We've been out here about three months and the kids evidently are much healthier, getting fresh air and sunshine. If it was where we could, we'd stay here indefinitely."

The reservoir manager is not quite so anxious.

"People down here at the water utilities came out and told us that people have been coming out here and seeing us and they don't like the idea of us being out here," Mrs. Blackman said.

She said the lake authorities told them to leave. She's not quite sure why.

"We've been clean, in fact we cleaned up a bunch of junk when we came here. We keep it clean, but the manager of the water utilities said there has been a bunch of complaints. He said the people from the Health Department had come down here.

"My husband pondered the question and wondered what they'd do if we just stayed out here."

Walter Lane, reservoir manager for Lake Ray Hubbard, said the Blackmans have been asked to move for health reasons.

"We can't let it (the camp) be there, one will bring another and next thing we know we got a whole shoreline of migrants and squatters," he said.

"It's primarily the health problem, a health and sanitation problem," Lane said. "There's no personal animosity involved. Rules are rules. If you let one do that everyone will want to."

He said extended camping near the lake would ruin the reservoir for drinking water. He said health authorities set strict rules for camping, as well as animal grazing.

The Blackmans spend their day fishing, hunting, and dredging up returnable bottles. Occasionally, Bob Blackman takes the boys into town, when he's not working at a paint and body shop.

Mrs. Blackman, who wears blue jeans, a long-sleeve plaid shirt and a faded white straw hat, spends much of the time with the children, who are all under 8 years old.

"There's no other kids out here, so we play with them quite a bit more. If I need water to clean something the bigger boys will get it. In town, you can't get kids to do that because they don't know where their house is."

Superior Court Bench To Keep Honor Farm Ties

Marin's Superior Court judges will not follow the lead of a municipal court judge and prevent lawbreakers from serving their sentences at the Santa Venetia Honor Farm.

In a letter to the board of supervisors, presiding Superior Court Judge E. Warren McGuire said the hiring of two ex-convicts will not stop his branch of the judiciary from using the minimum-security farm.

Municipal Judge Robert A. Smallman last week said he would begin specifying that sentences he hands out must be served at the Marin County Jail.

He took the action after learning that two ex-convicts were among nine persons hired to staff the farm when the new county department of corrections takes over next Wednesday.

But Ralph Merola, due to inherit the farm from the sheriff's department, said the hirings were not secret, as Smallman claimed, and that probation departments in other counties, as well as the state Department of Corrections, employ ex-offenders as counselors.

(One of the two ex-convicts, Leon LeGant, 47, of San Rafael, resigned his honor farm job Sunday in the wake of Smallman's charges. He said he wanted to protect his family from possible adverse effects of publicity.)

McGuire wrote that he and fellow judges have opposed creation of the corrections department. However, he said, they will not deny lawbreakers an opportunity to serve their sentences at the honor farm.

Sheriff Says He Won't Issue Gun Permits Asked By Synanon

Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos said today he will refuse to issue the 250 gun permits requested by the head of Synanon Foundation in Marin.

"Under the conditions outlined by Synanon, neither Synanon nor anyone else would be issued a permit" to carry a firearm, Mountanos explained. "Our contacts with Synanon over the years have been very satisfactory, and I'll be happy to meet with Mr. Dederich, to go over any matters" concerning security problems at the Synanon facilities, the sheriff said.

Charles E. Dederich wrote last Friday, seeking permits to "arm every adult male in our Tomales Bay facilities."

He claimed the district attorney's office had refused to prosecute persons responsible for stealing tape recordings of Synanon game sessions and other matter last January. Dederich argued that the district attorney's "actions encourage the spread of crime and lawlessness."

Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales retorted in a letter to Dederich on Monday.

"Your assertion that I am not 'interested' in issuing any criminal charges in this case is a complete misrepresentation . . . when we have completed our investigation, I will then determine whether or not to file criminal charges — and not before," Bales wrote.

The district attorney pointed out that Dederich's attorneys asked for prosecution only on Dec. 12 about 11 months after the burglary.

Bales wrote that Synanon attorneys "assured this office that your security problem at Synanon has already been eliminated."

Sheriff Mountanos told the Independent-Journal that gun permits are issued only to individual private citizens, when there is clear evidence of threats or danger to the person.

Each applicant is fingerprinted and undergoes extensive investigation before receiving a gun permit, Mountanos said. He would not comment on the question of whether some Synanon members' criminal records would make it illegal for them to carry a handgun in any case.

Arab Easing Of Embargo Seen Good By Diplomats

KUWAIT (UPI) — Diplomats said today the decision of Arab oil countries to step up production 10 per cent would decisively lessen the impact of the fuel war against the West but would have little direct effect in the United States.

The Arab petroleum nations issued a surprise announcement yesterday reducing fuel cutbacks from 25 per cent to 15 per cent next month and promising to supply the "full oil needs" of all "friendly" nations.

The Arabs, who have been wielding their "oil weapon" against the West since October, also canceled an additional 5 per cent production cut scheduled to go into effect in January.

A communique issued after a two-day meeting by oil ministers of the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries (OAPEC) vowed, however, to maintain total boycotts to the United States, Holland, South Africa, Rhodesia and Portugal.

The Arab communique nevertheless noted "with safisfaction the gradual change in American public opinion" toward the Middle East conflict.

The OAPEC statement agreed to place a greater distinction between friendly and unfriendly countries. Diplomatic sources said "friendly" nations such as Britain, France, Spain, Japan, Belgium and the Philippines would get their "full oil needs."

The Arabs "noted a favorable change in the attitude of Japan on the Arab cause" and promised "special treatment" because of Tokyo's "deteriorating economic conditions."

The sources said the OAPEC communique was a direct result of the recent world tour by Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani and Algerian petroleum chief Balaid Abdelsalam.

The communique said the OAPEC ministers would next meet in Tripoli, Libya, to review their decisions after a new world trip by the Saudi Arabian and Algerian oil ministers.

Sheriff Says He Won't Issue Gun Permits Asked By Synanon

Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos said today he will refuse to issue the 250 gun permits requested by the head of Synanon Foundation in Marin.

"Under the conditions outlined by Synanon, neither Synanon nor anyone else would be issued a permit" to carry a firearm, Mountanos explained. "Our contacts with Synanon over the years have been very satisfactory, and I'll be happy to meet with Mr. Dederich, to go over any matters" concerning security problems at the Synanon facilities, the sheriff said.

He claimed the district attorney's office had refused to prosecute persons responsible for stealing tape recordings of Synanon game sessions and other matter last January. Dederich argued that the district attorney's "actions encourage the spread of crime and lawlessness."

Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales retorted in a letter to Dederich on Monday.

"Your assertion that I am not 'interested' in issuing any criminal charges in this case is a complete misrepresentation . . . when we have completed our investigation, I will then determine whether or not to file criminal charges — and not before," Bales wrote.

The district attorney pointed out that Dederich's attorneys asked for prosecution only on Dec. 12 about 11 months after the burglary.

Bales wrote that Synanon attorneys "assured this office that your security problem at Synanon has already been eliminated."

Sheriff Mountanos told the Independent-Journal that gun permits are issued only to individual private citizens, when there is clear evidence of threats or danger to the person.

Arab Easing Of Embargo Seen Good By Diplomats

KUWAIT (UPI) — Diplomats said today the decision of Arab oil countries to step up production 10 per cent would decisively lessen the impact of the fuel war against the West but would have little direct effect in the United States.

The Arab petroleum nations issued a surprise announcement yesterday reducing fuel cutbacks from 25 per cent to 15 per cent next month and promising to supply the "full oil needs" of all "friendly" nations.

The Arabs, who have been wielding their "oil weapon" against the West since October, also canceled an additional 5 per cent production cut scheduled to go into effect in January.

A communique issued after a two-day meeting by oil ministers of the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries (OAPEC) vowed, however, to maintain total boycotts to the United States, Holland, South Africa, Rhodesia and Portugal.

The Arab communique nevertheless noted "with safisfaction the gradual change in American public opinion" toward the Middle East conflict.

The OAPEC statement agreed to place a greater distinction between friendly and unfriendly countries. Diplomatic sources said "friendly" nations such as Britain, France, Spain, Japan, Belgium and the Philippines would get their "full oil needs."

The Arabs "noted a favorable change in the attitude of Japan on the Arab cause" and promised "special treatment" because of Tokyo's "deteriorating economic conditions."

The sources said the OAPEC communique was a direct result of the recent world tour by Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani and Algerian petroleum chief Balaid Abdelsalam.

The communique said the OAPEC ministers would next meet in Tripoli, Libya, to review their decisions after a new world trip by the Saudi Arabian and Algerian oil ministers.

Snowy Greeting For Cosmonauts

MOSCOW (UPI) — Two Soviet cosmonauts returned to earth through a raging snowstorm and high winds today, ending their eight-day Soyuz 13 space mission.

Flight commander Pyotr Klimuk and engineer Valentin Lebedev, two 31-year-old space rookies, floated to earth in their parachute-borne spacecraft near Karaganda on the plains of Soviet Central Asia, the Tass news agency said.

Tass said the cosmonauts only complaint was that they could not see their approach to earth, but not because of the weather. "It's a pity we cannot see it — the portholes have grown smudgy," Klimuk told ground communicators.

Gen. Vladimir A. Shatalov, commander of cosmonaut training, said in a television interview the landing came after anxious moments on the ground.

He said a snowstorm was raging, visibility was poor and high winds buffeted the craft on its descent.

"We were very anxious," Shatalov said. "But the crew landed safely and successfully."

He said the crew maintained radio contact during the landing and the ground search party spotted them immediately at the precise spot where they were supposed to come down.

The flight, the third longest in Soviet space history, was a warmup for the Soviet-American joint space flight in 1975.

Since the Soviet manned space program began in 1961, it has been exceeded in duration only by the 24-day flight of Soyuz-11 in 1971 and the 17-day flight of Soyuz-9 in 1970.

The United States holds the record for manned space flight —56 days set by the Skylab 2 crew earlier this year. The crew of Skylab 3, now in space, is scheduled to remain in orbit 89 days.

Tass said the Soyuz-13 landed at 11:50 a.m. (3:50 a.m. EST) today near Karaganda in Soviet Kazakhstan, just three hours and five minutes short of eight full days.

"The state of health of the cosmonauts. . . is good," Tass said.

The principal mission of the Soyuz-13 crew was to make studies of the sun and stars and to test the spacecraft, which had to be revamped after a leaky hatch on Soyuz-11 caused the death of its three-man crew.

There was no indication whether Klimuk and Lebedev also filmed the Kohoutek comet, as the American Skylab 3 crew has done.

Tass said the Soyuz-13 star studies were aimed at obtaining information on galaxies billions of light years distant from the earth.

Catholics Warned Of Dangers Of Man Seeing Self As God

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI has warned Roman Catholics of the danger of modern culture leading man to think he can set himself up as his own god.

The 76-year-old pontiff, in his annual Christmas Day address, also criticized abortion, saying, "Man is born sacred in his life, from his mother's womb."

The spiritual leader of more than 600 million Catholics marked his 10th Christmas as Pope by urging Catholics to watch out for "the humanism of modern culture and sociology" that "sets up man as man's god."

"In the depths of his heart, man has a mysterious need, a need which has become a hope through a promise of divine mercy," he said.

He said man has freedom in life, but still has the divine need to live a life based on Jesus Christ.

"Yes, the need for a Savior," he said. "A man to be one with men, but at the same time God in order to lead man to the heights to which his original and present nature destines him—to the level of the divine."

The Pope called on Roman Catholics "in sorrow, misery, suffering or sin" to live lives based on Christ to find meaning in life.

"Brethren, there is born for us a Savior—the Savior," he said. "He is the son of Mary. He is the son of God. He is called our Lord Jesus Christ."

Wearing white robes, Pope Paul sat before a microphone on his red velvet-draped balcony to deliver in Italian the message carried worldwide by Vatican Radio.

Pilgrims in the square below waved hundreds of white handkerchiefs at him in greeting. A single red balloon drifted up slowly from the cheering crowd and climbed toward the dome of the basilica as the pontiff waved goodbye.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Turkish Leader Is Dead At 90

Inonu

ANKARA (UPI) — Thousands of citizens paid homage today to "old fox" Ismet Inonu, who helped forge modern Turkey from the ruins of the Ottoman Empire and became its first prime minister.

Inonu died at his home Christmas Day of a heart attack at the age of 90.

Thousands of Turks, including his most bitter political foes, lined the streets outside Inonu's Ankara home today to pay him homage. A government spokesman said he would be buried in the Ataturk Mausoleum in Ankara Friday.

Family friends said Inonu died embittered by Turkey's political deadlock and his own lack of power to help solve it.

Aircraft Downed

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist antiaircraft guns shot down three South Vietnamese aircraft in 24 hours, killing nine government soldiers and wounding 37 others, military sources said today.

Heavy machine gun fire downed a jet A37 Dragonfly fighter-bomber and a UH1 Huey helicopter today in Quang Duc province 110 miles north of Saigon, the sources said.

Earlier, Communist forces besieging Tong Le Chan base camp 55 miles north of Saigon shot down a huge CH47 Chinook helicopter carrying replacement troops to the camp. All nine of the dead and 36 of the wounded were in the Chinook.

The sources said the subsonic Dragonfly was bombing North Vietnamese troop positions near Kien Duc district town, scene of heavy fighting earlier this month. The pilot ejected and was unhurt but the plane was destroyed, the sources said.

Guerrillas Nabbed

PARIS (UPI) — Security agents arrested 13 pro-Arab guerrillas in Paris and seized explosives, weapons and commando plans, a Paris newspaper reported today.

The newspaper Le Figaro said the guerrillas were picked up Dec. 20, but authorities waited until Christmas Eve to decide to put them to trial. Police declined comment.

On Dec. 19, a car especially designed for smuggling was spotted by authorities at the French town of Modane near the Italian frontier, the newspaper said.

Le Figaro said the car, carrying arms, ammunition and three members of the commando network, was allowed to travel to a villa in the suburbs of Paris.

Next day, agents arrested 13 persons, some reportedly members of the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Turkey, according to the newspaper.

Bomb Warning

LONDON (UPI) — Scotland Yard predicted a new wave of terror bombings in London despite a one-day Christmas halt in alleged Irish Republican Army (IRA) attacks within the capital.

A Scotland Yard spokesman warned the public against developing a false sense of security because of the lull.

"We expect more bombs and the public should be careful and warn us of any suspicious packages they see today," the spokesman said.

On Christmas Day, London received an unexpected present from the extremist IRA. No bombs exploded anywhere in the city for the first time in five days. Since Dec. 15, 21 IRA bombs have exploded across London, injuring 81 persons.

Bloody Christmas

BELFAST (UPI) — British army officers predicted more violence today following a bloody Christmas of alleged Irish Republican Army (IRA) terror attacks across the province.

"The IRA have started to behave like mad dogs," one British officer said. "If Christmas is a guide, we are liable to see a bloody New Year's Eve."

Authorities said IRA bomb and sniper attacks killed three persons, including two of the underground Roman Catholic group's own gunmen. Another 38 persons were wounded in Christmas Eve and Christmas day explosions.

Soldiers also battled Catholic demonstrators who tried to march on Belfast City Hall Christmas day to protest the jailing of suspected IRA gunmen. An army spokesman said the crowd of about 200 persons was quickly dispersed and two protesters arrested.

The worst of the explosions killed three and injured 36 in a crowded border pub on Christmas Eve. Less than a month before, the owner threw a similar bomb out the door before it could explode.

Airport Heavily Guarded Against Guerrilla Strike

ROME (UPI) — Two divisions of military and national police backed by artillery maintained guard today over Ciampino Airport to block reported plans for a second strike by Arab guerrillas.

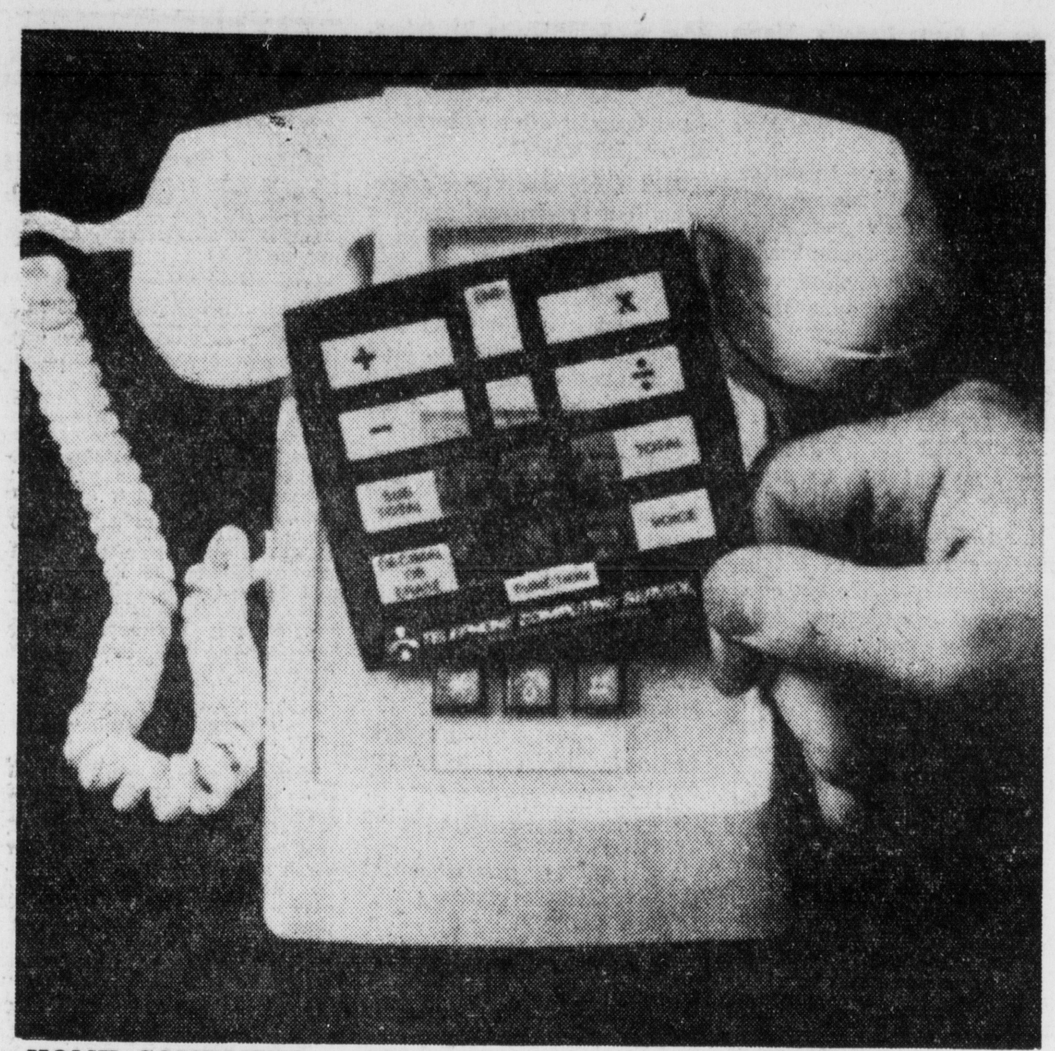
Police sources said the guard was ordered yesterday on a report from the Italian Secret Service that a guerrilla attack was planned for Christmas day, eight days after an Arab assault on Leonardo da Vinci Airport that took 31 lives.

A force of about 2,000 men cordoned off Ciampino yesterday and a motorized division of Carabinieri (National Police), a division of the Air Force Guard and artillery remained on duty today.

The guard searched all civilian personnel reporting for duty at the airport used by visiting dignitaries and for military and civil charter flights.

Airport officials said a German plane was permitted to take off for Strasbourg at midday after a search by artillerymen. One of the passengers, who did not turn up in time for the takeoff, was sought by police.

Eleven flags have flown over California, including those of Russia, Spain, the English Cross of St. George and the Pirate Bouchard.



HOME COMPUTER — Equipped with this template, persons subscribing to the service could operate the first computer in the nation for home service via their touch-tone telephones. Homeowners' Computer Service Folding After Six Month Test

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — The nation's first home computer service, which brought customers computer services by telephone, is going out of business after six months.

"We were the first of our kind in the nation" said Joseph Gelzer Jr., president and cofounder of In-Touch. "You might say it doesn't pay to be first."

The computer operation was a subsidiary of Seattle First National Bank. Anyone who subscribed to In-Touch could use their $250,000 computer for 100 minutes a month to pay bills, get tax data storage, set up personal reminder calandars and have mathematical computations done—all by telephone.

The computer had a recorded voice that could talk to its users, who included more than 500 persons, many of whom tried the computer for only a month at the rate of $6.50 per month.

The hitch was that in order to use the computer customers needed a touch-tone telephone, because the computer "understood" only touchtones.

"The need for a touch telephone was a definite barrier," Gelzer said. "The phones cost $1.50 extra per month plus an initial installation charge, and only 20 per cent of the local households now have one."

Of the 400 customers who started out with In-Touch at least 300 stayed all the way through. Those 300 customers will get free computer time until the computer shuts down Dec. 29, because of the inconvenience associated with shutting down the service.

There were inconveniences that customers complained about while the service was still in full swing, including lack of weekend computer time, difficulty in talking to the computer properly, too small a pool of merchants to whom bills could be paid by phone and too high a service price," Gelzer said.

To operate the computer, users had to enter and erase data following certain procedures explained in a users handbook.

"While it was relatively simple, it was nonetheless too complicated for many people," Gelzer said.

The most popular aspect of the service was its ability to pay bills, saving customers the trouble of licking envelopes. Ironically, In-Touch paid the accumulated bills by mail.

TO REACH THE UNREACHABLE STAR

Don Quixote rises to the majestic height of 27 feet and to the awe of Karen and Inger Sorensen of Corte Madera and David Budworth of Santa Rosa. Carpenter and housebuilder Dennis Patton of Lucas Valley — repeating a similar exploit of about five years ago when he startled Highway 101 motorists with a giant Trojan Horse — built the impossible dreamer just south of the Greenbrae interchange, using found lumber and pieces of driftwood from nearby Corte Madera Creek. His hero wears armor fashioned of tops and bottoms of tin cans. Patton said the statue is his tribute to Marin which "constantly dreams the impossible dream and constantly improves."

Matthews Candidate For Tiburon Council

Harry S. Matthews, Tiburon planning commissioner, has filed for candidacy in the March 5 city council election.

Matthews is the second to file in Tiburon, along with former parks and recreation commissioner George Ellman. However, planning commissioner E. Bruce Ross has announced he will run.

Three seats are open in Tiburon, including those of Mayor Branwell D. Fanning and Councilmen Albert H. Sennett and M. Carlisle Becker. Both Becker and Fanning have said they will not run.

Matthews, 41, is a vice president of the Bank of California in San Francisco. He was appointed to the planning commission in July 1972. He also has served on the city's board of adjustments.

He said he is concerned about possible downtown development in Tiburon and what it might do to the city's property tax rate.

He said he favors following the city's adopted downtown plan but thinks that changes may have to be made in the Sequoia Pacific firm's development proposal, which is modeled after that plan.

"We have to wait for the environmental impact report and citizen reaction and then there may have to be sizeable modifications. We may have to eliminate the inn-conference center, for example, or make changes in the harbor plans."

Matthews also said he was not sure if he favored using a redevelopment project to help finance downtown development. "We have to get more facts on that proposal too," he said.

A native of Pittsburgh, Matthews has lived in California for 11 years and in Tiburon for eight. He, his wife and three children reside at 20 Spring Lane.

He is a past director of the Little Reed Heights Property Owners Association and the Rolling Hills Property Owners Association. He has managed a Tiburon Little League team and is a past treasurer of the Tiburon Peninsula Club.

He is a graduate of Colgate University.

W. DANIEL O'CONNOR

Sausalito Seat Sought By O'Connor

W. Daniel O'Connor, an engineering executive, filed this morning to compete for two open seats on the Sausalito City Council in the March 5 election.

"I recognize the need to protect the residential integrity of Sausalito and I favor practical growth limitations," said O'Connor, 39.

A member of the Citizens Open Space Committee that developed the open space element for the city general plan, O'Connor said he was an "outspoken advocate" of including waterfront lands for preservation.

He said he favors some residential development of waterfront property, rather than commercial, which would add to an already congested city. "Above all else we must preserve our environment," he said.

O'Connor made an unsuccessful bid for the city council in 1972. He is the director for the Northern California district of a Portland-based firm that imports Swedish-built power equipment. He also owns and operates an antique and home furnishings shop in downtown Sausalito.

A resident of the city for 10 years, O'Connor is president of the Sausalito Foundation and is an organizer of volunteer workers for Earl F. Dunphy Park. "I have been doing something active on the waterfront, rather than just sitting back and simply opposing development," he said of his park work.

O'Connor and his wife, Nadine, live at 30 El Portal. The couple has no children.

More than 74 per cent of the Washington state population is in the 25 largest cities and towns, according to the Washington State Office of Program Planning.

Reds Blame Israel For Hijacking

MOSCOW (UPI) — The weekly Literaturnya Gazeta suggested today that Israel was behind the recent attack on two planes at Rome's Leonardo da Vinci airport that took 33 lives,

The newspaper quoted Communist and left-wing newspapers in other countries which have speculated that Israel may have been behind the attack. It did not mention that the attack was carried out by Palestinian Arabs.

"As for those who organized and inspired the crime, many commentators look in the direction of Tel Aviv," Literaturnya Gazeta said.

It said the raid apparently was organized "by certain intelligence services supported by the forces of reaction."

These forces, it said, wanted to torpedo the Middle East peace conference in Geneva and to provoke a new aggression against the Arabs.

"Only to these forces would the tragedy...be profitable," the newspaper said.

Dollar Gain Reported In Europe

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The dollar moved up today on the Paris and Brussels money markets, the only major currency trading markets in Europe open today after the Christmas holiday.

In Brussels, the official market dollar closed at 40.9675 francs, 1.57 per cent above the central rate, and 0.59 per cent better than Friday's quotation of 40.73 francs.

On the free market, the dollar hit 41.20 francs, 2.15 per cent above the central rate. It equaled its opening price last Feb. 14, when the markets reopened after the latest dollar devaluation.

In Paris, the official commercial dollar closed at 4.7225 francs, up from 4.6250 to 4.6500 francs Friday.

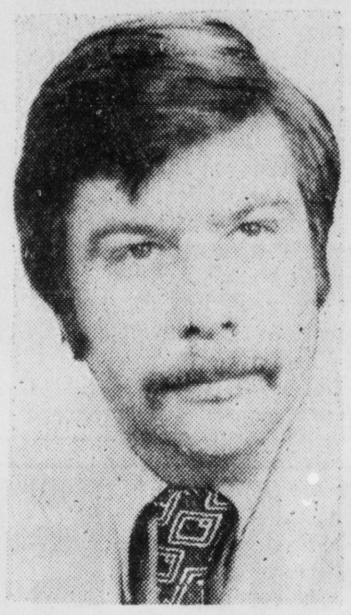
Fairfax Park Director To Make Council Race



RANDALL L. GARRISON
Seeks Fairfax seat

Fairfax Parks and Recreation Commissioner Randall L. Garrison has announced he will seek a seat on the town council in the March 5 election.

The terms of councilmen Frank J. Egger, Lee Nelder and Robert R. Souza expire. Egger and Nelder have announced they will seek reelection.

The 33-year-old Garrison was defeated in a bid for a council seat last year, when he polled 306 ballots. He was appointed to the parks and recreation commission following the 1972 council election.

Garrison, Northern California manager for a San Francisco steel firm, said he is running to pump new life into the council. "I feel that the commissions and the town council have been too passive in the past," he said. "The council should take a more active role in the management of the town."

He said he supports more community involvement in town affairs, and urged expansion of the town design review board from three to five members.

He said he supports "planned development within the framework of the county general plan," but opposes a complete moratorium on growth in Fairfax.

He said he opposes a plan for 80 units on the Buon Gusto property off Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, calling the project "much too dense".

He said he opposes widening Sir Francis Drake and Center boulevards, and said that a committee of Fairfax and San Anselmo officials should be appointed to study improvement of the thoroughfares.

He declined comment on higher pay for police personnel, saying he wanted to learn more about the matter before forming an opinion.

He pledged to make public all campaign contributors, contributions and expenses.

Garrison is a member of the town general plan citizens committee, and has been active in local Little League activities.

He lives at 35 Canyon Road with his wife, Sharon. They have two sons.

Five Die In Holiday Crash

GREENVILLE, Pa. (UPI) — Five persons died Christmas Day when a car driven by a youth without a driver's license crashed into another auto on a rain-slickened highway.

The dead were identified as Stanley Kelley, 74, Cochranton, and his wife, Libby, 67, and three 18-year-old Greenville youths, Melvin Byler, Neill Troyer, and John Hostettler.

State Police said Hostettler, the driver of one of the autos, did not have an operator's license.

Hostettler and the other youths were traveling southbound at a high rate of speed when their car skidded on the wet pavement and slammed broadside into the oncoming Kelley vehicle, State Police said.

A Would-Be Robber Makes A Small Dent

SAN BERNARDINO (UPI) — The Christmas tale began yesterday when a bandit entered a bar, waved a pistol and demanded money. One of the patrons, annoyed at the interruption of their Christmas party, hurled a shot glass at the would-be robber. The bandit fired a shot, but didn't hit anyone.

The drinkers charged off their stools. The gunman fired one warning shot, turned and fled, with a pack of about six men on his heels. The bartender telephoned police and officers caught up with the chase and arrested David Rey, 29, on a charge of attempted robbery.

The crowd from the bar returned to their Christmas drinking.

Gas A Problem For Holiday Travel

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

One airport was described as "a cemetery at midnight—dead," yesterday but the gasoline shortage apparently wasn't enough to deter Christmas Day visiting and travel by automobile.

While airlines, bus lines and railroads reported little business, state and local police around the country said many motorists were stranded on highways unable to buy gasoline.

In North Carolina, the highway patrol said some persons had to sleep in their autos or check into motels Christmas Eve because no gas stations or wrecker companies were open.

Massachusetts Turnpike Police said at least 40 drivers were stranded yesterday. Stations on the turnpike stayed open 24 hours, but the supply was limited, however—$2 worth of gasoline per customer.

"We've been flooded with a thousand calls (about where to buy gasoline)," a Massachusetts State Police spokesman said. "But it's just not worth it for most of them to go get the gas (on the turnpike) since the limit is $2."

Traffic was reported very light in Florida, Pennsylvania, Ohio and New Jersey—"perhaps because all the people are staying home for the holiday," according to a New Jersey state trooper.

"Everyone is happy today because this is Christmas," the trooper said. "On other days, we may have a couple of fist fights."

All the service stations on the New Jersey Turnpike and Garden State Parkway were open, but gasoline sales were limited to from $2 to $3 per customer.

In Illinois, where only about 2 per cent of the state's gas stations were open, an Illinois Gas Dealears Association hotline was deluged with calls from drivers asking where they could buy gasoilne.

The Georgia Highway Patrol said motorists who ran out of gasoline were driven around in patrol cars until an open service station could be found.

When there was an open service station selling gasoline, like in Brooklyn, N.Y., Christmas night, irate customers who brought their complaints to a nearby police station said they paid up to 99 cents a gallon.

An attendant at the station told a reporter he could not say anything over the telephone and hung up. But police at a stationhouse less than a block away said they were referring complaints to federal authorities.

Earlier yesterday, the acting chief of operations for the Federal Energy Office in New York burst out laughing when he was told that another station in Brooklyn was selling gasoline for 79.9 cents a gallon Christmas morning.

"Is some guy really selling it for that?" asked Arnold Gordon.

Asked whether that price was illegal, Gordon said, "Yes, I would think so," and promised to notify his boss at the Internal Revenue Service about the incident.

Communist Education Plan Flayed

WARSAW (UPI) — Polish Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski in a Christmas Eve sermon criticized the Communist government's proposed educational reform as "the greatest threat ...in the past 25 years" to Poland's Roman Catholic church, according to reports reaching western newsmen today.

The Cardinal told a group of clergymen in Warsaw the threat had been turned back "at least formally," but that it had not been eliminated, the reports said.

His sermon was one of the sharpest attacks to date on the planned reform, which church officials maintain is designed to reduce the influence of religion in this predominantly Roman Catholic nation.

The changes now scheduled to begin in 1975, will consolidate many rural schools and require children to spend more time in the classroom than under the present system.

"We don't want such education in Poland," Cardinal Wyszynski said in his sermon.

Church sources said recently the government had yielded to pressure from Polish bishops and agreed to delay implementation of the reforms, which were first proposed early this year and were to have gone into effect immediately. The Cardinal referred to this in his sermon.

Storms Pelt Many Parts Of U.S.

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Heavy thunderstorms produced flooding in the central Gulf Coast states today and a tornado watch was in effect during the early hours for parts of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana.

A flash flood watch was in effect in Mississippi, East Tennessee and Western North Carolina.

In Mississippi, an estimated 100 families were forced from their homes on Christmas by flash floods.

More than 60 families were driven from their homes and apartments in the Hamilton Heights area south of Vicksburg, Miss., Christmas Eve, but most began moving back home Christmas night. A flash flood in Laurel, Miss., Christmas morning routed about 30 families from their homes, but they also were able to move back later in the day. Some evacuations also were reported in low areas of Columbus, Miss.

Meridian, Miss., received another inch and one third of rain yesterday evening for a total of eight inches for Christmas day, the National Weather Service said.

Lighter rain extended northeastward today through the upper Ohio Valley and northern Atlantic Coast states.

Valparaiso, Fla., and Dothan, Ala., both measured between two and three inches of rain early today in a six-hour period.

The wet weather system yesterday also dampened the Christmas spirit in other parts of the country.

Freezing rain coated highways in the northern part of lower Michigan and parts of the state's Upper Peninsula, causing scores of minor traffic accidents. Fog reduced visibility to less than one-quarter of a mile at Chicago's O-Hare International Airport, delaying arrivals and departures.

Heavy fog in parts of Illinois, Iowa, southern Minnesota and Wisconsin hampered travel as visibility was near zero.

Elsewhere early today, an ice jam on the upper Hudson River caused some flooding, and dense fog covered New York City.

Light snow fell on the northeastern and west central Plains. Laramie, Wyo., received two inches of snow Christmas night and had seven inches of new snow on the ground early today. Winds gusted to 47 miles per hour at Rapid City, S.D.

Temperatures early today ranged from 8 degrees at Evanston, Wyo., to 74 at Miami, Fla.

Two High Tides Are Forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronomical conditions will cause abnormally high tides on two dates in early 1974 and serious flooding could strike the U.S. East Coast should severe Atlantic storms occur, weather forecasters say.

On Jan. 8 and Feb. 7, the forecasters said yesterday, the moon will be in ts fullest phase, thus causing high tides. It also will be unusually close to the mid-Atlantic coast.

In addition, the moon and sun, whose gravitational pull also influences the tides, will be in a relatively rare alignment and the earth also will be near its closest annual approach to the sun.

In Mississippi, an estimated 100 families were forced from their homes on Christmas by flash floods.

More than 60 families were driven from their homes and apartments in the Hamilton Heights area south of Vicksburg, Miss., Christmas Eve, but most began moving back home Christmas night. A flash flood in Laurel, Miss., Christmas morning routed about 30 families from their homes, but they also were able to move back later in the day. Some evacuations also were reported in low areas of Columbus, Miss.

Meridian, Miss., received another inch and one third of rain yesterday evening for a total of eight inches for Christmas day, the National Weather Service said.

Lighter rain extended northeastward today through the upper Ohio Valley and northern Atlantic Coast states.

Valparaiso, Fla., and Dothan, Ala., both measured between two and three inches of rain early today in a six-hour period.

The wet weather system yesterday also dampened the Christmas spirit in other parts of the country.

Freezing rain coated highways in the northern part of lower Michigan and parts of the state's Upper Peninsula, causing scores of minor traffic accidents. Fog reduced visibility to less than one-quarter of a mile at Chicago's O-Hare International Airport, delaying arrivals and departures.

Heavy fog in parts of Illinois, Iowa, southern Minnesota and Wisconsin hampered travel as visibility was near zero.

Elsewhere early today, an ice jam on the upper Hudson River caused some flooding, and dense fog covered New York City.

Light snow fell on the northeastern and west central Plains. Laramie, Wyo., received two inches of snow Christmas night and had seven inches of new snow on the ground early today. Winds gusted to 47 miles per hour at Rapid City, S.D.

Temperatures early today ranged from 8 degrees at Evanston, Wyo., to 74 at Miami, Fla.

Two High Tides Are Forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronomical conditions will cause abnormally high tides on two dates in early 1974 and serious flooding could strike the U.S. East Coast should severe Atlantic storms occur, weather forecasters say.

On Jan. 8 and Feb. 7, the forecasters said yesterday, the moon will be in ts fullest phase, thus causing high tides. It also will be unusually close to the mid-Atlantic coast.

In addition, the moon and sun, whose gravitational pull also influences the tides, will be in a relatively rare alignment and the earth also will be near its closest annual approach to the sun.

LIGHTS UP THE SKY

The Blue Falls Inn, an historic restaurant in Reading, Pa., burned to the ground in a spectacular blaze last night. Only the stone walls of the former grist mill were left standing. Cause of the blaze has not been determined. (UPI Telephoto)

White House Protesters Are Nabbed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Six demonstrators were arrested in front of the White House yesterday in what Rev. Phillip Berrigan called "our way of celebrating Christmas."

Two protesters were arrested for vaulting the black iron fence around the White House and walking toward the mansion where the President and his wife were having Christmas dinner. Four others who chained themselves to the fence were arrested and charged with disorderly conduct.

They were among 37 protesters who staged a medieval morality play in front of the White House likening President Nixon to King Herod, who according to Biblical history slaughtered infants in Palestine and forced the baby Jesus and the Holy Family to flee to Egypt.

A sack of mutilated and bloody baby dolls was tossed over the fence as part of the protest.

Jackets Airlifted To Indian Colony

SAN MATEO (AP) — Wool tunics discarded by the police department in favor of more fashionable Eisenhower jackets were airlifted today to the impoverished Bridgeport Indian colony as a late Christmas gift.

"We heard they lose 20 per cent of their number each winter, and we wanted to do something to help," explained San Mateo Police Sgt. Eamon Ryan.

The small band of Indians eke out a living in the picturesque mountains of Mono County. Because they are not a tribe officially recognized by the Bureau of Indian Affairs, they are ineligible for a reservation or other Indian benefits, federal officials have said.

The colony lives in unheated aluminum, clapboard and tar paper shacks on private land where the owner has threatened eviction.

The packages containing about 30 tunics and other warm clothing were sent on a routine training flight from Moffett Field in Mountain View to Fallon Field in Nevada. The Nevada Highway Patrol offered to relay the clothes to Bridgeport.

San Mateo Police officer Ed Smith said the uniform switchover took place about a year and a half ago, and the force has been trying to find a good use for the old tunics since.

"We hope these winter clothes will be a start," said Smith. "Then we'll see what else we can do to help."

Gun Hurts Man In Rohnert Park

A Rohnert Park man was recovering today from a painful holiday.

Howard Joseph Whitcomb of 233 Alma Drive was at home yesterday afternoon showing a friend how to unload a .45 caliber automatic pistol, according to Petaluma police reports. The gun discharged accidentally, hitting Whitcomb in the left thigh.

Whitcomb was in satisfactory condition today at Hillcrest Hospital in Petaluma.

Reindeer Seen As Food Source

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The reindeer, apart from its annual chores during the Christmas season, is suited to a variety of other uses and may become a prime source of food in some parts of the world, says a scientist who has studied the creatures.

"We're looking at the reindeer as a prime source of meat for the northern regions of the world. In fact, our studies prove they are ideal range animals, even in temperate climates such as the southern parts of the United States," said Dr. Mohamed K. Yousef, a research physiologist at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas.

Yousef was part of a six-member team assembled by the International Biological Program to investigate the reindeer as a possible solution to the food shortage in some parts of the world. The researchers recently spent a month on the north slope of Alaska studying the nutritional requirements, behavior and energy production of reindeer.

"We were collecting data on range management, much the same type of information that farmers must know about dairy and beef cattle: how many can be herded per acre, what they must eat and drink," he said in an interview.

"It is really a remarkable animal to survive in all that cold and snow," Yousef said.

"Using what we call peripheral heterothermy, the reindeer maintains its body temperature of about 99 degrees by cutting off the flow of blood to its legs, which drop all the way down to around zero degrees."

Yousef said that although the Soviet Union has done a great deal of research into reindeer, Western scientists know little about the animal.

Jail Inmates In San Jose On Hunger Strike Over Food

SAN JOSE (AP) — Inmates at the Santa Clara County Jail staged a hunger strike today to press demands for better food, cleaner underwear and more religious services, authorities said.

Undersheriff Tom Rosa said the hunger strike by 214 of the 384 inmates began at midnight after a prisoner handed a guard a list of 27 demands.

The demands covered the range of prison conditions from food to discipline, Rosa said.

The inmates demanded an end to unspecified "Gestapo-like tactics," removal of specific officers from duty, an end to periodic security sweeps by guards and an end to the removal of bedding as punishment.

The demands also included religious services for maximum security prisoners, visits from friends and family rather than contact only through a pane of security glass and more frequent changes of undergarments.

He said food was central to the demands, including more warm food, larger amounts, more lunch menu variation, more fruit juices and better eating conditions for maximum security prisoners.

Ruchell Magee, awaiting trial in the abortive 1971 Marin County Hall of Justice shoot-out that left four dead, is being held at the jail. Rosa said he did not know if Magee was participating in the strike.

White House Protesters Are Nabbed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Six demonstrators were arrested in front of the White House yesterday in what Rev. Phillip Berrigan called "our way of celebrating Christmas."

Two protesters were arrested for vaulting the black iron fence around the White House and walking toward the mansion where the President and his wife were having Christmas dinner. Four others who chained themselves to the fence were arrested and charged with disorderly conduct.

They were among 37 protesters who staged a medieval morality play in front of the White House likening President Nixon to King Herod, who according to Biblical history slaughtered infants in Palestine and forced the baby Jesus and the Holy Family to flee to Egypt.

A sack of mutilated and bloody baby dolls was tossed over the fence as part of the protest.

Jackets Airlifted To Indian Colony

SAN MATEO (AP) — Wool tunics discarded by the police department in favor of more fashionable Eisenhower jackets were airlifted today to the impoverished Bridgeport Indian colony as a late Christmas gift.

"We heard they lose 20 per cent of their number each winter, and we wanted to do something to help," explained San Mateo Police Sgt. Eamon Ryan.

The small band of Indians eke out a living in the picturesque mountains of Mono County. Because they are not a tribe officially recognized by the Bureau of Indian Affairs, they are ineligible for a reservation or other Indian benefits, federal officials have said.

The colony lives in unheated aluminum, clapboard and tar paper shacks on private land where the owner has threatened eviction.

The packages containing about 30 tunics and other warm clothing were sent on a routine training flight from Moffett Field in Mountain View to Fallon Field in Nevada. The Nevada Highway Patrol offered to relay the clothes to Bridgeport.

San Mateo Police officer Ed Smith said the uniform switchover took place about a year and a half ago, and the force has been trying to find a good use for the old tunics since.

"We hope these winter clothes will be a start," said Smith. "Then we'll see what else we can do to help."

Reindeer Seen As Food Source

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The reindeer, apart from its annual chores during the Christmas season, is suited to a variety of other uses and may become a prime source of food in some parts of the world, says a scientist who has studied the creatures.

"We're looking at the reindeer as a prime source of meat for the northern regions of the world. In fact, our studies prove they are ideal range animals, even in temperate climates such as the southern parts of the United States," said Dr. Mohamed K. Yousef, a research physiologist at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas.

Yousef was part of a six-member team assembled by the International Biological Program to investigate the reindeer as a possible solution to the food shortage in some parts of the world. The researchers recently spent a month on the north slope of Alaska studying the nutritional requirements, behavior and energy production of reindeer.

"We were collecting data on range management, much the same type of information that farmers must know about dairy and beef cattle: how many can be herded per acre, what they must eat and drink," he said in an interview.

"It is really a remarkable animal to survive in all that cold and snow," Yousef said.

"Using what we call peripheral heterothermy, the reindeer maintains its body temperature of about 99 degrees by cutting off the flow of blood to its legs, which drop all the way down to around zero degrees."

Yousef said that although the Soviet Union has done a great deal of research into reindeer, Western scientists know little about the animal.

Jail Inmates In San Jose On Hunger Strike Over Food

SAN JOSE (AP) — Inmates at the Santa Clara County Jail staged a hunger strike today to press demands for better food, cleaner underwear and more religious services, authorities said.

Undersheriff Tom Rosa said the hunger strike by 214 of the 384 inmates began at midnight after a prisoner handed a guard a list of 27 demands.

The demands covered the range of prison conditions from food to discipline, Rosa said.

The inmates demanded an end to unspecified "Gestapo-like tactics," removal of specific officers from duty, an end to periodic security sweeps by guards and an end to the removal of bedding as punishment.

The demands also included religious services for maximum security prisoners, visits from friends and family rather than contact only through a pane of security glass and more frequent changes of undergarments.

He said food was central to the demands, including more warm food, larger amounts, more lunch menu variation, more fruit juices and better eating conditions for maximum security prisoners.

Ruchell Magee, awaiting trial in the abortive 1971 Marin County Hall of Justice shoot-out that left four dead, is being held at the jail. Rosa said he did not know if Magee was participating in the strike.

Gurney To Continue Watergate Job

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward J. Gurney's administrative assistant acknowledged today the Florida Republican has missed the last eight public sessions of the Senate Watergate Committee but has no intention of resigning from the panel.

"We don't have much comment on that story," Jim Allison Jr. told a reporter about a Washington Post report that Gurney has ceased to be an active member of the committee.

Gurney was regarded as one of President Nixon's most loyal supporters on the select seven-member committee.

Allison said Gurney does not plan to resign and has remained in touch with the Watergate activities and investigations through his staff representative on the committee. Allison said although Gurney has missed public sessions, "he has made it to some of the executive committee sessions."

Allison said Gurney missed many of the Watergate meetings because of conflicting meetings of the Senate Judiciary Committee, of which he is a member. Judiciary was involved in confirmation hearings of William O. Saxbe as attorney general.

Allison denied Gurney's Watergate absences reflected the senator's political situation in Florida.

The eight public sessions occurred between Oct. 31 and Nov. 15, about the time Gurney acknowledged the Justice Department was investigating allegations of a secret political fund. The fund was allegedly established for Gurney by Florida builders in exchange for expected preferential treatment from the Federal Housing Administration.

"I don't think that's really had anything to do with it," Allison said when asked about the investigation's possible impact on Gurney's Watergate attendance record. "We don't consider this as a deliberate attempt to avoid the committee."

Key Member Of House GOP To Quit In 1975

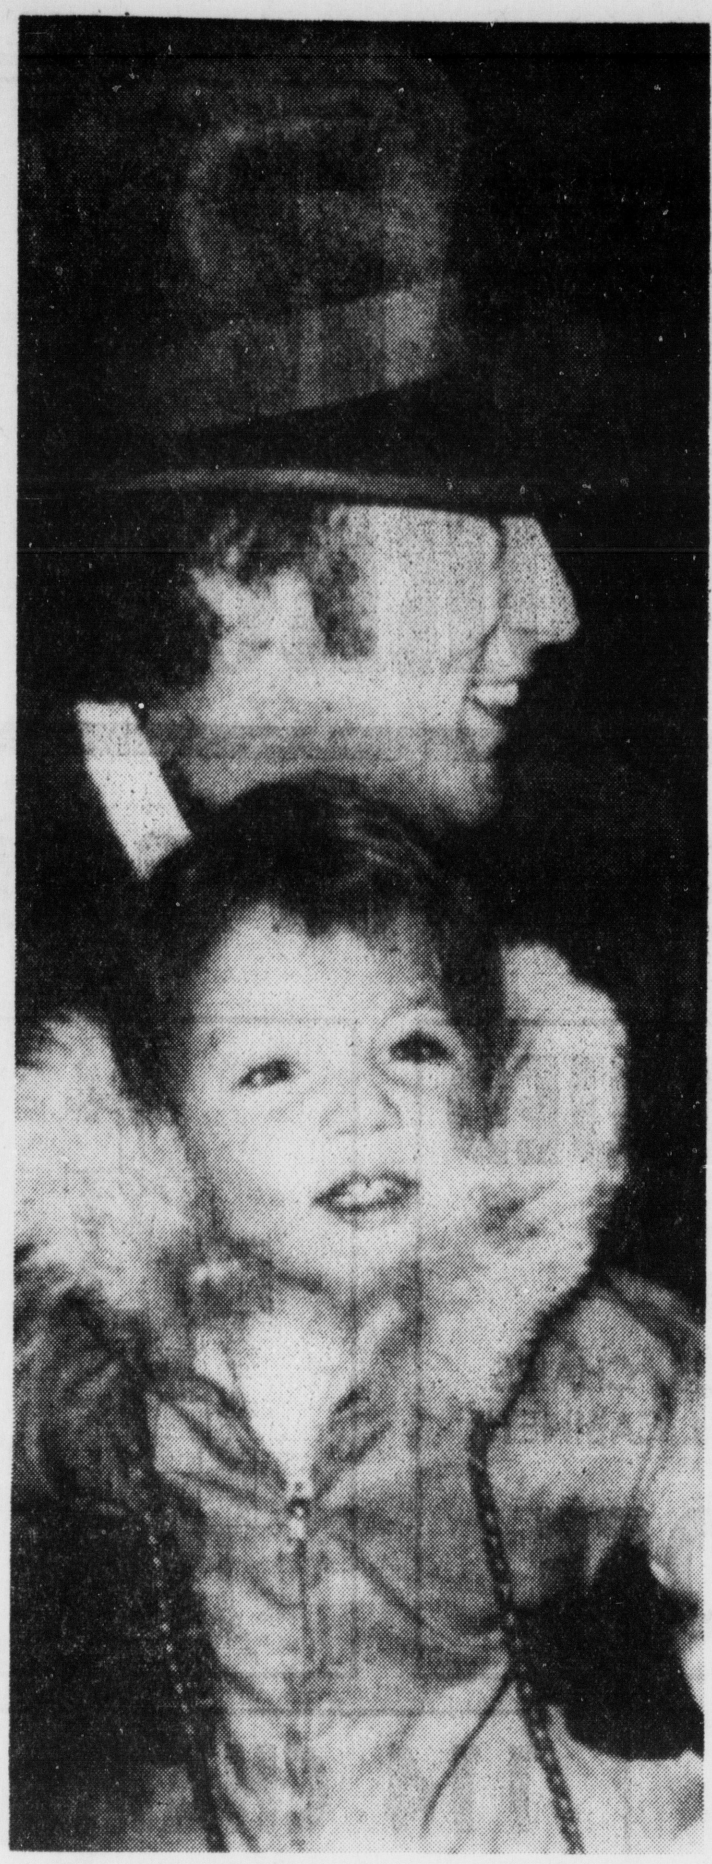
KEARNEY, Neb. (UPI) — Rep. Dave Martin, R-Neb., the ranking Republican on the House Rules Committee, yesterday said he will step down at the end of his seventh two-year term in January of 1975.

The 66-year-old congressman told the Omaha World-Herald in an interview that he decided to retire about 10 days ago. He said his decision was based on personal and family reasons and the Watergate scandals had nothing to do with it.

He said he and his wife "have looked forward to taking it easier with more time to devote to our children and grandchildren. I also want more time to read, to travel and to just loaf—if I feel like it."

Sadat's Birthday

CAIRO (UPI) — Anwar Sadat observed his 55th birthday quietly yesterday at his village, Mit Abul Kom, in the Nile Delta.



A HOLIDAY PRESENT — Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, carrying his 2-year-old son, Justine, arrives at Ottawa's Civic Hospital to visit his wife and new born son, Sascha. The infant's birth yesterday marked the second Christmas Day birth for the Trudeaus. Justine was born on Christmas Day, 1971.

Another Holiday Baby For Trudeaus

OTTAWA (UPI) — Margaret Trudeau, the wife of Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, gave birth to the couple's second son yesterday. Their first child, now two years old, also was born Dec. 25.

Trudeau said he was not surprised at the second Christmas birth in the family. "We thought the 25th of December would be a good day."

No name has yet been chosen for the 7-pound, 9-ounce boy, but Trudeau said it might be Sasha.

The baby was born at 7:21 a.m. EST in Ottawa Civic Hospital, several hours after Mrs. Trudeau, 25, attended midnight Mass with her 54- year-old husband at the Mount Carmel Church.

A hospital spokesman said both mother and child were in excellent health.

Mrs. Trudeau entered the hospital Dec. 10 with false labor pains that lasted 10 hours. Trudeau spent most of that day in the House of Commons awaiting the outcome of a noconfidence motion which almost defeated his minority government.

The auburn-haired Mrs. Trudeau reportedly had been suffering false labor pains for two weeks, but because the birth aroused so much interest, she decided to stay at home until the last moment.

Her social activities were confined to taking the 2-year-old boy, Justin, to a Christmas party for members of Parliament.

Trudeau arrived at the hospital to visit his wife shortly after 4 p.m. He was accompanied by son Justin, his mother-in-law, Mrs. Kathleen Sinclair, and a sister-in-law. He passed out monogramed cigars and said, "I'm happy it's a boy, but we're going to keep on trying."

The prime minister and the former Margaret Sinclair of Vancouver, B.C., were married March 5, 1971, at a secret wedding in Vancouver following a three-year courtship.

Lights Are Out In Japan's Ginza

TOKYO (UPI) — Merchants in Tokyo's famous Ginza shopping district turned on all their neon signs and all their store lights the night of Oct. 11 while 44 radiant floats passed by in the Ginza Festival parade.

Today the lights of luxury-loving Ginza are out —the first casualties in a frantic program to save electricity because of the Arab oil embargo.

Japan's prospects for 1974 are just as gloomy as Ginza's streets at night. The New Year may be her most difficult and turbulent since the bleak days just after World War II.

The oil embargo is only part of the trouble facing the Japanese, whose history from 1945 to 1973 was encapsuled in two words -"economic miracle."

Rising from the ashes of their bombed out cities, the Japanese built up the world's third largest industrial economy after the United States and the Soviet Union. Japanese reveled in Asia's highest standard of living.

That "economic miracle" was built on a foundation of cheap raw materials. Japan was short of natural resources, but other people had them in plenty.

"The world will be our supermarket," boasted Japan's industrial tycoons. Japan sucked in torrents of Australian iron ore, American coal, Arabian oil. She turned them into ships, autommobiles, panty hose, television sets and industrial machines, and sold them all over the world.

Japanese called it the "bicycle economy." Japanese companies ran on shoestring capital, and had to keep moving ahead to keep from falling over.

Now the raw materials "supermarkets" has high prices and a lot of empty shelves. Crude oil, scrap iron, aluminum and coal may never be plentiful or cheap again. The foundations of Japan's economic miracle are disappearing like the morning dew.

The the Japanese people, the readjustment will be painful.

Heading into the New Year, Japan's younger generation for the first time in their lives saw the country's economy going down instead of up. From Minister of International Trade and Industry Yasuhiro Nakasone the public learned a depressing new catch phrase — "negative economic growth."

That meant slumping production, and shortages of goods in the stores.

Inflation ravaged the country, melting the people's savings. The cost of living in Tokyo by the end of the year had risen at least 15 per cent.

The yen, one of the world's most sought after currencies in early 1973, retreated in value under waves of selling on the Tokyo foreign-exchange market. Speculators scented Japan's newly revealed economic weakness, and rushed to get back into Yankee dollars.

A country that took pride in its people's traits of discipline and cooperation seethed with ugly stories of hoarding and panic buying of everything from stove oil to toilet paper.

Businessmen could hardly rent space in warehouses. These were crammed with consumer goods and raw materials snapped up by Japan's canny wholesalers in anticipation of fat profits as shortages overtake the country.

"Our weaknesses were always there," said one of the dozens of the Japanese business community. "They just weren't apparent."

Predictions by certain American economic think tanks that Japan would be the powerhouse of the Pacific in the 1980s, and surpass the American standard of living later on, looked hollow.

"Anybody could sit down and project those curves upward when we were doing well," says Ryosuke Kashiwagi, Japan's former Vice-Minister of Finance, and now a private banker. "But there wasn't any sign it (the reversal) was going to happen."

The man on whom the blow fell hardest was gruff, likeable Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka. He rode into office in 1972 on a wave of popularity. Polls showed 60 per cent of the Japanese people supported his policies of friendship with China, and dispersing Japan's congested cities.

Now he has become a Japanese Herbert Hoover. Like the 1928-1932 American President, Tanaka stepped into the driver's cab just in time to see prosperity come crashing down around him. Recent polls have shown his support at less than 25 per cent. His rivals in Japan's ruling liberal Democratic Party (LDP) are trying to bring him down, and he gets little sympathy from the public.

The LDP itself is in deep trouble, and that is a serious thing for the United States. The party has ruled Japan without a break since the country got back its independence in 1952. It is the only one of Japan's five political parties that favors close cooperation with America in Foreign affairs. The other four want to take Japan into Swedish-style neutralism.

Plagued by inflation, housing shortages and pollution, Japan's long suffering urban voters are rapidly dumping LDP, and voting in droves for Communist and Socialist Party candidates in local elections. Japan enters the new year with her six largest cities under the rule of opposition mayors elected with leftist support.

In 1974, LDP may for the first time lose control of one of the two houses in the Japanese Parliament.

LDP's majority in the House of Councillors, the upper house of the Japanese Diet (Parliament) — has shrunk to eight seats. In an election next June, opposition parties have a good chance of winning a combination majority for the first time in history.

Even with LDP still in control of the other house, the possibilities for political chaos then would be enormous.

It wasn't intended that way, but the brilliantly lighted Ginza festival last October may have been the last hurrah for an era of prosperity and stability now drawing to a close for Japan.

Newsprint Shortage Has Eased For Some

NEW YORK (AP) — The severe newsprint shortages of a few months ago appear to have eased, but industry executives and publishing officials say many newspapers across the country face continuing supply problems.

The picture is reported to have improved noticeably since the settlement of some three-month strikes permitted resumption of full-scale operations at Canadian newsprint mills, where U.S. papers get more than 70 per cent of their newsprint.

But Nicholas Nocella of the American Newspaper Publishers Association's newsprint division said a sizable number of papers still were having to conserve on the paper product through such measures as omitting Saturday editions or restricting their use of special features and columns.

For the months ahead, experts say, the supply depends largely on what happens to the U.S. economy. If there is a sharp downturn in business activity in 1974 with an accompanying drop in advertising, "newsprint will be coming out of your ears," said a spokesman for the Newsprint Information Committee, which represents Canadian mills.

However if the economy doesn't cool, widespread shortages of newsprint may recur because of increased demand and the time lag in getting planned new production facilities built.

Production of Canadian newsprint is early back to pre-strike levels, the Canadian Pulp and Paper Institute said.

The institute said shipments of Canadian newsprint are nearly back to spring levels. And a spokesman for the American Paper Institute said publishers' inventories, depleted because of mill strikes, have begun to increase again.

"Nobody is going out of business, but the situation is still tight," said Theodore Serrill, executive director of the National Newsprint Association, which represents nearly 7,000 papers. The group said in the past few weeks it had received only one or two calls from papers seeking newsprint.

Experts say the supply situation has improved particularly in the West, while papers in the northeast are getting enough to publish but not enough to build up inventories.

Oil supply questions are bothering the industry, particularly those papers dependent on American mills. Great Northern's mill in Maine, for example, is threatened with a cut-off of oil from its Canadian supplier.

Court Agrees Sentence Too Harsh For Crime

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — It is "unusual punishment to give a person more time in prison for a lesser crime than he would have received for a greater one, the California Supreme Court ruled Monday.

However, the lesser count carries a maximum penalty of life imprisonment, while the most that can be given for assault with a deadly weapon with intent to commit murder is 14 years.

Schueren appealed and the Supreme Court agreed with him, modifying his sentence so his term will not exceed 14 years.

"It would seem indisputable that an accused is normally not subject to an increased maximum prison term as a consequence of . . . exercising his constitutional rights and successfully defending against the crime charged," the court said.

The court said the decision should not handicap law enforcement because suspects could be charged with separate counts instead of charging only the greater offense.

Lights Are Out In Japan's Ginza

TOKYO (UPI) — Merchants in Tokyo's famous Ginza shopping district turned on all their neon signs and all their store lights the night of Oct. 11 while 44 radiant floats passed by in the Ginza Festival parade.

Today the lights of luxury-loving Ginza are out —the first casualties in a frantic program to save electricity because of the Arab oil embargo.

Japan's prospects for 1974 are just as gloomy as Ginza's streets at night. The New Year may be her most difficult and turbulent since the bleak days just after World War II.

The oil embargo is only part of the trouble facing the Japanese, whose history from 1945 to 1973 was encapsuled in two words -"economic miracle."

Rising from the ashes of their bombed out cities, the Japanese built up the world's third largest industrial economy after the United States and the Soviet Union. Japanese reveled in Asia's highest standard of living.

That "economic miracle" was built on a foundation of cheap raw materials. Japan was short of natural resources, but other people had them in plenty.

"The world will be our supermarket," boasted Japan's industrial tycoons. Japan sucked in torrents of Australian iron ore, American coal, Arabian oil. She turned them into ships, autommobiles, panty hose, television sets and industrial machines, and sold them all over the world.

Japanese called it the "bicycle economy." Japanese companies ran on shoestring capital, and had to keep moving ahead to keep from falling over.

Now the raw materials "supermarkets" has high prices and a lot of empty shelves. Crude oil, scrap iron, aluminum and coal may never be plentiful or cheap again. The foundations of Japan's economic miracle are disappearing like the morning dew.

The the Japanese people, the readjustment will be painful.

Heading into the New Year, Japan's younger generation for the first time in their lives saw the country's economy going down instead of up. From Minister of International Trade and Industry Yasuhiro Nakasone the public learned a depressing new catch phrase — "negative economic growth."

That meant slumping production, and shortages of goods in the stores.

Inflation ravaged the country, melting the people's savings. The cost of living in Tokyo by the end of the year had risen at least 15 per cent.

The yen, one of the world's most sought after currencies in early 1973, retreated in value under waves of selling on the Tokyo foreign-exchange market. Speculators scented Japan's newly revealed economic weakness, and rushed to get back into Yankee dollars.

A country that took pride in its people's traits of discipline and cooperation seethed with ugly stories of hoarding and panic buying of everything from stove oil to toilet paper.

Businessmen could hardly rent space in warehouses. These were crammed with consumer goods and raw materials snapped up by Japan's canny wholesalers in anticipation of fat profits as shortages overtake the country.

"Our weaknesses were always there," said one of the dozens of the Japanese business community. "They just weren't apparent."

Predictions by certain American economic think tanks that Japan would be the powerhouse of the Pacific in the 1980s, and surpass the American standard of living later on, looked hollow.

"Anybody could sit down and project those curves upward when we were doing well," says Ryosuke Kashiwagi, Japan's former Vice-Minister of Finance, and now a private banker. "But there wasn't any sign it (the reversal) was going to happen."

The man on whom the blow fell hardest was gruff, likeable Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka. He rode into office in 1972 on a wave of popularity. Polls showed 60 per cent of the Japanese people supported his policies of friendship with China, and dispersing Japan's congested cities.

Now he has become a Japanese Herbert Hoover. Like the 1928-1932 American President, Tanaka stepped into the driver's cab just in time to see prosperity come crashing down around him. Recent polls have shown his support at less than 25 per cent. His rivals in Japan's ruling liberal Democratic Party (LDP) are trying to bring him down, and he gets little sympathy from the public.

The LDP itself is in deep trouble, and that is a serious thing for the United States. The party has ruled Japan without a break since the country got back its independence in 1952. It is the only one of Japan's five political parties that favors close cooperation with America in Foreign affairs. The other four want to take Japan into Swedish-style neutralism.

Plagued by inflation, housing shortages and pollution, Japan's long suffering urban voters are rapidly dumping LDP, and voting in droves for Communist and Socialist Party candidates in local elections. Japan enters the new year with her six largest cities under the rule of opposition mayors elected with leftist support.

In 1974, LDP may for the first time lose control of one of the two houses in the Japanese Parliament.

LDP's majority in the House of Councillors, the upper house of the Japanese Diet (Parliament) — has shrunk to eight seats. In an election next June, opposition parties have a good chance of winning a combination majority for the first time in history.

Even with LDP still in control of the other house, the possibilities for political chaos then would be enormous.

It wasn't intended that way, but the brilliantly lighted Ginza festival last October may have been the last hurrah for an era of prosperity and stability now drawing to a close for Japan.

SUN SHADOWED IN COLOMBIA

A complete annular eclipse of the sun was seen in Bogota, Colombia, Monday and three views of the event (from left) show the moon entering the sun's disc, the height of the eclipse, and the moon leaving the sun's disc. The eclipse was seen as a partial one over most of New England, but stimulated little interest among professional astronomers or the general public.

Sartain Is Candidate For Novato Council

Novato Mayor F. Wayne Sartain today said he will seek reelection to the city's council in municipal elections March 5.

Sartain, a supporter of Novato's general plan and its controlled growth rate, said he is seeking reelection because he wants to take part in planning Novato's future.

He said that people plan careers, vacations and families and through the same type of planning Novato can prevent a takeover by "urban sprawl."

He said he favors some commercial use for surplus lands at Hamilton Air Force Base and opposes use of the base as a commercial regional airport.

Sartain, 41, was elected to the council in 1970 and was named mayor in 1972. He was formerly a member of the Novato Planning Commission.

He helped found the San Marin Improvement Association and served as director, vice president and president of the group. He also helped found the North Marin Federation of Homeowners Associations.

He is a monotype supervisor for Mackenzie and Harris typographers in San Francisco.

F. WAYNE SARTAIN
Seeks reelection

Sartain lives at 160 Cabro Court with his wife, Bea. The couple has three children.

Terms of George C. Quesada and Sartain expire in March. Novato Planning Commissioner Gail Wilhelm is the only person who has filed for a council seat.

Lillian Sani Will Seek Rohnert Park Election

A former city official has filed for election to the Rohnert Park City Council.

Lillian E. (Laike) Sani, 51, filed Monday with the city clerk for one of the two seats open in the March 5 election.

"I am a candidate," she said, "because I think it is time for a change — a change from growth for growth's sake to a policy of strong growth control."

Mrs. Sani was Rohnert Park's first city clerk, holding the position for six years in the 1960s.

"We need a woman on the city council, we need a pioneer resident, we need an over-50 person, we need someone who stands for controlled growth and we need someone who understands the college community," she said. "I qualify on all five counts."

An account loan clerk at Sonoma State College, Mrs. Sani said she has lived in Sonoma County since 1945 and in Rohnert Park since 1961. She was also the first president of the Rohnert Park High School P-TA.

Mrs. Sani lives at 7683 Adrian Drive with her husband, Lawrence, and two children.

She is one of five candidates who have filed so far.

The Oregon Supreme Court reported that 83.6 per cent of the 445 law school graduates who took this year's state bar exam passed.

43 Killed Over Holidays

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Traffic accidents claimed 43 lives in California during the four-day Christmas holiday, the highway patrol said today.

It was the lowest toll for a four-day holiday since 1952, when 43 were killed.

The total for the three-day Christmas holiday in 1972 was 42, and for the four-day holiday in 1969 it was 50.

Trash Mountain Ski Run Dropped

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Michigan State University's proposal for a ski slope built from a mountain of trash is the latest victim of the nation's energy crisis and rampant inflation.

The slope, which was banking on paper to fill a good part of its 120-foot height, is no longer a reality, according to Mark Rosenhaft, director of Michigan State's Waste Control Authority.

Paper is just too expensive to throw away, Rosenhaft said. He said that a year ago used newsprint cost $6 per ton, but now it costs $38 per ton.

Michigan State is also heavily engaged in recycling paper, which is cheaper and uses less energy than creating new newsprint. The school recycles 30 tons of paper a week, making it one of the major paper recyclers in the nation.

SUN SHADOWED IN COLOMBIA

A complete annular eclipse of the sun was seen in Bogota, Colombia, Monday and three views of the event (from left) show the moon entering the sun's disc, the height of the eclipse, and the moon leaving the sun's disc. The eclipse was seen as a partial one over most of New England, but stimulated little interest among professional astronomers or the general public.

Sartain Is Candidate For Novato Council

Novato Mayor F. Wayne Sartain today said he will seek reelection to the city's council in municipal elections March 5.

F. WAYNE SARTAIN
Seeks reelection

Sartain, a supporter of Novato's general plan and its controlled growth rate, said he is seeking reelection because he wants to take part in planning Novato's future.

He said that people plan careers, vacations and families and through the same type of planning Novato can prevent a takeover by "urban sprawl."

He said he favors some commercial use for surplus lands at Hamilton Air Force Base and opposes use of the base as a commercial regional airport.

Sartain, 41, was elected to the council in 1970 and was named mayor in 1972. He was formerly a member of the Novato Planning Commission.

He helped found the San Marin Improvement Association and served as director, vice president and president of the group. He also helped found the North Marin Federation of Homeowners Associations.

He is a monotype supervisor for Mackenzie and Harris typographers in San Francisco.

Sartain lives at 160 Cabro Court with his wife, Bea. The couple has three children.

Terms of George C. Quesada and Sartain expire in March. Novato Planning Commissioner Gail Wilhelm is the only person who has filed for a council seat.

Lillian Sani Will Seek Rohnert Park Election

A former city official has filed for election to the Rohnert Park City Council.

Lillian E. (Laike) Sani, 51, filed Monday with the city clerk for one of the two seats open in the March 5 election.

"I am a candidate," she said, "because I think it is time for a change — a change from growth for growth's sake to a policy of strong growth control."

Mrs. Sani was Rohnert Park's first city clerk, holding the position for six years in the 1960s.

"We need a woman on the city council, we need a pioneer resident, we need an over-50 person, we need someone who stands for controlled growth and we need someone who understands the college community," she said. "I qualify on all five counts."

An account loan clerk at Sonoma State College, Mrs. Sani said she has lived in Sonoma County since 1945 and in Rohnert Park since 1961. She was also the first president of the Rohnert Park High School P-TA.

Mrs. Sani lives at 7683 Adrian Drive with her husband, Lawrence, and two children.

She is one of five candidates who have filed so far.

The Oregon Supreme Court reported that 83.6 per cent of the 445 law school graduates who took this year's state bar exam passed.

Fertilizer Prices Soar With Control Lid Lifted

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fertilizer prices have spurted an average of 37 per cent since controls were removed by the Cost of Living Council, the Journal of Commerce said today.

The business newspaper made its own survey of the fertilizer market and concluded that the price rise has not yet overcome the severe tightness of supplies.

The Arab oil embargo has worsened the situation because some vital fertilizer components are petroleum derivatives.

World prices for fertilizer have continued to go up faster than the U.S. domestic price, the newspaper said, even though some types of domestic fertilizers have spurted as much as 54 per cent in price.

The Cost of Living Council threatened last week to reimpose price controls if prices continued to soar.

Another Will Make Race For Spot On Fairfax Town Council

Alfred F. Daubenfeld, an attorney and a member of the Fairfax Board of Review, today announced he is seeking election March 5 to the Fairfax Town Council.

The 56-year-old Daubenfeld, a retired Army colonel, completed a career in the military police corps in 1962 after serving in New Guinea, Korea, Europe and Japan.

He received a master's degree in history and political science from San Francisco State College. He also holds bachelor and doctorate of law degrees from Loyola University.

He was appointed to the town board of review in 1971.

Daubenfeld pledged to represent "all the people" and act honestly and "above board" at all times, and said he will seek to make a "significant contribution to the good government and economical administration of Fairfax."

ALFRED F. DAUBENFELD
Makes council bid

He also pledged to "preserve the beauty and uniqueness of Fairfax from the ravages of pollution and uncontrolled development."

He said he does not have a closed mind on proposals which have not yet been presented to the council for action. "All parties should have an opportunity to present their views or plans to a fair, open-minded and unprejudiced action body," he said in a letter to the Independent-Journal.

"It is presumptous and a perversion of the democratic process for a council member to announce a decision before a matter has been presented for his consideration," he said.

Daubenfeld lives at 104 San Gabriel Drive with his wife, Margaret. The couple has three children.

The seats of town councilmen Lee Nelder, Egger, and Robert R. Souza expire. Nelder and town treasurer Priscilla Gray have filed for the posts.

In 1972 railroads invested $1.22 billion in capital improvements, a 3.2 per cent increase over 1971, the Association of American Railroads reports.

Jane Phibbs Has The Food Fixed Before Any Of The Guests Arrive

KITCHEN DESIGNER and gourmet cooking teacher Jane Phibbs mounds up a mixture of cheese in mushroom caps in the "teaching kitchen" she designed for her 1903 Mill Valley home. A cheese spread to be served with crackers is in foreground. Her party food is always made ahead of time, she says, so she can enjoy her guests.

By PAT BALMES

Gourmet cooking teacher Mrs. Roderic Phibbs does all her party food preparation ahead of time "because I like to spend time with my guests."

Guests circulate through her 1903 rambling Mill Valley house at parties, often coming into the kitchen to wait beside the oven for the next batch of hot hors d'oeuvres.

The Phibbs' newly remodeled kitchen, designed by Mrs. Phibbs, is featured in the January House and Garden Magazine. With her husband and their four sons, Jane Phibbs cooked a Moroccan meal while a photographer recorded the process step by step. "They threw away three shopping bags full of film wrappings," she said, during the two long days of work and photographed the final step at midnight — the Phibbs eating their dinner, cold.

Carpenter Peter Dreyfus retained the sunny kitchen's old fashioned atmosphere by salvaging wainscoting for the new walls from the old cupboards. He made high "backache proof" counters and many built-ins such as a sliding recipe file cabinet and a cannister caddy below the baking surface.

MRS. PHIBBS uses a six-burner gas restaurant range to teach the American Association of University Women and other privately arranged cooking classes where students prepare a meal to lunch on with a glass of wine.

"This way I can make money and stay home with the kids. I did teach in the poverty program from 1965 to 1968, but I did not think it was fair to the kids," said the home economist, who added that some poverty program students launched a small catering service.

Now Jane Phibbs also consults on kitchen plans when women want advice. Sometimes she visits "the scene of the crime," she said, at the construction site to alter a kitchen's plans at the last minute.

Another interest is sewing patchwork ties and purses and knitting dresses for Marin shops.

Besides her jobs, she frequently gives parties for visiting professional associates of her husband, a pediatrician at University of California at San Francisco.

Mrs. Phibbs once gave a party in their hotel room during a medical convention in Carmel. She brought the hors d' oeuvres makings (recipes below) from home.

"ALL THE ingredients will freeze or can be prepared ahead of time and stored in the refrigerator. The crab can be made the day before; the flavors will blend. I put the watermelon in the refrigerator in ovenproof pans and later heat in the oven during the party. The cheese spread can be put in a container in the refrigerator for months, but the chutney would get runny so spread it on the day of the party. The cheese stuffing will keep a long time in the refrigerator, but stuff the mushrooms on that day," she said.

BACON WRAPPED WATERMELON PICKLE

1 10 oz. jar of sweet pickled watermelon
1 lb. of bacon.

Cut bacon strips in thirds; wrap pickle in bacon and secure with a tooth pick. Place on broiler pan six inches from flame. Broil until bacon is almost cooked. Turn to other side and repeat. Put on ovenproof serving dish and refrigerate. Just before serving, bake 10 minutes at 400 degrees. Serves 10.

CRAB DIP

1 6 oz. can of crabmeat
2 finely chopped green onions
Mayonnaise
Catsup
Worcestershire sauce
Lemon juice

Mix together the first two ingredients. Then add to taste all the others. "You can't ruin it," promised Mrs. Phibbs. Serves 10. Use with crackers or to stuff tomatoes.

CHEESE SPREAD

1 cup sharp cheddar cheese, grated
2 to 3 oz. of packaged cream cheese
4 tbls. dry sherry
½ tsp. curry powder
¼ tsp. salt.

Mix all ingredients. Pat out ½ inch thick with spatula on serving plate. Spread top with ½ cup chutney and sprinkle with 1 tbls. chopped green onion. Serves 10. Use with crackers.

CHEESE STUFFED MUSHROOMS

¼ lb. Roquefort or blue cheese
1 3 oz. package of cream cheese, softened at room temperature
2 tbls. softened butter or margarine
1 tsp. grated onion
½ tsp. Worcestershire sauce
36 medium size fresh mushroom caps

Cream cheeses, butter until smooth. Stir in onion and Worcestershire sauce. Wash, stem and dry mushrooms. Pipe cheese mixture into caps with pastry bag fitted with large star tube or spoon mixture into caps and mound it with small spatula. Garnish with parsley.

Borrow An Idea From The Danes For Entertaining Holiday Guests

Borrow a bit of Danish inspiration for your holiday party.

The Danes take pride in their open faced sandwiches, and it is much in evidence on their smorresbrod tables. Starting with breads ranging from white to shades of brown and ending with a spectacular topping, the only rule for these sandwiches is "anything goes."

Seasoned Butters, used on breads before the filling and topping goes on, can be prepared in advance, and refrigerated for use. In 3/4 cup sweet butter or margarine blend a flavor-seasoning selected from the following:

1½ tbsp. lemon or lime juice and
1½ fine-grated lemon or lime rind.
1½ tbsp. table mustard
2½ tbsp. well-drained pickle relish
2½ tbsp. chili sauce, 1 tsp. lemon juice and 3 drops Tabasco sauce
2 tbsp. drained prepared horseradish and 1/4 tsp. sugar.

Sandwich Fillings should combine interesting flavors and textures. The many sausages and round loaf lunchmeats available in the market make tasty fillers. Try paper-thin slices of bologna, cervelat, chicken loaf, pepperoni or salami. Processed meats also make good sandwich spreads.

Test some of these ideas:

On buttered rye rounds, place a slice of chicken loaf. Cut almost through a slice of orange and twist it into a fancy spiral atop the chicken loaf. Fit a pitted prune on each half of the orange and anchor with wooden picks.

Spread buttered white bread with braunschweiger. Arrange sauteed mushrooms fan-style on top, then add a strip of crisp bacon.

Grind skinless frankfurters, add a little chopped, tart apple and moisten to spreading consistency with mayonnaise. Use on buttered pumpernickel rounds.

Melt 4 Tbsp. butter. Add 1/4 cup chopped onion. Saute till tender and remove from pan. Add 1/2 lb. liverwurst to butter and slow-fry 2 min. Remove from heat; add onion, 2 hard cooked eggs, 1/4 tsp. salt and 1/8 tsp. pepper. Chop and mix to a paste. Chill. Spread on dark bread and top with sliced stuffed olive.

Taste-Teasing Toppers will complete the finger sandwiches. Center each sandwich with a dot of seasoned butter. Press into that a choice of sliced dill or sweet pickle; a halved stuffed olive; chopped hard-cooked egg; pimiento or green pepper strips; a small pickled mushroom; chopped chives; or a salted nutmeat.

If made hours or days before the party, place sandwiches on a cookie sheet, seal with plastic wrap or foil and refrigerate or freeze.

A Mexican Dish With Tangerines

This early California -Mexican recipe is delicious served with tortillas or Armenian peta bread. If these are not available use with rice.

PICADILLO
(Six servings)

¼ cup fresh squeezed tangerine juice
½ cup raisins
1 pound lean ground beef
1 tablespoon oil
1 cup chopped onions
1 can (16 ounce) whole peeled tomatoes, undrained
2 tablespoons white or cider vinegar
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon cumin
¼ teaspoon chili powder
⅛ teaspoon ground cloves
2 California-Arizona tangerines, peeled and segmented

In a small sauce pan, heat tangerine juice just to boiling. Pour over raisins to plump and set aside. In a large skillet fry ground beef in oil. When meat has lost red color, push to one side of the pan and add chopped onion. Fry onions until they are transparent. Drain off excess fat, if necessary, retaining about two tablespoons in skillet. Add tomatoes, vinegar, sugar, seasonings and plumped raisins with tangerine juice. Stir to combine well.

Over medium heat bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer uncovered for 30 to 45 minutes, until flavors mellow and liquid is reduced. Gently stir in tangerine segments and heat for one minute. Serve immediately.

BEEF FONDUE is an excellent way to entertain for a group at home. Cubed, the beef is cooked by each guest in the oil or bouillon in the fondue pot. Two savory sauces are suggested here.

Beef Fondue Can Be Either An Appetizer, Main Course

Beef fondue can be served either as a main course or as hors d'oeuvres, in which case the steak could be cut into slightly smaller chunks. Be sure to provide little plates to hold the sauces.

1 pound beef top sirloin, cut 1-inch thick
Cooking oil
Savory Dipping Sauces

Cut beef into 1-inch cubes, removing all fat. Heat oil in fondue pot. Dip cubes into hot oil and cook to desired degree of doneness. Serve with Savory Dipping Sauces. Makes four or more servings.

SAVORY DIPPING SAUCES

3 egg yolks
1 tablespoon tarragon wine vinegar
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash cayenne
½ cup butter
2 tablespoons tomato paste
1 teaspoon prepared mustard

Combine egg yolks, wine vinegar, salt and cayenne in blender jar. Blend a few seconds. Heat butter foaming hot, but do not brown. Turn blender to high speed, remove cover and slowly pour in hot butter, holding a crumbled paper towel over top to prevent spattering. Stop motor and scrape sides of jar with rubber spatula. Cover and blend a few seconds longer. Divide sauce. Blend tomato paste into one portion and mustard into the other.

KITCHEN DESIGNER and gourmet cooking teacher Jane Phibbs mounds up a mixture of cheese in mushroom caps in the "teaching kitchen" she designed for her 1903 Mill Valley home. A cheese spread to be served with crackers is in foreground. Her party food is always made ahead of time, she says, so she can enjoy her guests.

Jane Phibbs Has The Food Fixed Before Any Of The Guests Arrive

By PAT BALMES

Gourmet cooking teacher Mrs. Roderic Phibbs does all her party food preparation ahead of time "because I like to spend time with my guests."

Guests circulate through her 1903 rambling Mill Valley house at parties, often coming into the kitchen to wait beside the oven for the next batch of hot hors d'oeuvres.

The Phibbs' newly remodeled kitchen, designed by Mrs. Phibbs, is featured in the January House and Garden Magazine. With her husband and their four sons, Jane Phibbs cooked a Moroccan meal while a photographer recorded the process step by step. "They threw away three shopping bags full of film wrappings," she said, during the two long days of work and photographed the final step at midnight — the Phibbs eating their dinner, cold.

Carpenter Peter Dreyfus retained the sunny kitchen's old fashioned atmosphere by salvaging wainscoting for the new walls from the old cupboards. He made high "backache proof" counters and many built-ins such as a sliding recipe file cabinet and a cannister caddy below the baking surface.

MRS. PHIBBS uses a six-burner gas restaurant range to teach the American Association of University Women and other privately arranged cooking classes where students prepare a meal to lunch on with a glass of wine.

"This way I can make money and stay home with the kids. I did teach in the poverty program from 1965 to 1968, but I did not think it was fair to the kids," said the home economist, who added that some poverty program students launched a small catering service.

Now Jane Phibbs also consults on kitchen plans when women want advice. Sometimes she visits "the scene of the crime," she said, at the construction site to alter a kitchen's plans at the last minute.

Another interest is sewing patchwork ties and purses and knitting dresses for Marin shops.

Besides her jobs, she frequently gives parties for visiting professional associates of her husband, a pediatrician at University of California at San Francisco.

Mrs. Phibbs once gave a party in their hotel room during a medical convention in Carmel. She brought the hors d' oeuvres makings (recipes below) from home.

"ALL THE ingredients will freeze or can be prepared ahead of time and stored in the refrigerator. The crab can be made the day before; the flavors will blend. I put the watermelon in the refrigerator in ovenproof pans and later heat in the oven during the party. The cheese spread can be put in a container in the refrigerator for months, but the chutney would get runny so spread it on the day of the party. The cheese stuffing will keep a long time in the refrigerator, but stuff the mushrooms on that day," she said.

BACON WRAPPED WATERMELON PICKLE

1 10 oz. jar of sweet pickled watermelon
1 lb. of bacon.

Cut bacon strips in thirds; wrap pickle in bacon and secure with a tooth pick. Place on broiler pan six inches from flame. Broil until bacon is almost cooked. Turn to other side and repeat. Put on ovenproof serving dish and refrigerate. Just before serving, bake 10 minutes at 400 degrees. Serves 10.

CRAB DIP

1 6 oz. can of crabmeat
2 finely chopped green onions
Mayonnaise
Catsup
Worcestershire sauce
Lemon juice

Mix together the first two ingredients. Then add to taste all the others. "You can't ruin it," promised Mrs. Phibbs. Serves 10. Use with crackers or to stuff tomatoes.

CHEESE SPREAD

1 cup sharp cheddar cheese, grated
2 to 3 oz. of packaged cream cheese
4 tbls. dry sherry
½ tsp. curry powder
¼ tsp. salt.

Mix all ingredients. Pat out ½ inch thick with spatula on serving plate. Spread top with ½ cup chutney and sprinkle with 1 tbls. chopped green onion. Serves 10. Use with crackers.

CHEESE STUFFED MUSHROOMS

¼ lb. Roquefort or blue cheese
1 3 oz. package of cream cheese, softened at room temperature
2 tbls. softened butter or margarine
1 tsp. grated onion
½ tsp. Worcestershire sauce
36 medium size fresh mushroom caps

Cream cheeses, butter until smooth. Stir in onion and Worcestershire sauce. Wash, stem and dry mushrooms. Pipe cheese mixture into caps with pastry bag fitted with large star tube or spoon mixture into caps and mound it with small spatula. Garnish with parsley.

Borrow An Idea From The Danes For Entertaining Holiday Guests

Borrow a bit of Danish inspiration for your holiday party.

The Danes take pride in their open faced sandwiches, and it is much in evidence on their smorresbrod tables. Starting with breads ranging from white to shades of brown and ending with a spectacular topping, the only rule for these sandwiches is "anything goes."

Seasoned Butters, used on breads before the filling and topping goes on, can be prepared in advance, and refrigerated for use. In 3/4 cup sweet butter or margarine blend a flavor-seasoning selected from the following:

1½ tbsp. lemon or lime juice and
1½ fine-grated lemon or lime rind.
1½ tbsp. table mustard
2½ tbsp. well-drained pickle relish
2½ tbsp. chili sauce, 1 tsp. lemon juice and 3 drops Tabasco sauce
2 tbsp. drained prepared horseradish and 1/4 tsp. sugar.

Sandwich Fillings should combine interesting flavors and textures. The many sausages and round loaf lunchmeats available in the market make tasty fillers. Try paper-thin slices of bologna, cervelat, chicken loaf, pepperoni or salami. Processed meats also make good sandwich spreads.

Test some of these ideas:

On buttered rye rounds, place a slice of chicken loaf. Cut almost through a slice of orange and twist it into a fancy spiral atop the chicken loaf. Fit a pitted prune on each half of the orange and anchor with wooden picks.

Spread buttered white bread with braunschweiger. Arrange sauteed mushrooms fan-style on top, then add a strip of crisp bacon.

Grind skinless frankfurters, add a little chopped, tart apple and moisten to spreading consistency with mayonnaise. Use on buttered pumpernickel rounds.

Melt 4 Tbsp. butter. Add 1/4 cup chopped onion. Saute till tender and remove from pan. Add 1/2 lb. liverwurst to butter and slow-fry 2 min. Remove from heat; add onion, 2 hard cooked eggs, 1/4 tsp. salt and 1/8 tsp. pepper. Chop and mix to a paste. Chill. Spread on dark bread and top with sliced stuffed olive.

Taste-Teasing Toppers will complete the finger sandwiches. Center each sandwich with a dot of seasoned butter. Press into that a choice of sliced dill or sweet pickle; a halved stuffed olive; chopped hard-cooked egg; pimiento or green pepper strips; a small pickled mushroom; chopped chives; or a salted nutmeat.

If made hours or days before the party, place sandwiches on a cookie sheet, seal with plastic wrap or foil and refrigerate or freeze.

They Give Their Time To Children

By PAT BALMES

Marin Child Development Center's new para-professional trainees were chosen for their sensitivity, intuition and skills to be trained in a three-year program of seminars and on-the-job to work with children with emotional or neurological problems.

Volunteer Kathleen Terry comes away engrossed; the work with the children, she finds, demands her total concentration.

"We are allowed to handle situations on our own" because the relationship has to be between the volunteer and the child. "We've got to go on our own feeling. I notice many more of them call me by my name now," said Mrs. William Terry of the Presidio.

The 17 project participants work with all the children at the Tiburon center, taking their cues from the teacher-therapists who work nearby with other children but are conscious of what the volunteers are trying to accomplish.

Mrs. Terry, who volunteers two days a week, has enjoyed it since the start three months ago. She both works with the children and is project librarian for other volunteers eager for resource reading.

She is the wife of Dr. William Terry, an army officer and child psychiatry fellow at Langley Porter Neuro-Psychiatric Institute who first saw the center on a field trip.

Mrs. Terry, a Tulane University graduate in music, now plans to get more training in child development and pursue it as a career.

"So do I," said volunteer trainee Pam Powell of Corte Madera, the wife of Robert Powell, an investment broker. She is gathering University of California credits toward a psychology or a special education degree. She is undecided; "I cannot find a major that I like as well as the work. I hope to keep doing this, paralleling with my education, so I get feedback."

Pam Powell's first exposure to children with problems was at Deveraux School for the Emotionally Disturbed in Los Angeles where she interned for a month as part of her studies at East Endicott Junior College in Massachusetts. Later she worked at Children's Health Council for Emotionally or Brain Damaged Children in Palo Alto.

ANOTHER TRAINEE, Judy Younger of Kentfield, plans to pursue the field of child development as a well qualified volunteer. The wife of Dr. Jesse Younger, an allergist, she worked as a secretary 12 years ago at Reiss-Davis Psychiatric Clinic for Children in Los Angeles. Now that the youngest of her four children has started school, she has resumed an active interest in child development.

Mrs. Younger said everyone has tried to make her work enjoyable. In ordinary volunteer work, the volunteer would not receive the assistance and support that is accorded the trainees by MCDC's professional staff, she believes.

"It is my objective to learn how to work with children and do instinctively what is best for the child," she said. "It can be gratifying to see that these children can be helped; more so as I become familiar with the children and their problems and see how some have grown."

The center's program director Anne Hicks, head of the training project, said that, in time, the trainees will all begin to see growth. They know that these children have much potential to lead normal lives and in most cases go on to public schools.

The therapeutic center is for young children with emotional and/or neurological problems which can cause difficulty in both behavior and learning.

The three volunteers spoke of their work just before attending the weekly seminar for trainees. Mrs. Hicks lectures on theory to go along with their inservice experiences on different aspects of MCDC's therapeutic program, such as therapeutic philosophy, speech and language problems, counseling for parents, sensory-motor integration and case presentation.

Occasionally she brings MCDC's professional staff as resource teachers, who are persons trained in special education, child psychiatry, early childhood devleopment, social work, speech pathology, clinical psychology and occupational therapy.

The project participants can also ask questions before and after the children attend the four-hour sessions four days a week. The trainees attend a daily staff meeting after the children leave to discuss with the professionals what has gone on to get the "feeling tone," because MCDC considers them an important part of the team involved with the children, according to Anne Hicks.

The other trainees are James Moore, Marilyn Cordes, Elaine Roscoe, Phoebe True, Judith Appel, Barbara Janoff, Cathy Zyetz, Betty Merrill, Nancy Pratt, Margreet Winkler, Janice Robinson, John Carmody, Christine Scott and Allegra Seale.

Their training is funded by the Babcock Endowment, Cowell Foundation and San Francisco Foundation.

WHEN MRS. Hicks interviewed prospects for the project last September referred by Margery Sell of Volunteer Bureau of Marin, she was "surprised and excited" at the high caliber of applicants. Her criteria had been some academic background and/or experience related to children.

"I was astonished to find so many well qualified people were so eager for a volunteer position. They were waiting anxiously to hear if they had been accepted," she said. Regretting she could not accept more, she put the others on a waiting list.

The trainees represent a cross section of ages, life styles and experience. Some are just 19. Two men are preparing for careers in the field. Several are college students. Some are mothers of young children or grown children. Many are looking toward their futures academically. One is a registered nurse and another a dental assistant who volunteers on her day off. All have some background, academic or related experience, and a deep interest in working with and learning about children with problems.

"I am so impressed with how much the trainees have added. They pick up things intuitively, by our suggestions in seminars and from recommended reading about normal child development and psychological and education techniques of working with children who have learning or behavior problems," said Mrs. Hicks.

Divorce Book Publication Is Due Soon

"Creative Divorce," a book by San Rafael divorce adjustment counselor Mel Krantzler, will be published in mid-January by M. Evans and Co. A series of excerpts from the book will begin in the January issue of Ladies Home Journal magazine.

The book deals with the building of new lives when a marriage has ended.

"The sooner you can turn off the blame making machinery of your former marriage, the sooner you can reclaim a sense of your own worth," Krantzler said.

"Of all the dilemmas divorce poses, the power of the past (marriage) is the hardest to understand and most difficult to overcome. Through the creative divorce process, you lay the past to rest, and keep it from being the major influence over your present and future."

Krantzler's interest in divorce adjustment counseling started when his 24 year marriage ended and he learned there were no specialized counseling facilities for newly divorced persons. Formerly a vocational, family and marriage counselor, Krantzler for the past two years has worked with hundreds of divorced men and women in Marin in private practice and with the Family Service Agency of Marin. He is on the adult extension faculties of the College of Marin, Sonoma State College and the University of California, where he teaches creative divorce courses he originated.

Krantzler remarried in October of this year, and he and his wife Patricia live in San Rafael.

A Nostalgic Look In Holiday Cards

On this 98th anniversary of the Christmas card in America, nostalgia is the recurrent theme of many card designs.

George L. Parker, creative director of Hallmark Cards, says that cards reflecting a yearning for "the good old days," when life was simpler, are especially popular this year. One such group of cards called Christmas Etchings features brown-tinted renderings of country scenes, printed on old-fashioned vellum paper.

Other cards called peek-throughs open up to reveal turn-of-the-century Christmas-time pictures. Sealing wax, another reminder of days gone by, is included with some boxed cards.

Judge, Mrs. Carlos Freitas Observe 50th Anniversary

Two hundred friends and family members congratulated Judge and Mrs. Carlos R. Freitas of San Rafael on their 50th wedding anniversary at a party Saturday night hosted by the couple at the Meadow Club.

Prior to the party the Freitases participated in a Mass of Thanksgiving at St. Raphael's Catholic Church in San Rafael celebrated by Father Thomas I. Kennedy.

The then law student and the former Earlda Weyburn Cooley, a native San Franciscan, were married Dec. 22, 1923, in Burlingame and have lived in San Rafael all their married life. They made their home at 1 Highland Avenue for 30 years until they moved last year to Oakmont Avenue, atop Fairhills, where as a boy Judge Freitas would hike up from the Freitas home ranch to sit looking down on the city of San Rafael.

Active all of his adult life in civic affairs and the legal profession, Judge Freitas is the son of the late Manuel T. Freitas Sr. and Maria Bettencourt Freitas, who came to San Francisco from San Jorge Island, the Azores and moved to San Rafael after their marriage in 1895. Manuel Freitas acquired large ranch lands north of San Rafael (now Terra Linda and Northgate areas). Young Carlos grew up in San Rafael and attended St. Raphael's School. He then went on to St. Mary's High School and College, where he played varsity football.

Judge Freitas attended Catholic University of America Law School in Washington, D.C., and received the LL. B. from Lincoln University School of Law in 1925. Thirty-two years later Lincoln bestowed an honorary LL. D. degree on him.

He practiced law in San Rafael and was senior partner in the firm of Freitas, Duffy and Keating from 1932 to 1951, and senior partner in Freitas, Allen, McCarthy and Bettini until he was appointed Marin Superior Court judge in September, 1955.

Judge Freitas resigned from the bench in November, 1956, and resumed his law practice. In 1968 he became senior partner of Freitas, Allen, McCarthy, Bettini and MacMahon in San Rafael.

Judge Freitas in 1930 suggested incorporation of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce, drew up the incorporation papers and was named a director that December.

Judge Freitas has served as a member of the Board of Governors of the State Bar of California, vice president on the Committee of Bar Examiners, as assistant secretary for Marin County of the State Bar and as a member of some five of its committees. He also has been president and secretary of the Marin County Bar Association. He is currently a Fellow of the American College of Probate Counsel.

A former director of the St. Mary's College Alumni Association, he was named college alumnus of the year in 1968, and has served on the Board of Regents of which he was named president from 1968 to 1970. He also has served on the college Board of Trustees.

He was a director of the Marin County Savings and Loan Association for 20 years, a director of the Marin County Financial Corporation, both in San Rafael; a member of the board of trustees of the Mother Mary Raymond Scholarship Fund of Dominican College and a trustee of the Freitas Foundation.

Judge Freitas has also been a director of the Marin County Property Association, Marin County Chamber of Commerce, Greater San Rafael Chamber of Commerce, is an executive committee member of Marin Music Chest, serving as its president in 1959-60.

He also is a former president of the Rotary Club and Lions Club of San Rafael, was chairman of the board of directors of Catholic Social Service of Marin, was a director of Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of San Francisco.

Early in his career as an attorney he served as president

Judge, Mrs. Carlos Freitas Observe 50th Anniversary

Two hundred friends and family members congratulated Judge and Mrs. Carlos R. Freitas of San Rafael on their 50th wedding anniversary at a party Saturday night hosted by the couple at the Meadow Club.

Prior to the party the Freitases participated in a Mass of Thanksgiving at St. Raphael's Catholic Church in San Rafael celebrated by Father Thomas I. Kennedy.

The then law student and the former Earlda Weyburn Cooley, a native San Franciscan, were married Dec. 22, 1923, in Burlingame and have lived in San Rafael all their married life. They made their home at 1 Highland Avenue for 30 years until they moved last year to Oakmont Avenue, atop Fairhills, where as a boy Judge Freitas would hike up from the Freitas home ranch to sit looking down on the city of San Rafael.

Active all of his adult life in civic affairs and the legal profession, Judge Freitas is the son of the late Manuel T. Freitas Sr. and Maria Bettencourt Freitas, who came to San Francisco from San Jorge Island, the Azores and moved to San Rafael after their marriage in 1895. Manuel Freitas acquired large ranch lands north of San Rafael (now Terra Linda and Northgate areas). Young Carlos grew up in San Rafael and attended St. Raphael's School. He then went on to St. Mary's High School and College, where he played varsity football.

Judge Freitas attended Catholic University of America Law School in Washington, D.C., and received the LL. B. from Lincoln University School of Law in 1925. Thirty-two years later Lincoln bestowed an honorary LL. D. degree on him.

He practiced law in San Rafael and was senior partner in the firm of Freitas, Duffy and Keating from 1932 to 1951, and senior partner in Freitas, Allen, McCarthy and Bettini until he was appointed Marin Superior Court judge in September, 1955.

Judge Freitas resigned from the bench in November, 1956, and resumed his law practice. In 1968 he became senior partner of Freitas, Allen, McCarthy, Bettini and MacMahon in San Rafael.

Judge Freitas in 1930 suggested incorporation of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce, drew up the incorporation papers and was named a director that December.

Judge Freitas has served as a member of the Board of Governors of the State Bar of California, vice president on the Committee of Bar Examiners, as assistant secretary for Marin County of the State Bar and as a member of some five of its committees. He also has been president and secretary of the Marin County Bar Association. He is currently a Fellow of the American College of Probate Counsel.

A former director of the St. Mary's College Alumni Association, he was named college alumnus of the year in 1968, and has served on the Board of Regents of which he was named president from 1968 to 1970. He also has served on the college Board of Trustees.

He was a director of the Marin County Savings and Loan Association for 20 years, a director of the Marin County Financial Corporation, both in San Rafael; a member of the board of trustees of the Mother Mary Raymond Scholarship Fund of Dominican College and a trustee of the Freitas Foundation.

Judge Freitas has also been a director of the Marin County Property Association, Marin County Chamber of Commerce, Greater San Rafael Chamber of Commerce, is an executive committee member of Marin Music Chest, serving as its president in 1959-60.

He also is a former president of the Rotary Club and Lions Club of San Rafael, was chairman of the board of directors of Catholic Social Service of Marin, was a director of Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of San Francisco.

Early in his career as an attorney he served as president

Christmas Letters Aren't All Bad: Some, In Fact, Are Good

DEAR HELEN:
The truth now: Do you or do you not approve of those mimeographed Christmas letters that catch you up on family happenings for a whole year? — GETTING EYESTRAIN

DEAR G.E.:
I could no more generalize on Christmas letters than I could make a blanket statement about all TV Christmas programs. Some are great, others just so-so, but I'll give all the writers an A for effort: their remembrances are much more personal than printed names on fancy greeting cards:

Here's one of our favorites, sent by a college professor and his wife from Fort Worth Texas:

"Since almost everybody is sending Christmas letters, we've decided to have a swing at it — with a salutary departure from the current norm:

"We'll relate only the truly outstanding milestones we've passed during the year now ending, eschewing the usual banal triviolities that pack these messages:

"I lost eight pounds during October — result of manful will and cold-steel determination. I gained 12 pounds in December.

"In a burst of righteousness, I realized it was cruel to make Betty push a lawnmower around. I bought her a riding one.

"(Late in the season, she had to turn it upside down to change the oil. I advised and counseled, of course, and would have helped except for my old war wound.)

"With the onset of cold weather, I figured out that Betty could use the back door instead of the patio door and save 17 steps bringing in fireplace wood.

"I was singularly blessed yearlong. My kidney stone lay dormant throughout. My only noteworthy complaint was a flareup of gout, which yielded nicely to 10 hours of bed rest and clean living.

"We have a new disposal.

"The garage door came off the hinge and knocked a mop handle against the right rear fender of the Ford. It left a notieceable dent.

"Knew you were waiting to hear all about us.

"Well, that's about all. Merry Christmas, etc., — LEW AND BETTY"

DEAR HELEN:
We enjoy your column, but think you should stick to human relations and leave eating habits to the food editor. Perhaps you can manage to eat sunflower seeds, shells and all, but others can't, and the woman who asked if this was a safe practice should be warned.

I'm a nurse. One of our hospital's recent patients was a woman who ate a large number of unshelled sunflower seeds. They swelled up, caused a complete intestinal block, and she had to have a major operation.

Perhaps the small amounts you mentioned wouldn't hurt, Helen, but why take chances? — BETTER SHELL THAN SORRY

DEAR HELEN:
What do you think of a woman who wrapped her Christmas gifts in newspapers and tied them with last year's ribbons and bows? — SHOCKED

DEAR SHOCKED:
She's either ecology minded (the paper shortage is acute, you know); or she enjoys being "different," or she's making her private protest against waste; or she's just plain chintzy . . . and this last isn't bad, what with wrappings almost as costly as the gift these days.

Really, it's not a bad idea. Don't knock it! — H.

Got a problem? An adult subject for discussion? A fun idea? You can talk it over in her column if you write to Helen Bottel, c/o the Independent-Journal, PO Box 330, 1040 B St., San Rafael, Ca. 94902.

INSIDE YOUR HOME

New Sofas Have High-Rise Backs

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY
Distributed by General Features Corp.

Something surprising has been happening to those family favorites — the living room sofas. As you sink slowly into the newer versions, you experience a sense of seclusion and deep cushy comfort. Yes, the seats are getting softer, but at the same time the backs are becoming positively high-rise.

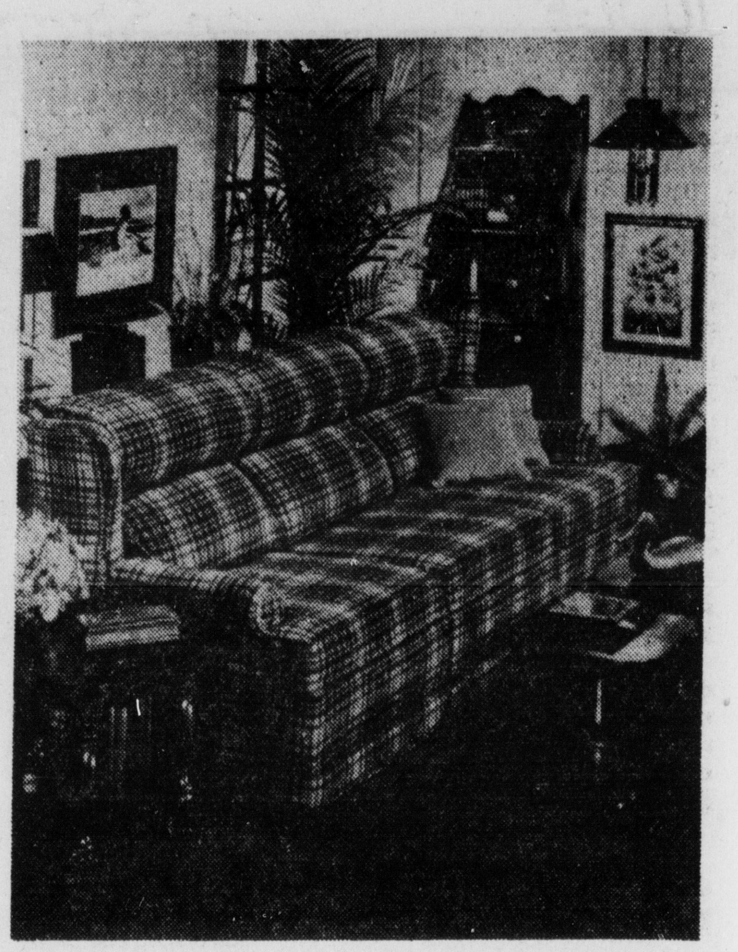
There have been many high-back chairs and sofas in our design history, but suddenly the head-supporting types are appearing across the whole spectrum of design. It started recently with some totally contemporary high-backs designed by Milo Baughman for Thayer Coggin.

ONE OF the newest entries in the high-back look is Kroehler Manufacturing Co., whose "English Pub" introduction is illustrated today.

And Kroehler catches on to the popular fashion look of the 1950s by upholstering this bed-sofa in a bold, bright red plaid fabric. The collection also includes a standard sofa, love seat, matching chair and "Relaxer" reclining chair.

AS LONG as they were going high-rise, the designers added some extra cushioning for your head. Softly padded headrests prevail, and wing-back-style arms, as well as back, are trimmed with brass nailheads to please your eyes.

Is the plaid too bold for your tastes? Well, Kroehler's staffers think you may be too timid. They feel you could let such a plaid become the primary pattern in a room. Then decorate around it by using the basic colors for floor covering, wall decoration and accessories. Take along a piece of fabric when you're starting a room from scratch, and you won't make too many mistakes.



HERE'S A bold one: This high-rise sleep-or-lounge sofa by Kroehler is covered in a bold plaid, but one that is a pussycat to keep clean. Called "English Pub," it will support your favorite sport or sports.

Spring Ideas

Apart from ruffles, fringe or ostrich borders which are intrinsic to the shape and action of the dress, sequins used as a solid surface over chiffon or net and an occasional pristine gardenia, no extraneous buttons or bows are seen in spring dresses for after five.

Sashes Are Back

For spring the belt, generally, is replaced by the sash or a drawstring. Many dresses and coats are beltless, however. To mark the waist side seams are indented.

One hallmark of spring fashion is the return of the short sleeve. There also are turned-back long shirt sleeves and soft fluttery cap sleeves.

Sleeveless Shell

The sleeveless shell and the sheath make their reappearance under coats and jacket-dresses for spring.

Netherlands Is Worried About Future

By TAKASHI OKA
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

AMSTERDAM — Like other West European countries, the Netherlands is shaken and perplexed by what seems like the coming of an era in which many old certainties are being severely shaken if not yet completely swept away.

It's true the canals and the mellow old houses fronting them in old Amsterdam are as lovely as ever and the new Van Gogh Museum is a stunning vision in glass and concrete.

Also the Dutch are taking the Arab oil embargo and the prospect of 15 liters (3.3 gallons) per week rationing of gasoline in their stride.

But it is just beginning to sink in that the economic growth fueled by cheap oil pouring into Rotterdam's mammoth port (130 million tons per year) can no longer be taken for granted.

The Atlantic Alliance, cornerstone of Dutch foreign policy, is being buffeted by American threats of military withdrawal and by European expression of pique over superpower diplomacy going over their heads.

The European Common Market has been good for The Netherlands, opening up a market of 250 million people to this relatively small but industrious and productive country.

But meaningful progress toward political union of Europe remains blocked by one-time empires like Britain and France, which seem prepared to surrender only meager amounts, if any, of national sovereignty to a European executive.

The recent European summit at Copenhagen is an example. Premier Joop Denuyl professes to be satisfied with the decisions taken there to create a common market in energy and to conserve existing energy supplies on an "equitable and concerted basis."

France and Britain, enjoying no privileged status as nations considered "friendly" by the Arabs, fought long and hard against West German Chancellor Willy Brandt's proposals for a common energy policy.

They argued that the dislocations caused so far are temporary and that quiet diplomacy rather than an open banding together of Europe would open the Arab oil spigot.

At the summit the Dutch let West Germany carry the ball, since the Germans rely on Rotterdam for a large proportion of their oil needs.

But although Chancellor Brandt's view ultimately prevailed at the summit, the Dutch are disturbed at the openness of the rift that became apparent there between the British and the French on one side and the seven other members of the European Community (EC), including themselves, on the other.

The Anglo-French argument that Europe must unite so that its voice will carry more weight in the world does not cut much ice with the Dutch, who have no nostalgia for days of bygone greatness.

The solid citizens of Holland would like a united, democratic Western Europe, living in peace with all the world and maintaining the closest links with the United States and Canada.

Smoking Cars Target Of Smog Patrol

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A big diesel truck roared down the freeway, thick smoke erupting from its vertical exhaust like a mini-volcano.

An orange and white car traveled in the opposite lanes. The driver muttered with a note of frustration at the passing truck "Darn, I wish I were over there so I could tag him."

Behind the wheel of the car was Christine Bell, a new breed of "cop" in the Bay Area.

She is one of 14 persons patrolling the region on the lookout for smog-belching vehicles.

The Bay Area Air Pollution Control District launched the vehicle patrol in early November, following the lead of Los Angeles, which has had such a unit since 1948.

"I spend about five hours a day behind the wheel in San Francisco or San Mateo Counties," said Mrs. Bell.

The patrol cars are equipped with red lights and sirens but their bright orange color makes them appear more like utility company cars than something akin to a police department's.

"I pulled over a truck once and the driver asked me what an ambulance was doing with its light and siren on and going in the slow lane," Mrs. Bell said.

The "smog cops" wear grey slacks, blue blazers or all weather jackets resembling those worn by airmen.

In the Los Angeles area, the image is just the opposite. The force there wears uniforms almost identical to highway patrolmen.

Mrs. Bell, despite her uniform, said she hasn't had any trouble with drivers she stopped.

"In fact," she said, "one truck driver thanked me and said he hoped his boss would do something about the old rig he was pushing."

About 167 citations have been issued in Bay Area counties since the patrols started. The average in Los Angeles is between 200-250 a month.

Scientists say autos are the leading cause of vehicular smog, but trucks and buses get cited more often because their thick exhaust is easier to spot.

"I remember stopping one bus on the Peninsula and the crowd waiting at the corner actually cheered," Mrs. Bell said.

District officials hope that the mere presence of the cars will help cut down on offenders.

"Once the word gets around that we're on the road it should have some results, especially with the truck firms," one spokesman said.

Policeman Found Innocent In Assault Case

A San Francisco policeman has been found innocent of assaulting a youth after a minor traffic accident in Petaluma Sept. 24.

Absolved by a Petaluma municipal court jury was 28-year-old Dennis Kamilatos of Petaluma, who had been charged with striking and threatening Lonnie Dillow, 16, of Petaluma, after a traffic mishap on Ely Boulevard South near Casa Grande Road.

Kamilatos was off duty from his job with the San Francisco police department at the time, according to Petaluma police.

Court officials said the jury took 20 minutes to reach the verdict which came after two days of testimony.

Workshop Set By Planners

AMSTERDAM — Like other West European countries, the Netherlands is shaken and perplexed by what seems like the coming of an era in which many old certainties are being severely shaken if not yet completely swept away.

It's true the canals and the mellow old houses fronting them in old Amsterdam are as lovely as ever and the new Van Gogh Museum is a stunning vision in glass and concrete.

Also the Dutch are taking the Arab oil embargo and the prospect of 15 liters (3.3 gallons) per week rationing of gasoline in their stride.

But it is just beginning to sink in that the economic growth fueled by cheap oil pouring into Rotterdam's mammoth port (130 million tons per year) can no longer be taken for granted. The Atlantic Alliance, cornerstone of Dutch foreign policy, is being buffeted by American threats of military withdrawal and by European expression of pique over superpower diplomacy going over their heads.

The European Common Market has been good for The Netherlands, opening up a market of 250 million people to this relatively small but industrious and productive country.

But meaningful progress toward political union of Europe remains blocked by one-time empires like Britain and France, which seem prepared to surrender only meager amounts, if any, of national sovereignty to a European executive.

The recent European summit at Copenhagen is an example. Premier Joop Denuyl professes to be satisfied with the decisions taken there to create a common market in energy and to conserve existing energy supplies on an "equitable and concerted basis."

France and Britain, enjoying no privileged status as nations considered "friendly" by the Arabs, fought long and hard against West German Chancellor Willy Brandt's proposals for a common energy policy.

They argued that the dislocations caused so far are temporary and that quiet diplomacy rather than an open banding together of Europe would open the Arab oil spigot.

At the summit the Dutch let West Germany carry the ball, since the Germans rely on Rotterdam for a large proportion of their oil needs.

But although Chancellor Brandt's view ultimately prevailed at the summit, the Dutch are disturbed at the openness of the rift that became apparent there between the British and the French on one side and the seven other members of the European Community (EC), including themselves, on the other.

The Anglo-French argument that Europe must unite so that its voice will carry more weight in the world does not cut much ice with the Dutch, who have no nostalgia for days of bygone greatness.

The solid citizens of Holland would like a united, democratic Western Europe, living in peace with all the world and maintaining the closest links with the United States and Canada.

Smoking Cars Target Of Smog Patrol

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A big diesel truck roared down the freeway, thick smoke erupting from its vertical exhaust like a mini-volcano.

An orange and white car traveled in the opposite lanes. The driver muttered with a note of frustration at the passing truck "Darn, I wish I were over there so I could tag him."

Behind the wheel of the car was Christine Bell, a new breed of "cop" in the Bay Area.

She is one of 14 persons patrolling the region on the lookout for smog-belching vehicles.

The Bay Area Air Pollution Control District launched the vehicle patrol in early November, following the lead of Los Angeles, which has had such a unit since 1948.

"I spend about five hours a day behind the wheel in San Francisco or San Mateo Counties," said Mrs. Bell.

The patrol cars are equipped with red lights and sirens but their bright orange color makes them appear more like utility company cars than something akin to a police department's.

"I pulled over a truck once and the driver asked me what an ambulance was doing with its light and siren on and going in the slow lane," Mrs. Bell said.

The "smog cops" wear grey slacks, blue blazers or all weather jackets resembling those worn by airmen.

In the Los Angeles area, the image is just the opposite. The force there wears uniforms almost identical to highway patrolmen.

Mrs. Bell, despite her uniform, said she hasn't had any trouble with drivers she stopped.

"In fact," she said, "one truck driver thanked me and said he hoped his boss would do something about the old rig he was pushing."

About 167 citations have been issued in Bay Area counties since the patrols started. The average in Los Angeles is between 200-250 a month.

Scientists say autos are the leading cause of vehicular smog, but trucks and buses get cited more often because their thick exhaust is easier to spot.

"I remember stopping one bus on the Peninsula and the crowd waiting at the corner actually cheered," Mrs. Bell said.

District officials hope that the mere presence of the cars will help cut down on offenders.

"Once the word gets around that we're on the road it should have some results, especially with the truck firms," one spokesman said.

Policeman Found Innocent In Assault Case

A San Francisco policeman has been found innocent of assaulting a youth after a minor traffic accident in Petaluma Sept. 24.

Absolved by a Petaluma municipal court jury was 28-year-old Dennis Kamilatos of Petaluma, who had been charged with striking and threatening Lonnie Dillow, 16, of Petaluma, after a traffic mishap on Ely Boulevard South near Casa Grande Road.

Kamilatos was off duty from his job with the San Francisco police department at the time, according to Petaluma police.

Court officials said the jury took 20 minutes to reach the verdict which came after two days of testimony.

Directing Status Is Achieved

BREAKS THE BARRIER — Mai Zetterling, who belongs to the tight little island of women film directors, discusses her views on cinematography. She was one of the directors of "Visions of Eight," a view of the 1972 Olympic Games in Munich.

The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

"Being a director is like ruling a country for three months, and most women are not used to that," says one who knows.

She is Swedish-born Mai Zetterling, one of the tight little island of women directors.

Among the countries Miss Zetterling has ruled over as a director are "Night Games," "Dr. Glas," "Loving Couples," "The Girls," and recently one-eighth of "Visions of Eight," a multidirector view of the 1972 Munich Olympic Games.

"All the problems are on the shoulders of the director, who becomes a curious kind of father-mother figure, and sort of a dictator, sort of loved and feared," she says.

It's difficult to imagine Miss Zetterling as any kind of dictator, great (like Chaplin's) or otherwise. She is small, faintly rounded in her sheer green tunic and plum-colored pants, with the kind of open, wondering face we associate with children. Her coloring is pure Scandinavian — wheat-colored hair, luminous, peachy tan skin, eyes the medium blue of the Swedish flag.

There is a hint of her film presence as an actress — 18 pictures, including Bergman's "Frenzy," "Quartet," and "Only Two Can Play" with Peter Sellers. But she seems to have left that career behind like a discarded scarf.

"It's not satisfying for me just to be an interpreter; acting never was totally fulfilling to me. I wasn't saying what I desperately wanted to say."

She seems to have found the channel for what she wants to say in directing, in spite of its built-in problems for a woman. "When you're wearing your mother face, the actors want to have the director all to themselves, and have long talks about themselves . . . For women directors, the problem is other women, most of whom are used to male directors; they are not used to taking orders from a woman.

"Directing an actor is a very complex and difficult thing, anyway. Most actors are extremely sensitive. You have to be fantastically delicate (with them) not to hurt anything, not to destroy their confidence as an actor . . .

"Being a director is harsh, difficult. Few people can do it. You're not trained to do that as a woman. We've learned instead to use our sensitivities, much more than men . . .

Miss Zetterling's own work as a director is characterized by a special sensitivity, an unconventional and intelligently original approach. Her "The Girls" was a biting contemporary variation on the classic Greek "Lysistrata" theme of wives banning sexual relations with their husbands until they end the war.

In Sweden, she says, the critics "sat through the film in stony silence . . . in Sweden there is only one woman critic, and the men all hated it, really hated it." On the other hand, her first film, "Loving Couples," she says "was a great success in my own country . . . because I was somehow able to convey the landscape, the people, the way they move, the houses . . . as the writer (of the novel) had done."

Miss Zetterling wrote that script in collaboration with her husband, novelist ("The Major") and scriptwriter David Hughes, who collaborates with her on all her films. He is a tall, dark-haired Englishman whom she met through a mutual friend, over dinner. Mr. Hughes had been told that the other dinner guest was a Latvian refugee who spoke only German, but would he please bear up through dinner; and she had been told only that there was a young writer coming along. The host was called away "and we've been stuck with each other ever since," says Mai Zetterling Hughes. They mutter about "fantastic thunder and lightning" and then smile at each other.

The Hugheses choose to live not in Sweden or England but in the south of France, on a farm near Nimes, with a simple, back-to-nature life.

"I do a lot of farming and gardening where we live," says Miss Zetterling, "growing my own vegetables, organically of course, and an acre of herbs. I find it very moving, because herbs are so good — rosemary, for instance, is a health-giving herb to other plants it grows near. My next book is going to be a herbal book. I make my own tonics, astringents for the face, out of elderflowers and chamomile. I do my own hair wash from herbs. I start making soap next . . . I'm having bees, too, and am going to start making cheese soon.

"I find a tremendous serenity in living this kind of life. It gives me strength to live in harmony with nature. I couldn't live in a city all the time, it would be absolutely impossible because it drains me. The other thing gives me tremendous strength, and out of that comes a sort of creative strength."

Currently, she is doing a documentary for American television on tennis champion Stan Smith, which she was asked to do after producer David Wolper saw her segment on the weightlifters in "Visions of Eight." She admits to not knowing anything about tennis, as she knew nothing of weightlifting and adds that she's also been asked "to do the World Cup, to do something about the really big boys in football next year." She smiles, "Now I've become a sort of leading sports director which is very funny, very comic."

Parents Of Osmond Brothers Torn Apart By Russian Paper

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Osmond Brothers may be idols to teen-agers in the West, but Soviet officials see them as capitalist kids raised to be heretics by pious Mormon parents afraid of "the evil eye."

The Christmas Day issue of the Soviet newspaper Sovietskaya Kultura criticized the pop music sensations in an article entitled "A Christmas Story."

It claimed father Joseph, a baritone singer, and mother Ellen, a saxophone player, "robbed their children of their childhood, turned it into a hunt for dollars, made them make faces before audiences, maimed the souls of thousands of other boys and girls, but with all that they still live a pious life."

It said the childrens' voices, developed in church choirs, were "still weak" and the kids would be called "heretics" except for Mormon Church's attempt to keep "in step with the times and attract more parishioners through pop music."

Ellen and Joseph Osmond may be faithful members of the church, send their children to services every Sunday, keep the boys from smoking, drinking and running around with girls trying to tear off their clothes, but they're far from model parents in the eyes of the Soviet news media.

"The parents became rich," the newspaper said. "They own a recording studio, a factory producing all kinds of souvenirs, little chains, bracelets, jingles."

The newspaper said, "Unlike other normal, average children, they cannot study at school, for they always have to be on the move."

And what kind of friends do the pre-teen idols have? According to Sovietskaya Kultura, "They don't have any friends, only admirers."

The newspaper, however, grudgingly acknowledged that the Osmond parents at least brought their children up in a proper "austere spirit," but attributed it to "fear of the evil eye."

Three Given Court Date In Painting Theft Case

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The cases of three men charged in connection with the theft of two Rembrandt paintings from the Taft Museum today were ordered continued to Jan. 2, 1974.

The two 300-year-old paintings, "Portrait of an Elderly Woman" and "Man Leaning on a Sill, were stolen from the museum Dec. 18 after the night watchman was overpowered.

Charged with receiving stolen goods and held in lieu of $100,000 bond each were Carl Horsley, 21, Raymond McDonough, 21, and Henry Dawn, 22, all from suburban Loveland, Ohio. Nine persons originally had been arrested.

After returning the Elderly Woman portrait without a ransom, the thieves demanded $200,000 for the other painting but then settled for $100,000.

After the weekend negotiations with a mediator, local real estate broker Jim Hough, the money was taken to a prearranged location late Saturday. Police were then instructed to go to a nearby rural home and found the painting.

The arrests were made about two hours later.

The two paintings, insured more than 10 years ago for $330,000, are said to be worth millions of dollars on the open market.

No Trace Of Plane Found

CHICO (AP) — A Christmas Day air search by five planes over Northern California has failed to turn up a light plane missing with three Oregon residents aboard, the Civil Air Patrol reported today.

CAP spokeswoman Hazel Smith said two ground parties and up to 13 planes were scheduled to participate in today's search.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Cheek of Klamath Falls, Ore., and their 6-year-old daughter have been missing since Friday on a flight from Klamath Falls to Beaumont, Tex.

Yule Gift With 'Hairy' Overtones

HUNTINGTON, W. Va. (UPI) — James H. Morgan Jr., a Cabell County Court commissioner and Huntington businessman, gave his wife a "hairy" Christmas present yesterday.

Morgan shaved off his mustache, put it in a package and placed it under the Christmas tree.

Impeachment Article Denied

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Carroll O'Connor, television's Archie Bunker, says he didn't write a labor union magazine article calling for President Nixon's impeachment.

Carroll, who is a member of the AFL-CIO, said he has instructed his attorney to consider legal action against the Texas AFL-CIO Labor News, a monthly magazine which printed the article under O'Connor's byline.

A Thank You Note Is Left

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — A burglar broke into a home in a well-to-do area of Caracas on Christmas eve Monday, helped himself to a drink out of the liquor cabinet and made off with jewelry, cash and electrical appliances while the owners were out celebrating.

The thief, police said, left a Christmas card with the words, "Merry Christmas and thanks for everything."

Directing Status Is Achieved

BREAKS THE BARRIER — Mai Zetterling, who belongs to the tight little island of women film directors, discusses her views on cinematography. She was one of the directors of "Visions of Eight," a view of the 1972 Olympic Games in Munich.

"Being a director is like ruling a country for three months, and most women are not used to that," says one who knows.

She is Swedish-born Mai Zetterling, one of the tight little island of women directors.

Among the countries Miss Zetterling has ruled over as a director are "Night Games," "Dr. Glas," "Loving Couples," "The Girls," and recently one-eighth of "Visions of Eight," a multidirector view of the 1972 Munich Olympic Games.

"All the problems are on the shoulders of the director, who becomes a curious kind of father-mother figure, and sort of a dictator, sort of loved and feared," she says.

It's difficult to imagine Miss Zetterling as any kind of dictator, great (like Chaplin's) or otherwise. She is small, faintly rounded in her sheer green tunic and plum-colored pants, with the kind of open, wondering face we associate with children. Her coloring is pure Scandinavian — wheat-colored hair, luminous, peachy tan skin, eyes the medium blue of the Swedish flag.

There is a hint of her film presence as an actress — 18 pictures, including Bergman's "Frenzy," "Quartet," and "Only Two Can Play" with Peter Sellers. But she seems to have left that career behind like a discarded scarf.

"It's not satisfying for me just to be an interpreter; acting never was totally fulfilling to me. I wasn't saying what I desperately wanted to say."

She seems to have found the channel for what she wants to say in directing, in spite of its built-in problems for a woman. "When you're wearing your mother face, the actors want to have the director all to themselves, and have long talks about themselves . . . For women directors, the problem is other women, most of whom are used to male directors; they are not used to taking orders from a woman.

"Directing an actor is a very complex and difficult thing, anyway. Most actors are extremely sensitive. You have to be fantastically delicate (with them) not to hurt anything, not to destroy their confidence as an actor . . .

"Being a director is harsh, difficult. Few people can do it. You're not trained to do that as a woman. We've learned instead to use our sensitivities, much more than men . . .

Miss Zetterling's own work as a director is characterized by a special sensitivity, an unconventional and intelligently original approach. Her "The Girls" was a biting contemporary variation on the classic Greek "Lysistrata" theme of wives banning sexual relations with their husbands until they end the war.

In Sweden, she says, the critics "sat through the film in stony silence . . . in Sweden there is only one woman critic, and the men all hated it, really hated it." On the other hand, her first film, "Loving Couples," she says "was a great success in my own country . . . because I was somehow able to convey the landscape, the people, the way they move, the houses . . . as the writer (of the novel) had done."

Miss Zetterling wrote that script in collaboration with her husband, novelist ("The Major") and scriptwriter David Hughes, who collaborates with her on all her films. He is a tall, dark-haired Englishman whom she met through a mutual friend, over dinner. Mr. Hughes had been told that the other dinner guest was a Latvian refugee who spoke only German, but would he please bear up through dinner; and she had been told only that there was a young writer coming along. The host was called away "and we've been stuck with each other ever since," says Mai Zetterling Hughes. They mutter about "fantastic thunder and lightning" and then smile at each other.

The Hugheses choose to live not in Sweden or England but in the south of France, on a farm near Nimes, with a simple, back-to-nature life.

"I do a lot of farming and gardening where we live," says Miss Zetterling, "growing my own vegetables, organically of course, and an acre of herbs. I find it very moving, because herbs are so good — rosemary, for instance, is a health-giving herb to other plants it grows near. My next book is going to be a herbal book. I make my own tonics, astringents for the face, out of elderflowers and chamomile. I do my own hair wash from herbs. I start making soap next . . . I'm having bees, too, and am going to start making cheese soon.

"I find a tremendous serenity in living this kind of life. It gives me strength to live in harmony with nature. I couldn't live in a city all the time, it would be absolutely impossible because it drains me. The other thing gives me tremendous strength, and out of that comes a sort of creative strength."

Currently, she is doing a documentary for American television on tennis champion Stan Smith, which she was asked to do after producer David Wolper saw her segment on the weightlifters in "Visions of Eight." She admits to not knowing anything about tennis, as she knew nothing of weightlifting and adds that she's also been asked "to do the World Cup, to do something about the really big boys in football next year." She smiles, "Now I've become a sort of leading sports director which is very funny, very comic."

Parents Of Osmond Brothers Torn Apart By Russian Paper

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Osmond Brothers may be idols to teen-agers in the West, but Soviet officials see them as capitalist kids raised to be heretics by pious Mormon parents afraid of "the evil eye."

The Christmas Day issue of the Soviet newspaper Sovietskaya Kultura criticized the pop music sensations in an article entitled "A Christmas Story."

It claimed father Joseph, a baritone singer, and mother Ellen, a saxophone player, "robbed their children of their childhood, turned it into a hunt for dollars, made them make faces before audiences, maimed the souls of thousands of other boys and girls, but with all that they still live a pious life."

It said the childrens' voices, developed in church choirs, were "still weak" and the kids would be called "heretics" except for Mormon Church's attempt to keep "in step with the times and attract more parishioners through pop music."

Ellen and Joseph Osmond may be faithful members of the church, send their children to services every Sunday, keep the boys from smoking, drinking and running around with girls trying to tear off their clothes, but they're far from model parents in the eyes of the Soviet news media.

"The parents became rich," the newspaper said. "They own a recording studio, a factory producing all kinds of souvenirs, little chains, bracelets, jingles."

The newspaper said, "Unlike other normal, average children, they cannot study at school, for they always have to be on the move."

And what kind of friends do the pre-teen idols have? According to Sovietskaya Kultura, "They don't have any friends, only admirers."

The newspaper, however, grudgingly acknowledged that the Osmond parents at least brought their children up in a proper "austere spirit," but attributed it to "fear of the evil eye."

Three Given Court Date In Painting Theft Case

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The cases of three men charged in connection with the theft of two Rembrandt paintings from the Taft Museum today were ordered continued to Jan. 2, 1974.

The two 300-year-old paintings, "Portrait of an Elderly Woman" and "Man Leaning on a Sill, were stolen from the museum Dec. 18 after the night watchman was overpowered.

Charged with receiving stolen goods and held in lieu of $100,000 bond each were Carl Horsley, 21, Raymond McDonough, 21, and Henry Dawn, 22, all from suburban Loveland, Ohio. Nine persons originally had been arrested.

After returning the Elderly Woman portrait without a ransom, the thieves demanded $200,000 for the other painting but then settled for $100,000.

After the weekend negotiations with a mediator, local real estate broker Jim Hough, the money was taken to a prearranged location late Saturday. Police were then instructed to go to a nearby rural home and found the painting.

The arrests were made about two hours later.

The two paintings, insured more than 10 years ago for $330,000, are said to be worth millions of dollars on the open market.

Yule Gift With 'Hairy' Overtones

HUNTINGTON, W. Va. (UPI) — James H. Morgan Jr., a Cabell County Court commissioner and Huntington businessman, gave his wife a "hairy" Christmas present yesterday.

Morgan shaved off his mustache, put it in a package and placed it under the Christmas tree.

No Trace Of Plane Found

CHICO (AP) — A Christmas Day air search by five planes over Northern California has failed to turn up a light plane missing with three Oregon residents aboard, the Civil Air Patrol reported today.

CAP spokeswoman Hazel Smith said two ground parties and up to 13 planes were scheduled to participate in today's search.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Cheek of Klamath Falls, Ore., and their 6-year-old daughter have been missing since Friday on a flight from Klamath Falls to Beaumont, Tex.

American Sculptures Grow

By CORINNE ROBINS

American sculpture has been growing out of the galleries — coming out of the ground instead. During the '60's, galleries doubled in size to accommodate the new grand-scale modern art.

"Monumental sculpture," a catchphrase the art magazines turned into a cliche, was finally shelved at the end of 1968. A new direction in art, the demand for a new crop of artists offering a "new look," took us quickly through process art, conceptual art, soft-edge painting, and new realism. The American fascination with scale and bigness ran counter to the newly awakened social consciousness that began with the '70's.

But art is a phenomenon that does not respond to conscious social decisions. Despite Andy Warhol's dictum, "In the future everybody will be famous for 15 minutes," the nature of artists is such that they change in terms of their own personal time clocks and develop or decline to make a particular kind of art as it ultimately suits their needs.

This is probably doubly fortunate in America where the beginnings of things, the first novel, the performance by a musical prodigy, the 35-year-old artist's painting retrospective (35 marks the end of even the most prolonged youth) wins instant attention. Thus, after his 15 minutes of fame, many artists face a personal crisis: They either have to produce a new firework or cease being "stars" and become content with being well-known and slightly overlooked. This process is sometimes known as "getting on with it," or growing up. American sculpture, the bright hope of the mid '60's has developed in just this way. Artists have gotten on with it — to some extent outside the galleries.

The Storm King Art Center in Mountainville, N. Y., just outside New York City, has been quietly collecting outsize modern sculpture since 1959. Supported by the Ralph E. Ogden Foundation, Storm King enjoyed a flurry of publicity in 1967, right after it acquired 13 works from the period 1954-59 by the American sculptor David Smith. They are grouped at the back and on hills to the right of the Museum building, and although of indisputable historic importance, they make up only a fraction of the more than 80 pieces Storm King owns today.

Works ranging from sculptures by Henry Moore, George Rickey, Anthony Caro, and Alexander Calder to newer, large-scale pieces by such younger artists as Forrest Myers, David von Schlegell, and Chuck Ginnever are widely spaced in fields by the road and complete with and complement the landscape. Storm King has begun to mount a massive, open-ended "Sculpture in the Fields" exhibition, installing an additional 50 works by known and unknown contemporary American sculptors. Over 130 pieces testify to the importance of sculpture as a major art form in the second half of the 20th century.

The 200 acres that make up the center grounds, the views from its high sloping hills and the walks through its formal gardens are at first overwhelming. The landscape challenges as much as it reinforces the manmade art it shelters and, at first sight, the collection is a study in eclecticism. Five 19-century Ionic columns round off a cliff and look down from behind a wading pool not far from the museum itself.

In front of the pool is one of the center's few figurative pieces, a semi-homorous bronze nude built in the '60's but 19th century in its conception. From this statue, one passes through an arbor of surrealist sculptures including a large metal ear, to the small marble sculpture by the European artist Max Bill mounted on a pedestal directly in front of the museum building.

"Sculpture employs scale in terms of impact. We don't speak of it in terms of a small object, which also has scale," the monumental sculptor Ronald Bladen once explained. In small works scale may be a by-product, as Bladen observed, but the Max Bill piece is small without being intimate and, unlike a few of the pieces that dot the grounds around the museum, the formal garden setting serves to reinforce the piece's stature.

The Max Bill is a forerunner, like the Smiths and Calder, to the newer works that give Storm King its unique character. It is the large-scale sculptures that began being built in the 1960's and which we are now able to measure outside the gallery walls that attest to the ambition, scope, and on-going power of current American sculpture. At Storm King they have found a natural home.

In the middle of a hill at Storm King one sees the von Schlegell, composed of three open aluminum squares, suspended as if floating from their three sets of four narrow steel rods. Each square exists separately and is equidistant from the other two. One is aware of the light on the aluminum bars, the air framed by them, and their distance from each other and the ground as palpable space.

Just over the top of the hill from the von Schlegell are two smaller works by Forrest Myers and Chuck Ginnever. The Myers piece entitled "Mantis" is a cor-ten and stainless steel triangle frame, only one of whose angled sides make an unbroken ascent to the center point. The other two angles open to include rather than frame the panoramic countryside.

Another Myers work set on a hill some 300 yards from the museum building consists of four beams in bronze, stainless steel, cor-ten steel, and concrete that form a series of negative squares. This sculpture, called "Four Corners" is a meditative work, classic in its simplicity and not unakin go a hilltop temple.

These artists, of course, have taken over factory buildings in their quest for space and building correspondingly in their need to insist on the scale of their own personal vision. Life by the middle of the 20th century has ceased being scaled to men's size, and not it seems inevitable that sculpture should in its turn have abandoned the height of man as its measure. By the mid '60's, sculpture in its aspirations had become monumental, and is continuing in the '70's to extend its limits.

In Mountainville, N.Y., the present and undoubtedly future of American sculpture is being laid out for us.

New Conflict-Of-Interest Law Triggers State Resignations

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California's new conflict-of-interest law is triggering resignations from officials who say their private financial dealings aren't any of the public's business.

The law, which takes effect Jan. 1, will prohibit state and local officials from having an economic interest "in substantial conflict" with their duties. It requires officials to disclose investments of more than $1,000 and any income, gifts, or loans of $250 or more.

It's that last requirement that raises some hackles.

The law is "a socialistic plan to keep fellows with more than $35 out of government," says Warner Walker, one of three city councilmen in the Tulare County community of Exeter who say they'll quit because of the disclosure requirement.

Since Gov. Ronald Reagan signed the bill last October, all five members of the Shasta County Planning Commission have quit. So has the planning director. Some commissioners say they had intended to step down anyway.

There have been resignations from the chairman to the Sutter County Planning Commission; two city council members in St. Helena; city council members in the Los Angeles county suburbs of El Mnte and Alhambra, and Marysville planning commissioner.

And three of the five members of the Nevada County Board of Supervisors say they will have to step down after the law goes into effect.

"Perhaps the purpose of the bill is to destroy local government by excluding large portions of the population from serving," says Bob Long, a Nevada County supervisor.

The bill's author, Democratic state Sen. George Moscone of San Francisco, oesn't extend much sympathy to Long.

"As the holder of a public position and public trust he should openly show that he is not personally benefiting or profiting by using his public position," Moscone said.

"Nothing that has transpired since passage of this legislation leads me to believe that the public won't be served b it," Moscone added.

South Fears Migration From North

By JOHN DILLIN
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Attention all teeth-chattering, bone-chilled Yankees:

Are your oil gauges dropping, your electric bills climbing, your woodpiles getting low? Are you weary of glove and muffler weather in your living rooms because of the energy crisis?

Then why not head South — for good.

The prospect of chilled Northerners being driven South by the nation's fuel shortages is not taken lightly in the South. Gov. Reubin O. Askew of Florida, in fact, thinks it might happen — but hopes it won't.

Askew told a reporter the other day that most people probably would rather endure the South's summer heat than the North's winter cold. A real Southern migration could be in prospect, he said.

But with water shortages, pollution problems, and overcrowding of its own, Florida really doesn't relish another population boom in this decade.

What are the prospects of such a southern land rush?

"Not very likely immediately," suggests Larry Long, a demographer with the U.S. Bureau of Census.

More people might move South to retire. But "for working-age people," says Long, "migration relates primarily to jobs and the city. People are not going to move just for the weather. These things change slowly."

The energy crisis, however; could reinforce recent shifts in population migration, which already were favoring areas of the United States with warmer climates.

The shortages, after all, aren't just a short-lived phenomenon, according to the oil industry. Even without the Arab oil embargo, this was supposed to be a fuel-short winter.

Some students of the oil industry say the U.S. faces three to five winters of short supply — and much higher prices for oil.

The Census Bureau, reporting on the 1970-73 period sees the South now sharing, for the first time in this century, in the growth which has characterized the Western states since World War II.

Florida, of course, always has been the exception. It is the East's "California," the premier boom state, a 400-mile-long finger of sand that adds 20 new residents every hour — 480 every day, 3,400 every week.

The influx already has provoked a state land-use law, building moratoriums in some cities, perhaps the nation's most stringent oil-spill law, and the threat of more regulations to follow.

Still, the people come.

Even North Florida, which had previously been overlooked, is feeling the pressure. Condominiums sprout along North Gulf beaches. Resort hotels, like a miniature Miami Beach, have appeared along once-quiet shores near Panama City.

One letter writer to a Florida newspaper, watching the explosive growth, suggests the entire Gulf shoreline, from Florida to Texas, should become an American Riviera — a beautiful resortland of bougainvilleas and quaint resorts, a refuge for chilled Americans from other states.

But most of this century, such dreams have bypassed the other southern states, except Texas. People have looked elsewhere — Chicago, Detroit, Philadelphia — for new jobs, a fresh start.

SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY

Houseboat Dweller Is Found Murdered

The body of a retired Navy commander was found bound and gagged last night on the kitchen floor of his houseboat north of Sausalito.

Dean Prowse, 51, had been tied with black friction tape and neckties, Marin County sheriff's deputies said.

Larry Krause, 23, Prowse's roommate, made the grim discovery when he returned from San Francisco to the houseboat, berthed behind the SFO Heliport, at 11:30 p.m., according to deputies. Krause had been spending Christmas Day with friends.

Investigators said the body was unmarked. Cause of death was undetermined this morning, pending an autopsy by the Marin County coroner's office.

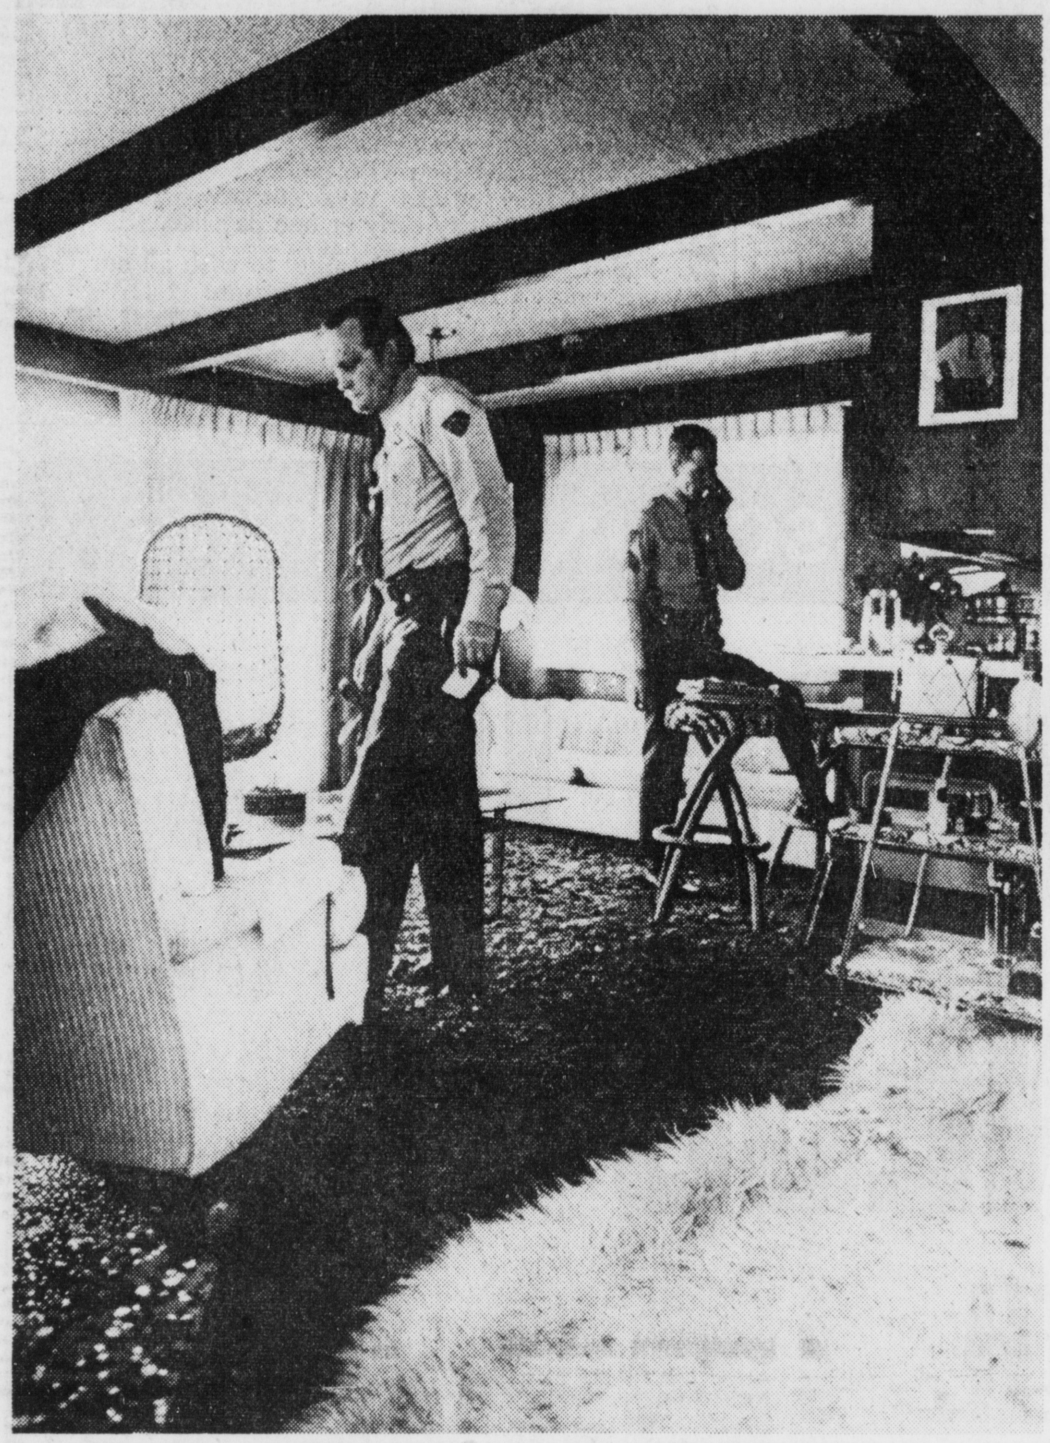
Prowse was found lying face down amid bits of trash and paper on the floor, near a Christmas tree placed on a kitchen table. His hands were bound behind his back and his ankles were tied. Deputies said there was no sign of a struggle.

Police said the victim's car is missing. It was described as a dark brown 1973 Dodge Dart with damage to the left front bumper and left headlight.

Apparently also missing are Prowse's billfold and watch. Deputies said robbery may have been the motive for the slaying.

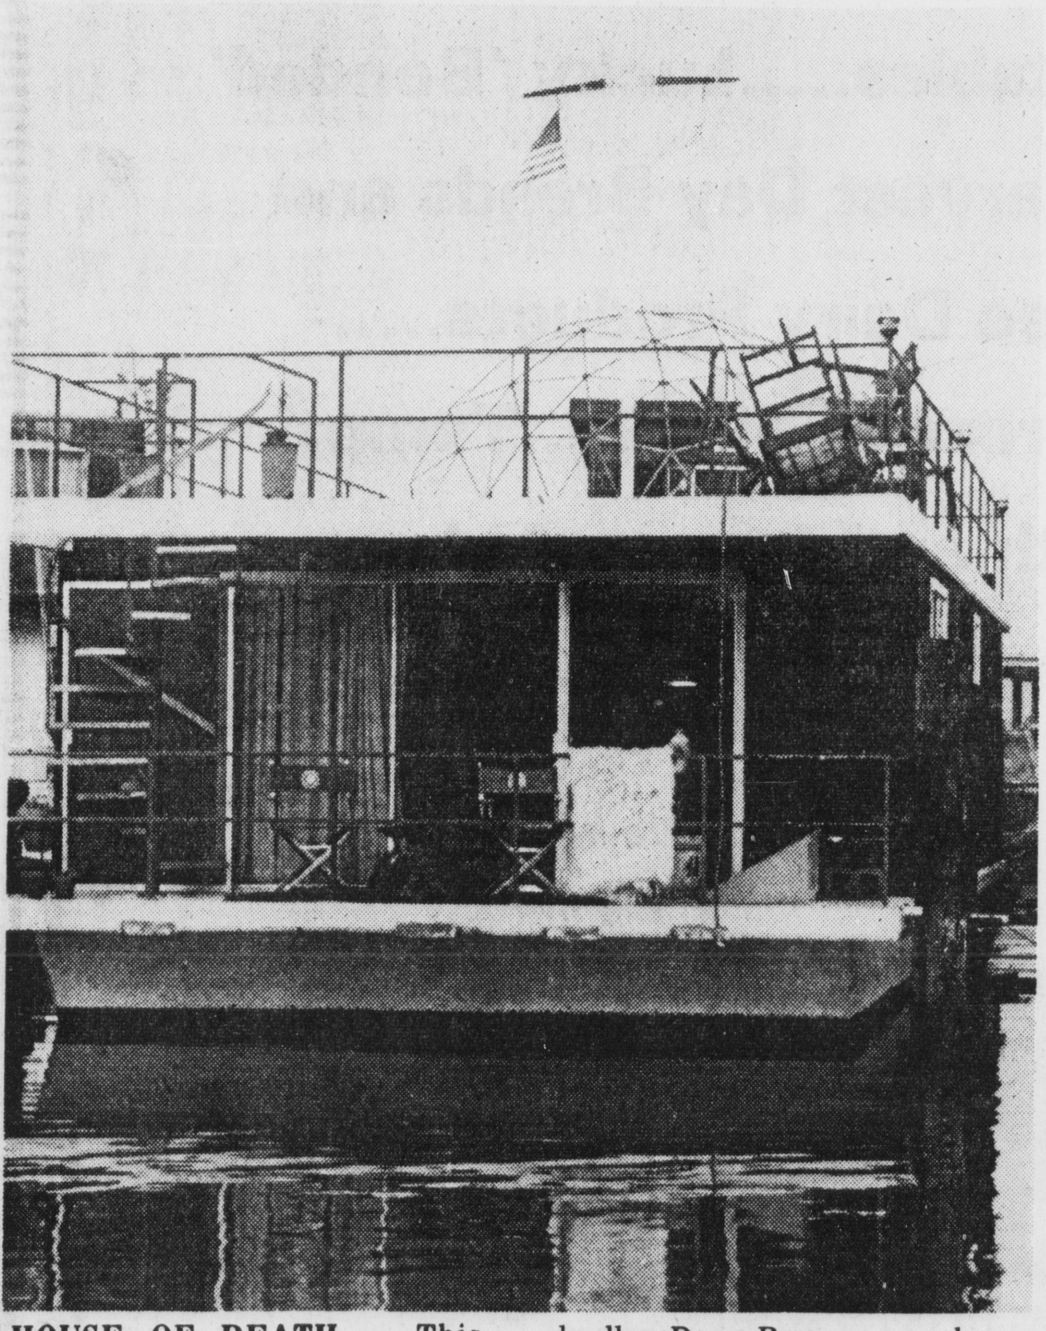
Prowse, a part-time secretary, was last seen alive late yesterday afternoon by neighbors in the tiny houseboat community.

Officers said they are seeking for questioning a man who may have been with Prowse Christmas Day.



SEARCH FOR CLUES — Marin County sheriff's deputies comb the living room of a houseboat on Richardson Bay, seeking to solve the mystery of its occupant's death. The bound, but otherwise unharmed body of Dean Prowse was found last night by a friend with whom he shared the floating home.

(Photos by Alfred M. Arn)



HOUSE OF DEATH — This houseboat, one of a cluster behind the heliport at Waldo Point, was the setting for a fatal Christmas. Sheriff's deputies say houseboat dweller Dean Prowse may have invited in a man bent on robbery and thus unwittingly invited death.

A Peaceful Christmas At Quentin

Christmas was peaceable at San Quentin.

The rigid security measures designed to halt violence in the prison held sway, but there were religious services, the traditional turkey dinner, visits from inmates' families, and a movie for the men in the honor block and prisoners with routine working assignments.

On Christmas Eve, guards gave each of the approximately 3,000 inmates gift bags containing candy, peanuts and fruit.

Raymond Procunier, state corrections chief, hasn't yet acted on plans prepared by San Quentin officials to end the month-long general lockup that Procunier imposed on all California maximum security prisons to halt stabbings and other violence.

William D. Nyberg, San Quentin information officer, said that classification interviews with the inmates have been completed, and only Procunier's approval is needed to put the new operating rules into effect.

GasDealer DoingWell Right Now

By JEFF GREER

There's some glee and much gloom in the life of gasoline service station managers these days.

Many of them say "things are great — right now" but none of the Marin operators contacted by the I-J voiced anything but worry about their prospects for 1974.

Particularly fearful were the owners and operators of independent service stations, that aren't owned by major oil companies. They must try to compete with the companies' own stations for increasingly scarce gasoline.

But anyone who has gasoline to sell is finding it a true seller's market, the dealers say.

Motorists, fearful of being caught short by weekend closings or rumors that rationing could begin any time, seem to want every drop they can squeeze into their cars' tanks and any other kind of gasoline container they can find.

Gone are the days of the price wars, the giveaways and the trade stamps.

Most stations are keeping shorter hours, closing Sundays, and taking long weekends off over Christmas and New Year's.

"A lot of the dealers have been able to save money on help and operating overhead — but they're still held to the May 15 price margins," said Robert Moore of San Rafael. He is executive secretary of the California Service Stations Association and the Marin County Independent Service Stations Association.

In the overall picture, "the confusion is just unbelievable," Moores said. "The situation now is a very mixed blessing.

"We just don't know what next year holds."

He said dealers throughout the state were gloomy over last week's announcement that the Mideast oil countries will increase their prices per barrel of crude oil drastically.

Many independent dealers fear the big companies will put them out of business by not alloting enough gasoline for them to sell. A few stations in Marin and Sonoma counties and many in such places as Oregon's Willamette Valley are being forced to shut down the last few days of each month, due to short allotments.

Some of the Bay Area's largest independent stations are getting only 60 per cent of the gasoline they sold last year, Moore said.

Several Marin County dealers told the Independent-Journal that their allotments were 60 to 80 per cent of last year's monthly sales.

"Yet, in Clear Lake, dealers tell me they are open seven days a week, and getting all the gas they want," Moore said.

He added that, despite all the attention to the controversial Alaska pipeline, there has been little mention of other oil-rich areas in Alaska, reputedly spots "where oil just gushes out of the ground when you scratch it."

He said there was much talk about tapping huge military oil reserves, at last week's national convention of service station association executives.

"I don't know what the answers are," Moore said. "The big oil companies do not seem to have much regard for the public. Look at their profit reports, and they're making big profits."

And yet the big refineries are increasingly short on crude oil, according to news wire reports and oil industry journals, Moore said.

"It seems to me the companies and the administration must have seen this coming years ago. We may have to have government control" to keep the service stations in business and the motorists rolling, Moore concluded.

Hearing Delayed For Ehrlichman, Ellsberg Aides

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A pre-trial hearing in the case of John Ehrlichman and two other former White House aides charged with burglary in the Ellsberg psychiatrist break-in was set over today until Jan. 14.

Lawyers for Ehrlichman, G. Gordon Liddy and David Young agreed in a private session in chambers to permit the prosecution the added time in turning over to the defense a list of witnesses it intends to call.

None of the defendants was in court today.

The trial itself is scheduled to start April 15.

Dymally Opens Campaign For Second Spot

LOS ANGELES (AP) — State Sen. Mervyn Dymally opened his campaign today for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor with a call for greater regulation of the oil industry.

The Los Angeles Democrat told a press conference that oil companies in California should be regulated by the state Public Utilities Commission. He called gasoline a public utility and said it should be regulated like other utilities.

"For most Californians, especially here in Los Angeles, the automobile is not a luxury, it is a necessity. The gasoline that it takes to run our cars is just as much a necessity as the water and electrity that is provided to our homes," Dymally said.

Temporary Road Open On Vista Linda Drive

Mill Valley's Vista Linda Drive, closed by one of the county's most massive rock slides last winter, has been reopened temporarily through the holiday season.

Mayor Jean S. Barnard last week sent notes to Vista Linda homeowners notifying them that an earth and rock road has been opened through the slide area in the 300 block until Jan. 2.

According to deputy city engineer Jesper Strandgaard, bad weather and delays by utility companies kept construction crews from finishing repairs by Christmas, so it was decided to open a temporary road for holiday traffic.

Since last February, Vista Linda residents have been using a steep fire road over Corte Madera Grade to get to their homes.

Strandgaard said that after Jan. 2 new sewer and water lines will be laid under Vista Linda and then final paving will be added to complete work on the $175,000 reconstruction job. Most of the work is being paid for with federal and state storm repair grants.

Strandgaard said final repairs in the slide area will take five to 10 more days. But he said at least one lane of the road will be open most of the time during reconstruction.

However, once the job is done, the city faces the problem of patching up damage done in the repair process. According to Strandgaard, a section of Vista Linda leading from the city golf course to the slide has been chewed up by repair trucks and needs to be overlaid. Parts of the golf course where repair materials were stored also need work, he said.

Identity Of Slain Youth Is Sought

MARINA (UPI) — Monterey County investigators today sought clues to the identity of a youth whose body was found on the beach Christmas eve with 10 bullet wounds.

Officers said the youth, between 16 and 20 years of age, was apparently the victim of an execution killing.

Houseboat Dweller Is Found Murdered

The body of a retired Navy commander was found bound and gagged last night on the kitchen floor of his houseboat north of Sausalito.

Dean Prowse, 51, had been tied with black friction tape and neckties, Marin County sheriff's deputies said.

Larry Krause, 23, Prowse's roommate, made the grim discovery when he returned from San Francisco to the houseboat, berthed behind the SFO Heliport, at 11:30 p.m., according to deputies. Krause had been spending Christmas Day with friends.

Investigators said the body was unmarked. Cause of death was undetermined this morning, pending an autopsy by the Marin County coroner's office.

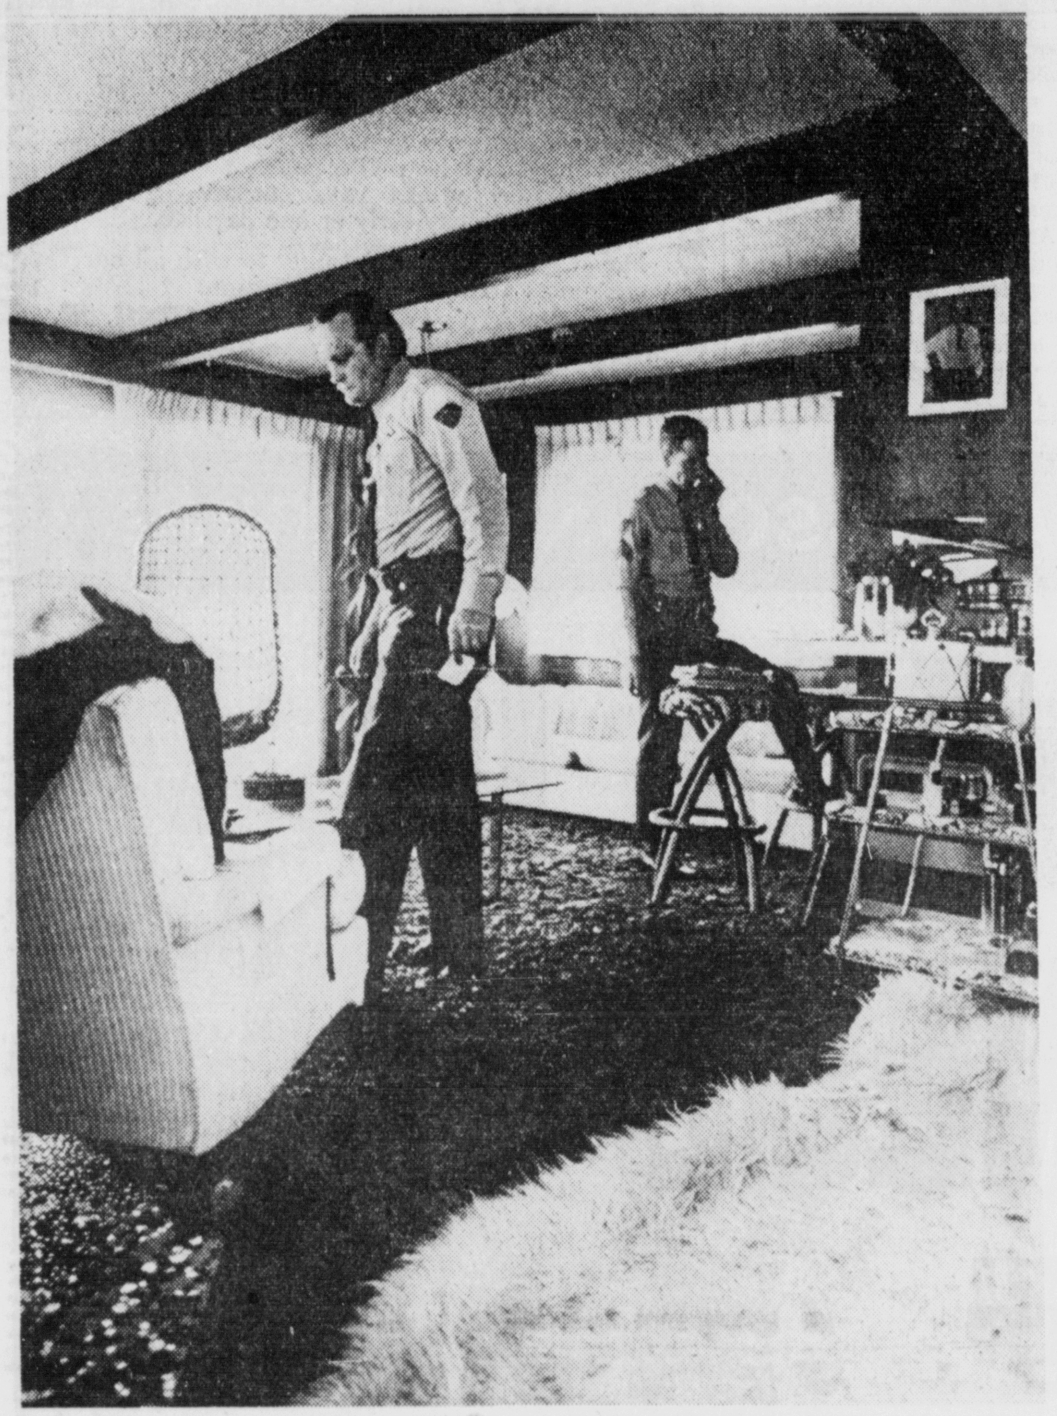
Prowse was found lying face down amid bits of trash and paper on the floor, near a Christmas tree placed on a kitchen table. His hands were bound behind his back and his ankles were tied. Deputies said there was no sign of a struggle.

Police said the victim's car is missing. It was described as a dark brown 1973 Dodge Dart with damage to the left front bumper and left headlight.

Apparently also missing are Prowse's billfold and watch. Deputies said robbery may have been the motive for the slaying.

Prowse, a part-time secretary, was last seen alive late yesterday afternoon by neighbors in the tiny houseboat community.

Officers said they are seeking for questioning a man who may have been with Prowse Christmas Day.



SEARCH FOR CLUES — Marin County sheriff's deputies comb the living room of a houseboat on Richardson Bay, seeking to solve the mystery of its occupant's death. The bound, but otherwise unharmed body of Dean Prowse was found last night by a friend with whom he shared the floating home.

HOUSE OF DEATH — This houseboat, one of a cluster behind the heliport at Waldo Point, was the setting for a fatal Christmas. Sheriff's deputies say houseboat dweller Dean Prowse may have invited in a man bent on robbery and thus unwittingly invited death.

GasDealer DoingWell Right Now

By JEFF GREER

There's some glee and much gloom in the life of gasoline service station managers these days.

Many of them say "things are great — right now" but none of the Marin operators contacted by the I-J voiced anything but worry about their prospects for 1974.

Particularly fearful were the owners and operators of independent service stations, that aren't owned by major oil companies. They must try to compete with the companies' own stations for increasingly scarce gasoline.

But anyone who has gasoline to sell is finding it a true seller's market, the dealers say.

Motorists, fearful of being caught short by weekend closings or rumors that rationing could begin any time, seem to want every drop they can squeeze into their cars' tanks and any other kind of gasoline container they can find.

Gone are the days of the price wars, the giveaways and the trade stamps.

Most stations are keeping shorter hours, closing Sundays, and taking long weekends off over Christmas and New Year's.

"A lot of the dealers have been able to save money on help and operating overhead — but they're still held to the May 15 price margins," said Robert Moore of San Rafael. He is executive secretary of the California Service Stations Association and the Marin County Independent Service Stations Association.

In the overall picture, "the confusion is just unbelievable," Moores said. "The situation now is a very mixed blessing.

"We just don't know what next year holds."

He said dealers throughout the state were gloomy over last week's announcement that the Mideast oil countries will increase their prices per barrel of crude oil drastically.

Many independent dealers fear the big companies will put them out of business by not alloting enough gasoline for them to sell. A few stations in Marin and Sonoma counties and many in such places as Oregon's Willamette Valley are being forced to shut down the last few days of each month, due to short allotments.

Some of the Bay Area's largest independent stations are getting only 60 per cent of the gasoline they sold last year, Moore said.

Several Marin County dealers told the Independent-Journal that their allotments were 60 to 80 per cent of last year's monthly sales.

"Yet, in Clear Lake, dealers tell me they are open seven days a week, and getting all the gas they want," Moore said.

He added that, despite all the attention to the controversial Alaska pipeline, there has been little mention of other oil-rich areas in Alaska, reputedly spots "where oil just gushes out of the ground when you scratch it."

He said there was much talk about tapping huge military oil reserves, at last week's national convention of service station association executives.

And yet the big refineries are increasingly short on crude oil, according to news wire reports and oil industry journals, Moore said.

"It seems to me the companies and the administration must have seen this coming years ago. We may have to have government control" to keep the service stations in business and the motorists rolling, Moore concluded.

A Peaceful Christmas At Quentin

Christmas was peaceable at San Quentin.

The rigid security measures designed to halt violence in the prison held sway, but there were religious services, the traditional turkey dinner, visits from inmates' families, and a movie for the men in the honor block and prisoners with routine working assignments.

On Christmas Eve, guards gave each of the approximately 3,000 inmates gift bags containing candy, peanuts and fruit.

Raymond Procunier, state corrections chief, hasn't yet acted on plans prepared by San Quentin officials to end the month-long general lockup that Procunier imposed on all California maximum security prisons to halt stabbings and other violence.

William D. Nyberg, San Quentin information officer, said that classification interviews with the inmates have been completed, and only Procunier's approval is needed to put the new operating rules into effect.

A COMMEMORATIVE STAMP

With the Mideast war at the bargaining table in Geneva, Egypt this past weekend issued this stamp to commemorate the fighting which broke out on Oct. 6, 1973. President Anwar Sadat is on the upper left hand side and in the center is the Suez Canal with hatch marks illustrating pontoon bridges used to cross to the bank. "Spark" was the code name for the start of the fighting.

Coupon Business Hits Jackpot

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — The manufacturer's promotion gimmick, the housewife's ticket to a few cents savings and the grocer's handling headache have been converted by Al Goldenberg into a business handling $30 million a year.

Goldenberg counts coupons.

By doing so he saves grocers untold hours of work and provides manufacturers an accurate picture of the acceptance of their products and effectiveness of their promotions.

It all began in 1959 when Goldenberg, then a salesman for a business machines firm, read a one-sentence item in a national business report. It said grocers didn't like the thousands of merchandise coupons they were forced to redeem on a variety of products.

Goldenberg decided he could provide a service and make a little money in a part time venture. He persuaded the owner of a chain of five stores to give him a trial.

Goldenberg collected all the coupons the chain had redeemed and spread them on his living room floor. Then he put his parents, his wife and his children—age 5 and 7—to work sorting and counting them. Goldenberg then calculated how much the chain had coming from each manufacturer, sent the grocer a check for the total amount—less an amount for his service—and shipped the coupons off to the various manufacturers, who eventually paid Goldenberg.

Basically the system is still the one used by Goldenberg's American Clearing Service, which has long since expanded out of the living room. Each coupon, in addition to the face value which gives the buyer a reduction on the item purchased, also carries a note to the store that a handling fee—usually 3 cents—will be paid to the store. Goldenberg takes a portion of that handling fee for his services.

By the end of the first month of his trial the owner of the grocery chain told Goldenberg, "It was relief for his office staff and it speeded up the flow of money."

With that initial encouragement Goldenberg sent a letter to 350-400 grocery stores in Oregon, Washington and Idaho, outlining his idea. Thirty-five per cent responded that the idea was a good one. "We signed 90 per cent of those," Goldenberg said.

He kept his job, moved the counting process into his garage and kept the family at work, stretching his own work day to 18-20 hours to keep up with the new business.

In 1961 he expanded into all the western states and in 1966 went national.

American Clearing now serves 8,000 stores in all 50 states and has one signed in Japan.

In addition—for a fee, of course—he provides services to the manufacturers analyzing what percentage of coupons are redeemed, what type of coupon brings best response, what type of store redeems the most coupons and socalled internal redemptions.

The firm employs 30 persons with an annual payroll of $250,000. Coupons with face value of $30 million pour through the company each year.

The company has long since moved from the Goldenberg garage into a one-story building in a suburban area just outside Portland. Goldenberg gave up his business machines job in 1962 about a year after the firm expanded beyond the garage.

American Clearing clients range from corner grocery and drug stores, which redeem coupons valued at $30-$50 a month, to major supermarkets, which take in coupons worth $2,000-$3,000 a month, and chains.

Before Goldenberg and some similar firms came along, many grocers would simply toss their coupons into a drawer and let them pile up until someone had time to count them—sometimes for months. Then there was often a similar wait until the various manufacturers sent the grocer or druggist his money.

Now, the store just bundles up all its coupons and ships them off to American Clearing, where parcels arrive daily by the truckload. As soon as the firm has tallied the coupons, a check for the entire amount goes off to the store. Goldenberg then collects from the manufacturers.

Among his services is spotting fraud. With coupons a multimillion dollar business, coupon fraud has a multimillion dollar potential. Goldenberg knows of one eastern ring involving several million dollars which was broken up not long ago.

"My people can spot a phony coupon right now," Goldenberg said. They can also spot the coupon which has been redeemed as part of a volume gimmick rather than by an individual shopper getting his 10 cents off.

Ironically Goldenberg, the former business machines salesman, has a business which remains almost entirely a hand operation.

Night Of Terror Ends With Nice Christmas

REDFORD, Mich. (UPI) — Two armed gunmen posing as plain clothes policemen turned Christmas 1973 into a nightmare for the Frank Meany family.

But the Meanys escaped without injury and with the feeling that "it was the most beautiful Christmas we ever had."

The two-hour ordeal began when Frank Meany Sr., 54, opened the door of his home in this Detroit suburb early Christmas morning to two men.

The gunmen, one wearing a ski mask, claimed that a security guard at the Southfield K-Mart Discount Store, of which Meany is manager, was in need of aid.

Upon entering the home, the men rounded up Meany's wife, Helen, their 10-year-old son Neal, and Frank Jr., 22, and aimed guns at them while handcuffing Meany Sr., to a chair.

While his family watched, the gunmen forced Meany Sr., into a grueling step-by-step recital of everything they would need to know in order to rob the K-Mart Store.

While one man trained his gun on the hostages, the other took Meany's store keys and the safe's combination and drove the manager's car to the store five miles away.

After binding and gagging the night watchman, the bandit opened the safe and took $91,000. Then he returned to join his partner at the Meany home.

STUDENTS PROTEST — Hoisting a paper-made effigy of South Korean President Park Ching Hee with the sign reading "disgraceful of nation" about 100 students who support the country's premier, Kim Jong-Pil, swarm the gate of the country's foreign office in Tokyo to protest the country's present ministerial conference with Japan. The premier, in a statement from Seoul today, said the government will not tolerate any defiance of its current ruling system.

Call Sounded For S. Korean Stability

SEOUL (UPI) — South Korean Premier Kim Jong-Pil said today the government will not tolerate any defiance of the current ruling system in South Korea, including demands for constitutional revision.

There were recent nationwide antigovernment demonstrations by students and some religious groups seeking such reforms.

In a nationwide radio-television speech, Kim said any challenge to the present political system goes against the basic setup of the state designed to protect the country from Communist threats.

"Though it is said that this is an era of peaceful coexistence, it is an illusion to think that there will be no war in Korea," Kim said. "The North Korean Communists do not subscribe to peaceful coexistence."

Kim said political and social stability must be maintained in South Korea in any event. He said the South Korean people should keep in mind that the Communists, who are located only 30 miles north of Seoul, would take advantage of political and social confusion to create what they call a "revolutionary atmosphere."

"If there are upheavals in our country, dialogues with the North cannot make any progress," Kim said.

"Since students and religious people showed signs of unrest this past fall, the North Korean side has been stalling the South-North dialogues, hoping to mark time and take advantage of it for the creation of a revolutionary atmosphere."

Kim said students and religious people may have taken their actions out of good will, but the North Koreans are trying to gain from such confusion and therefore South Korea must secure stability first.

Kim said: "There are people in the country who seek a constitutional revision and the restoration of democracy, and stage a signature collection campaign.

"And some people are circulating a rumor that the nation will face a crisis in next March or April.

"An argument for a constitutional amendment and such actions as described above are factors of social unrest," Kim said.

"We should not create such factors of unrest but seek a common forum of dialogue among ourselves. We should forego seeking turbulence and upheavals, and for the sake of the people, the government will be cracking down on any factors of unrest."

Despite any difficulties, Kim said, his government will continue to seek dialogue with North Korea.

Oil Embargo Easing Is Applauded

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Europe today praised the Arabs' decision to relax their oil boycott but officials warned that beneficial effects would not be felt for at least six weeks. There were no announced plans to abolish fuel conservation measures.

"This is definitely good news, a most welcome step in the right direction," a British oil industry spokesman said in London. "It is not easy, however, to see how it can lead to a significant change in the allocation system in the short term."

In Brussels, an Economic Ministry spokesman said "our reaction is positive " but noted even if full shipments from the Persian Gulf States are started now, it would take about six weeks before deliveries reach the pre-boycott level.

"So we should expect to have the Sunday driving ban in force for another six weeks," the spokesman said. Belgium is one of a number of European countries that banned Sunday pleasure driving as a means of saving gasoline.

The Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries (OAPEC), after a two-day meeting in Kuwait, said yesterday it would limit its production cuts to 15 per cent of the September level instead of the declared 25 per cent.

Diplomatic sources said the oil ministers decided to maintain their total oil embargo of Holland and the United States, but agreed to give countries "friendly" to the Arab position in the Middle East their "full oil needs."

European countries in this category included Britain, Belgium, France and Spain.

Government and petroleum sources who could be reached during the Christmas holiday said they expected little easing of fuel rationing.

"The decision to increase the production is very satisfactory," said Rolf Af Klintberg, head of the Swedish Petroleum Institute. "But it will be a long time before this affects the Swedish market—probably not until next March—and we must not ease our rationing."

In London, British Trade Secretary Peter Walker said Britain would begin to feel the benefit from the Kuwait decision in February and March.

"But coal is our main problem," he said. "The degree to which we can get more oil will assist to reduce the amount of coal we have to use for our power stations. But this is nowhere near enough to make up for the loss of one-third of our coal production."

The drop in coal output due to labor trouble in the mining industry has forced the government to impose a three-day work week.

Laurence Brinkhorst, State Secretary of Foreign Affairs for Holland, said he was disappointed that the Arabs had decided to continue the oil boycott of the Netherlands.

United States Farm Export Boom Is Seen

By HARRY B. ELLIS
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — United States farm exports may soar to a record-breaking $19 billion during the current fiscal year, with Japan alone buying $3 billion worth of American grains, fruit, cotton, and tobacco.

Communist China, too, whose appetite for food and fiber is soaring, may top $1 million in purchases of U.S. farm products, with soybeans, wheat, and cotton leading the way.

Farm exports to the Soviet Union, while high, are expected to drop below last year's level of almost $1 billion because of bumper Soviet crops.

American farmers, through these giant sales, will help mightily to put overall U.S. foreign trade into the black next year, reports the Department of Agriculture.

Soybeans, the single most valuable export of the United States, plus wheat, feed grains, cotton, and other farm goods will help to offset the skyrocketing fuel import bill paid by Americans.

At this point, with the Arab oil boycott in full swing and with prices of foreign oil spurting even higher, next year's final trade results cannot be gauged.

But, say U.S. officials, one thing is clear: American farm goods will contribute "an all-time high of around $10 billion to next year's trade balance, almost double last year's $5.6 billion.

The $10 billion is the net surplus which may be realized when the value of farm products imported by the United States is subtracted from the value of American farm exports.

While bumper farm sales are all to the good, experts also point out certain negative factors. Much of the value gain of this fiscal year's farm exports stems from higher prices, not from increased volume.

World inflation, in other words, coupled to soaring demand for all the food which American farmers can grow, means higher prices paid by foreigh buyers. It also means higher prices in United States grocery stores, a phenomenon with which American consumers are wearily familiar.

Reserve stocks of all U.S. grains also are being drawn down, some to dangerously low levels, by the unprecedented foreign and domestic demand for food.

"Stocks of all grains on Oct. 1, 1973," reports the crop reporting board of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, "were below a year ago." Stocks of the four feed grains — corn, oats, barley, and sorghum — were 26 per cent less than holdings of a year before.

Wheat reserves also are sharply below what experts consider the safe level of "one year's milling requirement," or more than 16 million tons.

Putting all these factors together, farm exports still constitute a major plus for the United States, in the view of U.S. trade officials.

Crop exports are measured in fiscal years, from July 1 to June 30. Thus this year's projected exports of $19 billion contribute both to the 1973 and 1974 trade results, which are measured in calendar years.

Last year overall U.S. foreign trade was $6.33 billion in the red. This year American trade has climbed into the black and may chalk up a final surplus in the neighborhood of $2 billion — thanks partly to dollar devaluation but also in large measure to booming farm exports.

Underground House Is Proven Pleasant And Practical

By JANE ANN MORRISON
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

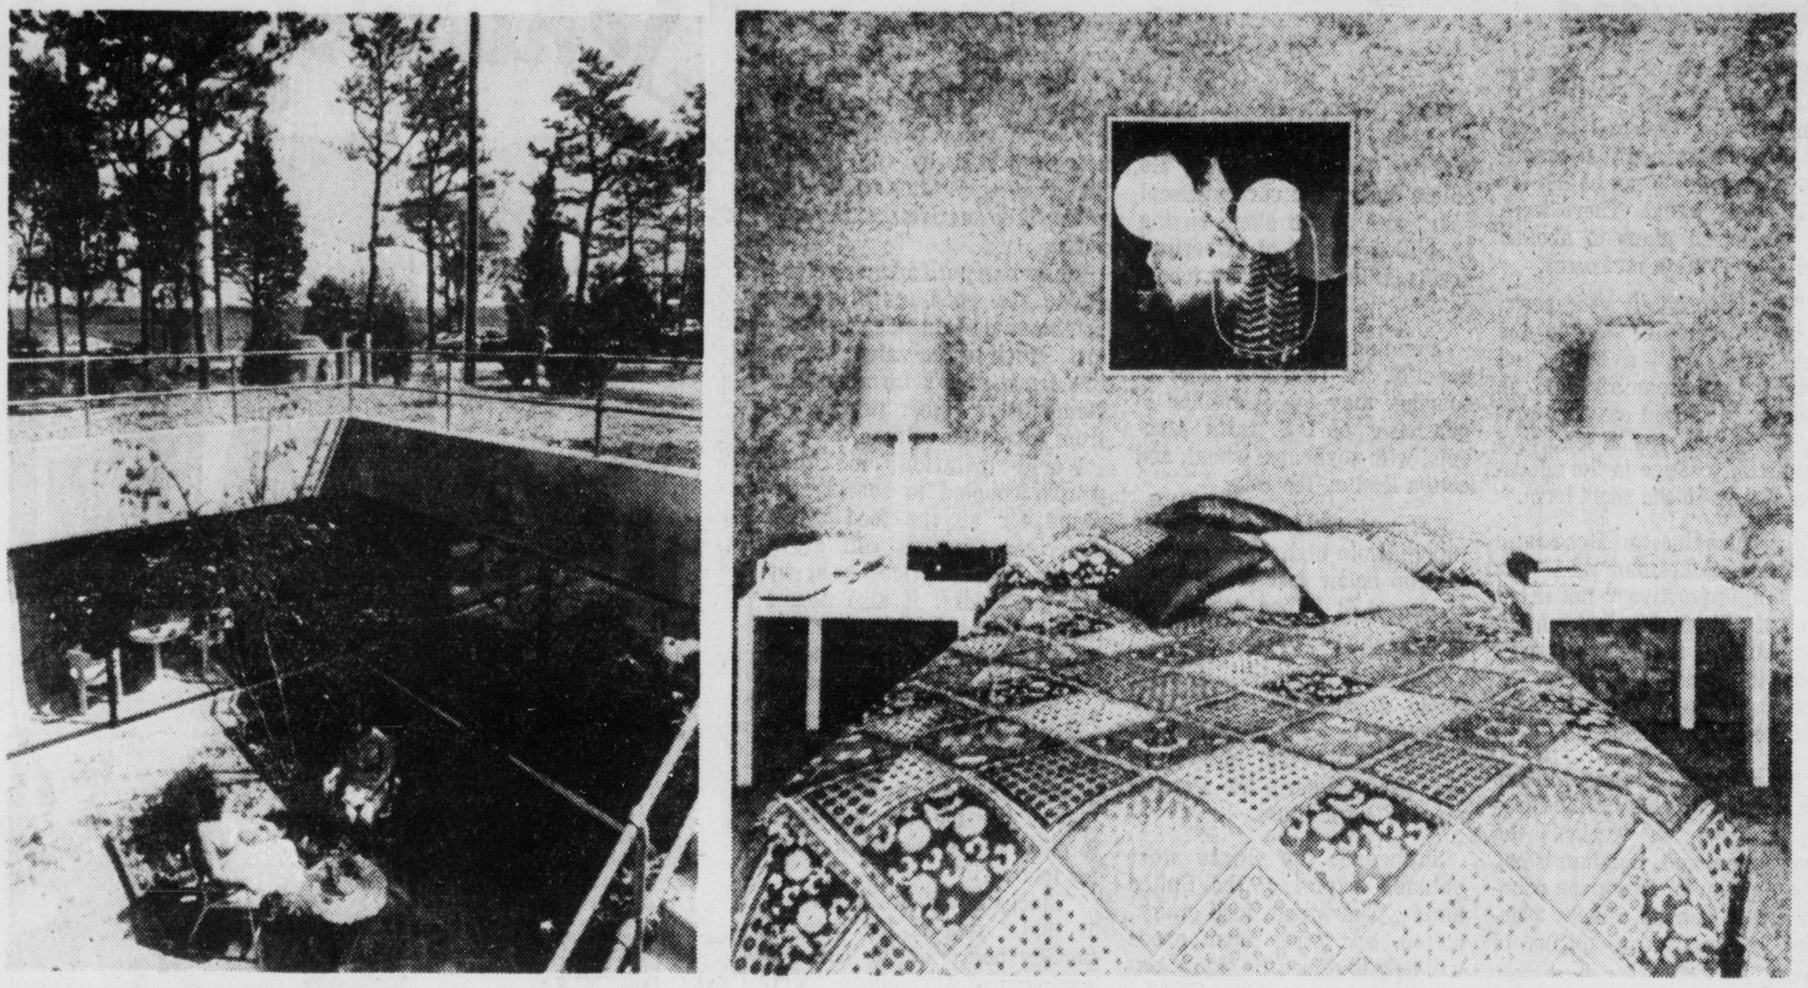
MARSTONS MILLS, Mass. — Many people associate living underground with air-raid shelters and Alice in Wonderland. But architect John Barnard is proving that an underground house can be both pleasant and practical.

Ever since his high-school days, Barnard had been intrigued with the idea of building a house underground around an open courtyard — making use of the ground's temperature stability and the sun's heat and light. Foreseeing the fuel crisis, he decided to design and build a house here in Marstons Mills using this concept.

A family is living in the "Ecology House" this winter, and carefully measuring the heat loss. It is estimated that fuel costs will be cut by 80 per cent. Architect Barnard feels this will be a good test of its commercial possibilities.

Another advantage of underground living is that noise pollution is decreased enormously. Barnard says, "The only way you could hear an airplane would be if it flew directly over the atrium."

The possible problems involved in a house like this are mildew, water seepage, and strength of structure. Mildew is controlled by a dehumidifier which is on all year round.



UNDERGROUND HOUSE — A feature of the Barnard's underground house in Marstons Mills, Mass., is a sunken patio (left), while the interior features floor-to-ceiling carpeting (right).

(Christian Science Monitor Photos)

"Humidity is a problem for any house on Cape Cod, not just one built underground," says Barnard's wife Barbara.

The insulation of hot pitch poured over fiberglass webbing seals out any water leakage. Two inches of styrofoam on the outside rather than the inside provide further insulation.

The walls, floors, and ceiling are constructed of reinforced concrete up to eight inches thick, which makes the house fireproof, termiteproof, and rotproof.

To prevent water seepage and control the strength of the structure the construction must be exact. That's why Barnard wants to make the house available on a franchise basis rather than by furnishing plans.

The exterior is maintenance-free (except for weeding, mowing, or pruning, of course).

Within, the walls are made of sheetrock, the doors are laminated, and the ceiling is painted cement — all factors contributing to low maintenance cost-wise and time-wise.

The Barnards carpeted most of the walls in the house as a decorating effect — not, they were quick to add, for any further insulation.

Barnard notes that his plan is easily adaptable to schools, offices, and entire communities. Building underground can be done to any area, except one where the water table is too high or where a ledge would call for expensive blasting.

Last July and August, the house was opened for fund-raising tours for the New England Home for Little Wanderers. An estimated 10,000 people visited it, many showing a keen interest in the low cost ($24,900) and the low maintenance of the house which includes a living room, dining area and kitchen, utility room, bedroom and bathroom.

Barnard is planning to put a plastic bubble over the atrium to see if it can be used during the winter both for space and growing plants. In the distant future he says, "I want to play with solar heating for the house and — at some point —wind power."

Nuclear Comeback In Oil Shortage

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — Thanks to the oil shortage, nuclear energy is making a comeback. But things aren't all that rosy in the nuclear picture, either.

Many new nuclear energy plants are expected to go into operation in the 1980s, according to a report from the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), the economic adviser to the non-Communist world.

Although the report does not say the politically touchy oil crisis is responsible for the resurgence of nuclear energy, (OECD) officials privately say the Arab oil squeeze is prompting nations to seek other means of energy so as not to be at the mercy of Arab oil shutoffs.

France was the first nation after the newest Middle East War to announce that by 1977 it would build only nuclear power plants to produce electricity, giving up all conventional plants using oil or other fuels.

France has rushed five new nuclear power plants into construction since the Arab states began to raise oil prices. Three more plants are planned for 1974.

But OECD officials say so many other countries are expected to join France that there will not be enough uranium available to fuel atomic generators unless nations launch emergency programs to find new deposits.

The OECD report says the non-Communist world uranium production was 25,500 tons in 1972. With present known resources, this production could be stretched to 65,000 tons by 1978.

The OECD expects that the demand for uranium for nuclear energy plants to quadruple by 1985.

Because it takes about eight years to mine uranium ore and process it, "it is essential that steps be taken to increase exploration for uranium," the report warns.

One official of the OECD Nuclear Energy Agency says "unfortunately, nuclear energy can be no immediate solution to the oil crisis but it can be a long-range program."

Early in the 1950s, in a euphoria over its discovery, the world plotted extensive use of nuclear energy. But the high cost of mining the necessary uranium and the wide availability of oil, coal and other fuels cooled the nuclear idea in the late 1950s and 1960s. So did objections from environmentalists over alleged pollution from nuclear energy plants.

Uranium production has been coasting at roughly the same levels in the non-Communist world's biggest uranium producing countries, the United States, Canada, South Africa and France.

Australia closed two plants. Canada closed four, and its government kept the uranium mine industry going "after the collapse of the uranium markets in the '50s and '60s," OECD says.

South Africa had 26 uranium mines and 17 ore processing plants in 1960. By 1965 there were 12 mines and seven plants.

When the Arab oil-producing countries began asking price boosts approximately three years ago and the world began to worry about energy, the nuclear picture began to change.

Uranium mining increased, with three new ore processing plants opened in 1972. Japan opened a plant in 1970 and Australia is reopening one in 1975. France in 1972 suggested that the Common Market countries chip in to build an ore processing plant, and in November France renewed its proposal.

From the jungles of Korea to the rocky hills of Greece, government-sponsored prospectors in 31 countries are drilling for uranium. But the OECD warns explorations are "not increasing sufficiently."

Currently there is an oversupply of uranium because the demand is low. However, OECD predicts "a shortage and unstable market" in the 1980s unless governments and mining companies start planning for the oil-less nuclear energy boom now.

Here's som of what is being done in exploration:

Argentina: Discovered likely fields and began drilling in 1972.

Australia: Found two new reserves "and when the market improves in the early 1980s, production expansion will occur," OECD says.

Brazil: In 1970 increased its uranium exploration budget five times over 1969. Geologists plan 37 mines.

Canada: Two new mining fields found in Saskatchewan and Ontario provinces, but mining activity "declined to very low levels because of poor markets," OECD says.

Gabon: Has found new deposits and is one of the non-Communist world's 13 uranium producing countries.

Mexico: Plans to increase ore production by 1975.

Portugal: Began active Mining in 1971.

Spain and Sweden: Exploring and planning to increase production.

Prospecting has found smaller uranium deposits in Austria, Egypt, Germany, Greece, Iran, Korea, Norway, Switerzerland, Britain, Denmark, Finland and Italy.

Cost Of College Keeps Going Up

NEW YORK (UPI) — Going up ... the cost of college.

In the 1973-74 school year, basic charges in public colleges and universities across the land will have increased an average of about five per cent. In the last five years, tuition fees and room and board charges have gone up by 26 per cent, according to a survey of public colleges and universities and private residential colleges. The Life Insurance Agency Management Association made the study.

Truckers Know Of Night Road Hazard

NEW YORK (UPI) — Why do professional truck drivers slow down at night? Because they know visibility distance decreases by 20 feet with each additional 10 miles per hour, says Clark Equipment Trailer Division.

Motorists can help prevent their eyes from playing tricks on them at night by pausing before pulling onto a highway from a brightly lit place, shifting their gaze while driving and training themselves to look beyond their headlights.

History Of Texas Land Is Published

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The State Land Commission has published a 54-page color illustrated book that traces the history of state land and its designation to support public schools.

"This book is the story of how we got to where we are today— of how we became the only state to enter the Union retaining title to its public lands, what we then did with them, received from them, and finally, what we have left," says Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong.

Underground House Is Proven Pleasant And Practical

By JANE ANN MORRISON
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

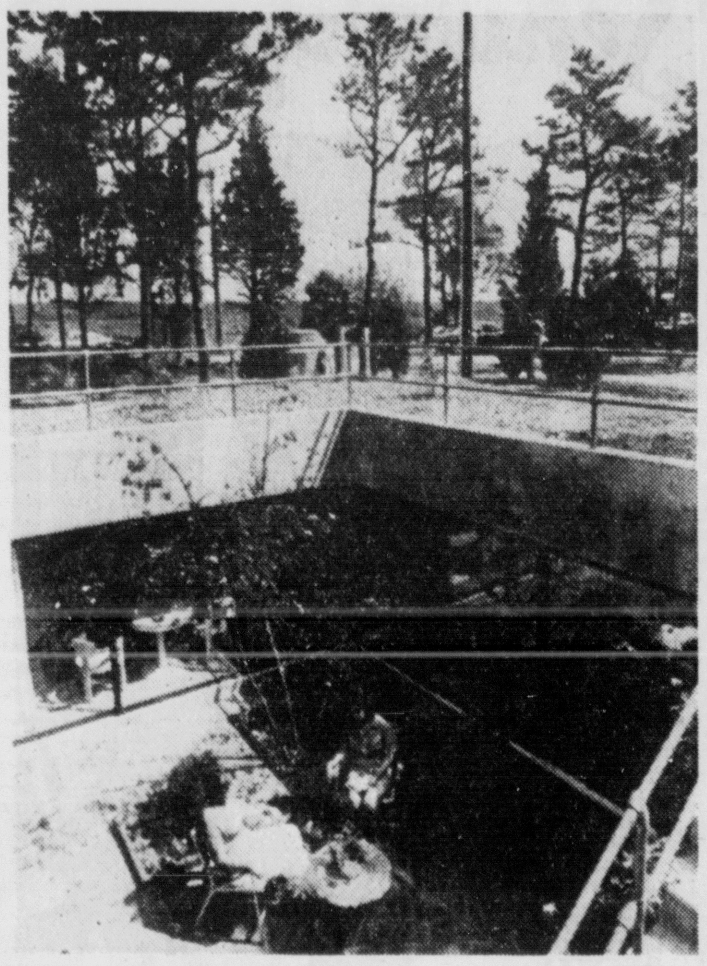
MARSTONS MILLS, Mass. — Many people associate living underground with air-raid shelters and Alice in Wonderland. But architect John Barnard is proving that an underground house can be both pleasant and practical.

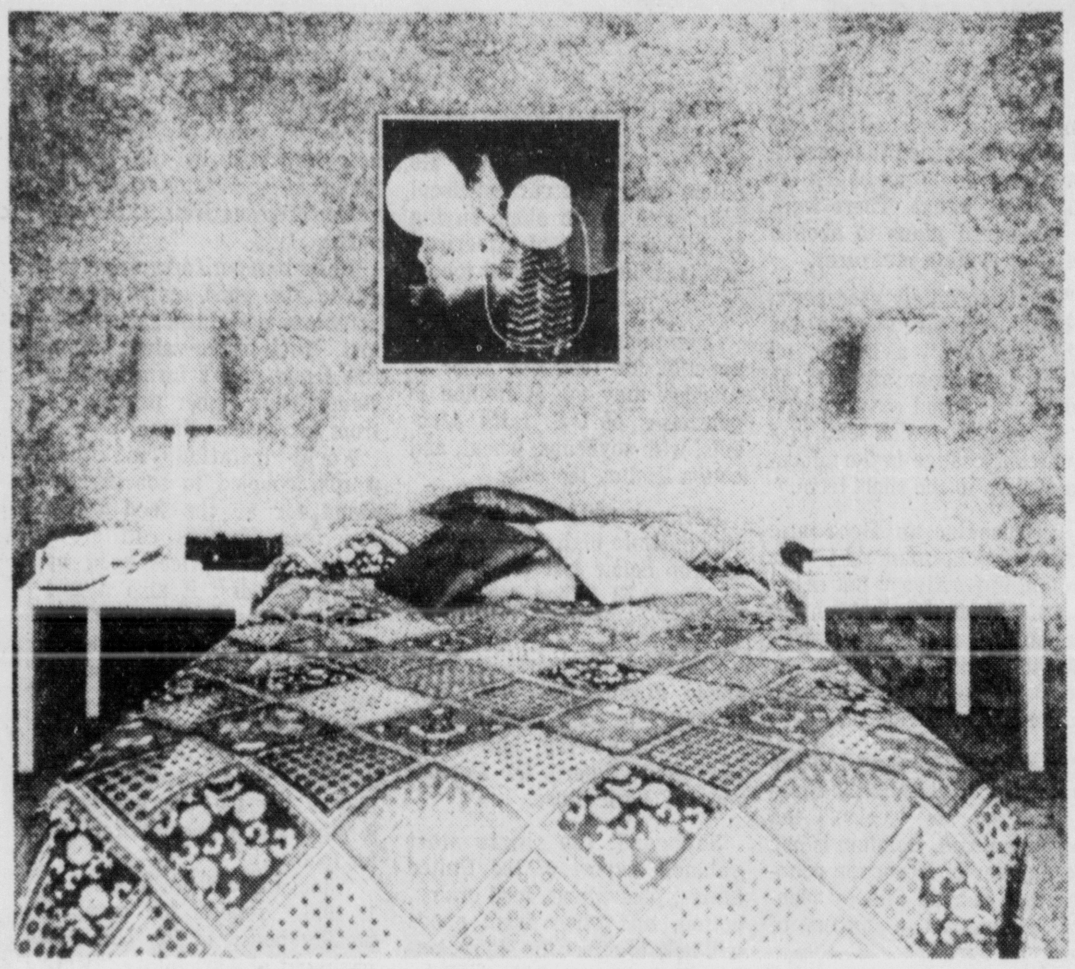
Ever since his high-school days, Barnard had been intrigued with the idea of building a house underground around an open courtyard — making use of the ground's temperature stability and the sun's heat and light. Foreseeing the fuel crisis, he decided to design and build a house here in Marstons Mills using this concept.

A family is living in the "Ecology House" this winter, and carefully measuring the heat loss. It is estimated that fuel costs will be cut by 80 per cent. Architect Barnard feels this will be a good test of its commercial possibilities.

Another advantage of underground living is that noise pollution is decreased enormously. Barnard says, "The only way you could hear an airplane would be if it flew directly over the atrium."

The possible problems involved in a house like this are mildew, water seepage, and strength of structure. Mildew is controlled by a dehumidifier which is on all year round.





UNDERGROUND HOUSE — A feature of the Barnard's underground house in Marstons Mills, Mass., is a sunken patio (left), while the interior features floor-to-ceiling carpeting (right).

(Christian Science Monitor Photos)

"Humidity is a problem for any house on Cape Cod, not just one built underground," says Barnard's wife Barbara.

The insulation of hot pitch poured over fiberglass webbing seals out any water leakage. Two inches of styrofoam on the outside rather than the inside provide further insulation.

The walls, floors, and ceiling are constructed of reinforced concrete up to eight inches thick, which makes the house fireproof, termiteproof, and rotproof.

To prevent water seepage and control the strength of the structure the construction must be exact. That's why Barnard wants to make the house available on a franchise basis rather than by furnishing plans.

The exterior is maintenance-free (except for weeding, mowing, or pruning, of course).

Within, the walls are made of sheetrock, the doors are laminated, and the ceiling is painted cement — all factors contributing to low maintenance costwise and time-wise.

The Barnards carpeted most of the walls in the house as a decorating effect — not, they were quick to add, for any further insulation.

Barnard notes that his plan is easily adaptable to schools, offices, and entire communities. Building underground can be done to any area, except one where the water table is too high or where a ledge would call for expensive blasting.

Last July and August, the house was opened for fund-raising tours for the New England Home for Little Wanderers. An estimated 10,000 people visited it, many showing a keen interest in the low cost ($24,900) and the low maintenance of the house which includes a living room, dining area and kitchen, utility room, bedroom and bathroom.

Barnard is planning to put a plastic bubble over the atrium to see if it can be used during the winter both for space and growing plants. In the distant future he says, "I want to play with solar heating for the house and — at some point —wind power."

Nuclear Comeback In Oil Shortage

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — Thanks to the oil shortage, nuclear energy is making a comeback. But things aren't all that rosy in the nuclear picture, either.

Many new nuclear energy plants are expected to go into operation in the 1980s, according to a report from the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), the economic adviser to the non-Communist world.

Although the report does not say the politically touchy oil crisis is responsible for the resurgence of nuclear energy, (OECD) officials privately say the Arab oil squeeze is prompting nations to seek other means of energy so as not to be at the mercy of Arab oil shutoffs.

France was the first nation after the newest Middle East War to announce that by 1977 it would build only nuclear power plants to produce electricity, giving up all conventional plants using oil or other fuels.

France has rushed five new nuclear power plants into construction since the Arab states began to raise oil prices. Three more plants are planned for 1974.

But OECD officials say so many other countries are expected to join France that there will not be enough uranium available to fuel atomic generators unless nations launch emergency programs to find new deposits.

The OECD report says the non-Communist world uranium production was 25,500 tons in 1972. With present known resources, this production could be stretched to 65,000 tons by 1978.

The OECD expects that the demand for uranium for nuclear energy plants to quadruple by 1985.

Because it takes about eight years to mine uranium ore and process it, "it is essential that steps be taken to increase exploration for uranium," the report warns.

One official of the OECD Nuclear Energy Agency says "unfortunately, nuclear energy can be no immediate solution to the oil crisis but it can be a long-range program."

Early in the 1950s, in a euphoria over its discovery, the world plotted extensive use of nuclear energy. But the high cost of mining the necessary uranium and the wide availability of oil, coal and other fuels cooled the nuclear idea in the late 1950s and 1960s. So did objections from environmentalists over alleged pollution from nuclear energy plants.

Uranium production has been coasting at roughly the same levels in the non-Communist world's biggest uranium producing countries, the United States, Canada, South Africa and France.

Australia closed two plants. Canada closed four, and its government kept the uranium mine industry going "after the collapse of the uranium markets in the '50s and '60s," OECD says.

South Africa had 26 uranium mines and 17 ore processing plants in 1960. By 1965 there were 12 mines and seven plants.

When the Arab oil-producing countries began asking price boosts approximately three years ago and the world began to worry about energy, the nuclear picture began to change.

Uranium mining increased, with three new ore processing plants opened in 1972. Japan opened a plant in 1970 and Australia is reopening one in 1975. France in 1972 suggested that the Common Market countries chip in to build an ore processing plant, and in November France renewed its proposal.

From the jungles of Korea to the rocky hills of Greece, government-sponsored prospectors in 31 countries are drilling for uranium. But the OECD warns explorations are "not increasing sufficiently."

Currently there is an oversupply of uranium because the demand is low. However, OECD predicts "a shortage and unstable market" in the 1980s unless governments and mining companies start planning for the oil-less nuclear energy boom now.

Here's som of what is being done in exploration:

Argentina: Discovered likely fields and began drilling in 1972.

Australia: Found two new reserves "and when the market improves in the early 1980s, production expansion will occur," OECD says.

Brazil: In 1970 increased its uranium exploration budget five times over 1969. Geologists plan 37 mines.

Canada: Two new mining fields found in Saskatchewan and Ontario provinces, but mining activity "declined to very low levels because of poor markets," OECD says.

Gabon: Has found new deposits and is one of the non-Communist world's 13 uranium producing countries.

Mexico: Plans to increase ore production by 1975.

Portugal: Began active Mining in 1971.

Spain and Sweden: Exploring and planning to increase production.

Prospecting has found smaller uranium deposits in Austria, Egypt, Germany, Greece, Iran, Korea, Norway, Switerzerland, Britain, Denmark, Finland and Italy.

Cost Of College Keeps Going Up

NEW YORK (UPI) — Going up ... the cost of college.

In the 1973-74 school year, basic charges in public colleges and universities across the land will have increased an average of about five per cent. In the last five years, tuition fees and room and board charges have gone up by 26 per cent, according to a survey of public colleges and universities and private residential colleges. The Life Insurance Agency Management Association made the study.

Truckers Know Of Night Road Hazard

NEW YORK (UPI) — Why do professional truck drivers slow down at night? Because they know visibility distance decreases by 20 feet with each additional 10 miles per hour, says Clark Equipment Trailer Division.

Motorists can help prevent their eyes from playing tricks on them at night by pausing before pulling onto a highway from a brightly lit place, shifting their gaze while driving and training themselves to look beyond their headlights.

History Of Texas Land Is Published

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The State Land Commission has published a 54-page color illustrated book that traces the history of state land and its designation to support public schools.

"This book is the story of how we got to where we are today— of how we became the only state to enter the Union retaining title to its public lands, what we then did with them, received from them, and finally, what we have left," says Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong.

Electricity Use Shows A Decrease

By FLORENCE MOUCKLEY
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

Americans are saying "yes" to the request that they cut back on their use of electricity.

A Monitor survey of utility companies across the country finds that, aided by unseasonably mild weather, less electricity and natural gas are being used as compared with the same period last year.

Utility spokesmen say, however, it is too early to tell whether people will keep their thermostats lower as the winter progresses.

The New England Power Exchange, a group of companies serving 4.4 million customers in six New England states, is registering a 6 per cent reduction in the use of electricity or enough to supply a million homes with a normal electricity requirements for one month.

The Commonwealth Edison Company in Chicago reports a 2 per cent decrease in electricity use. Chicago is in a more favorable position because its main source of power is coal.

The Georgia Power Company — serving 98 per cent of the state — which usually chalks up a whopping 10 per cent increase in the demand for electrical power a year, records "some cutback" in its growth rate, officials say.

The Los Angeles Department of Water and Power, which similarly has a rise in demand each year, finds its growth rate is slowing by 2 per cent.

In New York City, Consolidated Edison noted a "dramatic decrease" of 6 per cent in customers' use of electricity, natural gas, and steam last month.

Many gas company officials say it is not yet known how much reductions of gas use are due to the mild November and early December weather rather than to voluntary action.

The Washington Natural Gas Company in Seattle says that it suspects that it is possible that consumption has been reduced.

The Northern Illinois Gas Company, which serves 1.2 million customers in suburban and rural aras, says there has been a definite reduction in gas consumption, but the company's still in the process of compiling figures.

Utility officials across the country say that response to the energy crisis is gathering momentum. People are more conscious of turning off lights when they leave a room, turning thermostats down, switching off TV sets when not in use, and using appliances more sparingly, they report.

Water Is Not Favorite Drink

NEW YORK (UPI) — Attempts to find a connection between the water people drink and their health are fallacious, according to a leading nutrionist. The fact is that people just don't drink much water.

"Consider the relative amounts of water, as such, that you drink and the volume of canned soups, juices, beer, soft drinks and the cocktails that you consume," said Dr. Olaf Mickelsen. "They get needed liquids from all kinds of sources. But water, seldom."

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — More than 36,000 Americans and 67,000 natives of 120 foreign countries have participated in a worldwide educational exchange program since the Fulbright scholarship program was established in 1946.

Dr. James R. Roach of the University of Texas, chairman of the U.S. Board of Foreign Scholarships, said 962 Americans are currently studying and teaching abroad on Fulbright awards and more than 4,200 foreign students and scholars are in the United States.

SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY
34 SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1973 EDITORIAL PAGE

TODAY'S EDITORIAL

Who Are The Clients Of The County Counsel?

The California Legislature, responding to obvious public demand for more accountability for public officials, this year passed a tough disclosure law designed to prevent such officials from concealing possible conflicts of interest.

The law requires that constitutional officers, county supervisors and administrators, mayors, city councilmen, planning commissioners and planning officers, and city managers and administrators file annual statements detailing their private holdings and earnings.

LAST WEEK in San Francisco, Secy. of State Edmund G. Brown Jr., held one of a series of public hearings designed to inform officials of what the law would mean to them.

Not surprisingly, some objections were raised. And one of them was by Douglas J. Maloney, the Marin County counsel.

Maloney held that the new law might run counter to the doctrine of attorney-client privilege.

This raised an obvious question: Who are the county counsel's clients?

We asked Maloney about this. He replied that he considers the board of supervisors and the various school boards which the counsel serves as legal representative to be his clients.

THE COUNTY COUNSEL'S office was created in Marin by action of the board of supervisors in 1956. It took over the duties formerly performed by the civil division of the district attorney's office.

The district attorney is an elected official. He knows who his client is. It is the public.

But the county counsel — at least in Maloney's case — envisions the board as his client. He sees himself, apparently, as the board of supervisors' Fred Buzhardt.

SURELY MALONEY did not arrive at this conception (or misconception) of his role solely on his own. He must have been given to understand by the current or a former board of supervisors that this was what was expected of him.

Yet we find no legal basis for the board of supervisors, or a school board, to have a private attorney (in fact, six private attorneys, for Maloney has five assistants and deputies) at public expense.

The new disclosure act is in the public interest. The public is entitled to know the financial interests of its officials — in case those interests ever should conflict with the public interest.

If the county counsel envisions his role as that of protecting the officials against such disclosure, he must consider it is quite proper and honorable for him to protect the officials' private interests against the public interest.

Surely the board of supervisors will set the counsel straight on this matter.

Nursing Home Residents Die Because Standards Not Enforced

WASHINGTON — When it snows hard and freezes deep, as it has in so much of the country lately, people turn up the heat and the danger of tragic fires shoots upward. When the Christmas holidays come, most people think of their parents or family old folks — well over half a million of whom are living their last years in nursing homes. It seems a combination of circumstances in which public interest would demand that those elderly citizens be protected from potential death by fire.

But unfortunately the holidays do not last long, and it takes months, years, sometimes seemingly forever to get laws passed and enforced to protect those people from fatal fires. The Christmas spirit is nice, but not enough.

FOR EXAMPLE, exactly three weeks before Christmas, 98 patients were living at the Caley Nursing Home and Convalescent Center, at Wayne, Pa., just outside Philadelphia. About 9 a.m., a fire broke out in a closet and grew to generate dense billows of deadly smoke. Nine persons died.

Overnight, Mal Schecter, the crusading Washington editor of Hospital Practice magazine, was asking why. His inquiry has now been followed up by the National Consumers League, whose president is Esther Peterson, former White House consumer adviser.

Schecter reported that fire doors were absent between new and old sections of the nursing home, in violation of the life safety code of the National Fire Protection Association — which is specified as part of the Social Security Act on Medicare and Medicaid.

Mrs. Peterson, after the same finding, has fired off a letter to Sen. Frank Moss of Utah, chairman of the long-term care subcommittee of the Senate Committee on the Aging. She calls for a national inquest into the government's failure to assure safe and decent care to nursing home residents.

Both Schecter and Peterson refer not only to the Wayne fire but also to another at Washington Hill in west Philadelphia in September, and both relate the failure to make improvements back four years to the Marietta, Ohio, fire in which 32 patients died of suffocation — in another home that lacked fire doors.

SAFETY AMENDMENTS sponsored by Moss were signed into law in January, 1968, well before all of these fires. Yet the changes required by the law were not made, and the people died — and thousands more are "literally on the brink of disaster" now because of regulatory failure, Mrs. Peterson declares.

She makes two charges:

1 — "Essentially, the law and the commands of the president have been somehow set aside."

2 — "President Nixon in 1971 declared that federal subsidies would not go into substandard facilities. But that is exactly what has gone on in Pennsylvania and, we suspect, elsewhere."

Schecter has documented in addition that in several recent years forms filled out by Pennsylvania officials for federal use reported that fire sprinklers existed in the Wayne nursing home — when in fact they did not.

SPEAKING DIRECTLY to this bureaucratic malaise, Mrs. Peterson calls for a joint congressional investigation of "what has happened to the enforcement process and why not even the express command of the president and Congress is followed by the federal and state bureaucracies."

Of course there is no way Congress can consider her proposal before it returns to town in late January, and by then it may no longer be in the Christmas spirit.

ROSCOE DRUMMOND: Unanswered Questions

WASHINGTON — Those who wish the president well continue to be puzzled and deeply disturbed by two unanswered questions:

If Watergate in all its varied crimes was "stupid, asinine and naive," as Vice President Gerald Ford said last week, can this mean anything other than that highly placed trusted aides, appointed by Mr. Nixon, were "stupid, asinine and naive"?

Since it is now into the second year after the Watergate offenses came into the open, why is it that the president has not by this time been able to demonstrate to most Americans that his knowing involvement was very minor?

These are valid questions, and it is clear that the absence of persuasive answers is causing the nation great anguish.

IT IS ALTOGETHER too simple an explanation of the Watergate crimes to describe them as so stupid that no sensible person would commit them.

They were committed, and those who authorized or permitted them were not stupid. They knew what they were doing, and they used the power of the presidency to do it. They also used the resources of the presidency to try to cover up what they did.

If the Watergate crimes were stupid mistakes, they would soon fade and be forgotten. Instead, they were calculated, gross abuses of the power of the presidency — a power exercised without the traditional and proper restraints of the American political system.

These abuses have been visible for all to see for many months, and some who participated in them are in the process of being judged in the courts. But if President Nixon's personal involvement was peripheral — and thus far there is no significant evidence that it wasn't — then why hasn't the president been able to do better convincing public opinion that he is innocent of wrongdoing?

THE ANSWER, it seems to me, is that Mr. Nixon has been addressing himself to the wrong questions. Most of the time he has been talking about the incidents of Watergate, about the symptoms instead of the disease which brought on Watergate. He has talked about getting out the facts of what happened.

Of course the public wants the facts on these matters, but these are not what cause the deepest doubts and reservations in the minds of many people.

I believe the public wants evidence that Richard Nixon is openly and acutely conscious of what was wrong in his conduct of the presidency which could breed and permit such abuse of presidential power by those who acted in his name, if not with his explicit knowledge.

PROF. PHILIP B. KURLAND, editor of the Supreme Court Review and a teacher at the University of Chicago law school, goes to the heart of the matter in an article in the Wall Street Journal. He says:

"The danger to American democracy and freedom rests not so much in the presidency itself but in the court that surrounds the presidency. In the Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon administrations we have gone back in history to the time when the king and his council wielded all the national governmental authority.

"I don't yet know when the euphemism 'the White House' first came into use as a description of something other than the presidential mansion at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue. But it was exactly then when the White House became what it now is, a fourth branch of government, that we started down the road to Watergate.

"The American body politic is suffering not from what Senator Fulbright once described as the 'arrogance of power' but rather from the power of arrogance."

To recover credibility and confidence, I believe President Nixon must discuss these matters frankly and forthrightly.

Solution To Our Problems: Follow Bible Teachings

By RUS WALTON

For just about three years, Sweetwife and I have been writing the conservative side of the news from Babylon by the Sacramento. She does the work, I get the by-line.

This week, we are changing the usual thrust of our column. Because it's Christmas time and we think the message of Christmas has an especially deep meaning to America at this difficult time.

It's no secret that the vast majority of Californians are distressed over the politics of the day: the seeming incapability of scores of politicians and hordes of bureaucrats to deal effectively with the residue of the past and the problems of today — and tomorrow.

Close to a majority of California voters indicate that they have a good mind to throw the rascals out — Democrats and Republicans, alike.

It's not just Watergate. That is just one more incident in a long train of events.

EACH SESSION, more laws legalize license. Those who balk are rebuked: "You can't legislate morality." Yet, what of those who statutize immorality?

"Thou shalt not steal." But, legalized plunder is the rule of the day and, more and more, a law of the land.

"Thou shalt not covet." But, more and more of the working man's product is confiscated in the name of "public interest."

"Thou shalt not bear false witness." But, almost any distortion goes if it serves an end or wins an election.

"Thou shalt have no other gods before me." But, the state comes first; strange shepherds tend the flock.

The Lord says "tithe": 10 per cent. Caesar wants 43 per cent and if his take continues, by 1978 it will be 50 per cent.

We have raped our lands, squandered our resources, and rigged our laws to favor the profligate, the quick-buck artists and the tax houdinis.

What in heaven's name has happened to America?

Well, we have turned our back on God.

The Ten Commandments is the finest set of rules yet devised for life.

The Golden Rule is still the greatest power for self-government man has ever known: "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

It is all there. The love, the joy, the justice, the hope, the peace, the light that can make America sing again. All we have to do is apply it. Starting with ourselves, applying it here at home, on main street — and even in Babylon, West.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Candidate Clarifies Stand On Development

In the I-J "Reporter's Notebook" (Dec. 20), Nels Johnson astutely observed that the proposed development of the Buon Gusto property would be caught up in the coming Fairfax Council election. This is very true. However, when he speculated that I would, if elected, oppose the project outright, I realized that my position in the whole matter of town growth needed further clarification.

Actually, I have opposed all of the town's recent, large developments because of the drain they placed on Fairfax schools, sewers, roads, water supply and Town services. All of this only caused a greater tax burden on our present residents. . .

If Canon Village does not prove to be the final straw that breaks the back of our sewer and road capacities, then the Buon Gusto and another proposed 20-unit development, most certainly will. . .

Homeowner Group Not In Cable TV Business

I wish to refer to an item on page 13 of the Independent Journal dated Dec. 19, concerning cable TV in Upper Lucas Valley.

The Lucas Valley Homeowners Association, in constructing a cable TV antenna, is merely insuring the continued supply of a TV signal to its residents through its cable system — a system which it intends to replace during the next 18 months.

The statement that the association is "in the cable television business in Lucas Valley" is erroneous. We would therefore appreciate your correction of this statement.

Some people in very interesting places are opting for resignation instead of reelection saying their privacy is being invaded.

Red Tape Spoils Christmas Spirit

When I was a kid growing up in the Great Depression, our un-rich family, as part of the Christmas tradition, used to pack up a box of food and toys for a poor family. In those tactless days no one knew the word "underprivileged." Poor was poor. I remember feeling rather smug and sanctified but even then wondered if maybe our noblesse secretly humiliated the recipients. Our basket usually went to the family of the boy who weekly sold the Saturday Evening Post to my dad for a nickle. If he was humiliated he masked it gallantly with a "thank you."

Later, in WW II, we citizens were encouraged to open our homes to lonely servicemen on holiday feast days, and many of us did.

Has anyone tried to give anything away in Marin county lately?

Lady Bountiful I'm not, but sporadically I get these bizarre impulses. Traditions laid down in youth die hard. Like, a year ago Thanksgiving I had too big a turkey because some of the planned-for kinfolk couldn't come. So I phoned Hamilton AFB. Not only was there no Lonely Serviceman available, the official voice on the phone sounded faintly suspicious. Obviously there no longer was a standard operating procedure to handle offers like mine.

Last Christmas the I-J carried the story of a young woman on welfare whose house burned down leaving her and children bereft of home, belongings and presents. I sent off a small check, care of the I-J, which eventually was returned to me after an apologetic phone call from a representative of the Red Cross.

Did I learn anything last year? Nope. This week my son has harvested some of the down timber on the place, and we thought it would be nice to share a log or two. Today I phoned the senior citizens center. Did they have the names of maybe five elderly people in S.R. who had to conserve funds and energy and might like to have a log or two delivered before Christmas?

God rest ye merry.

THE PEOPLE'S SCHOOLS

School Boards Now Advocate Exclusive Bargaining Agents

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

California's school boards want exclusive union representation of employees.

This may come as a surprise to members of the public who have witnessed years of conflict between boards and teacher unions over this very concept. But the California School Boards Association's final "Sacramento Report" for 1973 discloses that CSBA will sponsor legislation for just such a purpose.

THE REPORT ANNOUNCES plans to seek a law providing for exclusive bargaining agents — one for certificated (teaching) and one for classified (noncertificated) employees in each district. The majority union to represent each class would be determined by an election.

As things now stand, boards sometimes are whipsawed by the rival California Teachers Association and California Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, especially in districts where membership of the two is nearly equal.

CSBA, according to its "Sacramento Report," hopes also to get rid of some other headaches of negotiations through its proposed legislation. It will seek to limit the area of negotiations to pay and fringe benefits, hours, leave policies, safety conditions, and grievance procedures. Under the existing Winton Act, "meeting and conferring" can cover everything that pertains to conduct of the schools and their educational programs.

In what appears almost a copy of SB 400, the Reagan-vetoed CTA-CFT bill which would permit agency shop contracts, CSBA proposes a state school employment relations board, with procedure for fact-finding and mediation under its auspices, although it would specifically rule out arbitration, except on grievance procedures.

UNLIKE SB 400, CSBA's proposal would outlaw "the strike or any other form of work stoppage that would close the schools." And it would prohibit any form of agency shop, union shop, or closed shop.

"The CSBA," says its report, "will insist that no employee be compelled to join an organization or pay dues or service fees to any organization as a condition of working for a school district."

However, the non-joiner — or the joiner of any but the majority union — would have no voice in negotiations under the proposed legislation.

Further, CSBA wants the law to provide that all negotiations be conducted behind closed doors.

Since salaries account for some 80 per cent of school budgets, this would mean that how $4 of every $5 of school taxes was spent would be decided where the public could not even view the process.

DESPITE ITS PROPOSAL for exclusive union representation, CSBA's planned legislation is unlikely to draw support from either CTA or CFT. They are putting their efforts behind AB 1243 by Assemblyman Bob Moretti, D-North Hollywood. This bill provides for exclusive union representation, but with the agency shop, with compulsory dues, with the right to strike, not only for school employees but for all public employees in California below the federal level.

The CTA "Legislative Advocate" which appeared about the same time as CSBA's "Sacramento Report" calls on teachers to contact members of the Senate Public Employment and Retirement Committee on behalf of AB 1 243. That committee now has the bill, which already has passed the Assembly.

CTA no doubt is counting on senators whom it helped in last year's election campaigns through the Association for Better Citizenship, which is the CTA version of the California Federation of Labor's Committee on Political Education. CTA has boasted that 11 of 16 ABC-supported Senate candidates won election in 1972. And no doubt it hopes that other senators, who come up for election in 1974, will want ABC money and support also.

CSBA has no such campaign chest to lure votes.

Who Are The Clients Of The County Counsel?

Independent-Journal
SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY
34 SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1973 EDITORIAL PAGE

The California Legislature, responding to obvious public demand for more accountability for public officials, this year passed a tough disclosure law designed to prevent such officials from concealing possible conflicts of interest.

The law requires that constitutional officers, county supervisors and administrators, mayors, city councilmen, planning commissioners and planning officers, and city managers and administrators file annual statements detailing their private holdings and earnings.

LAST WEEK in San Francisco, Secy. of State Edmund G. Brown Jr., held one of a series of public hearings designed to inform officials of what the law would mean to them.

Not surprisingly, some objections were raised. And one of them was by Douglas J. Maloney, the Marin County counsel.

Maloney held that the new law might run counter to the doctrine of attorney-client privilege.

This raised an obvious question: Who are the county counsel's clients?

We asked Maloney about this. He replied that he considers the board of supervisors and the various school boards which the counsel serves as legal representative to be his clients.

THE COUNTY COUNSEL'S office was created in Marin by action of the board of supervisors in 1956. It took over the duties formerly performed by the civil division of the district attorney's office.

The district attorney is an elected official. He knows who his client is. It is the public.

But the county counsel — at least in Maloney's case — envisions the board as his client. He sees himself, apparently, as the board of supervisors' Fred Buzhardt.

SURELY MALONEY did not arrive at this conception (or misconception) of his role solely on his own. He must have been given to understand by the current or a former board of supervisors that this was what was expected of him.

Yet we find no legal basis for the board of supervisors, or a school board, to have a private attorney (in fact, six private attorneys, for Maloney has five assistants and deputies) at public expense.

The new disclosure act is in the public interest. The public is entitled to know the financial interests of its officials — in case those interests ever should conflict with the public interest.

If the county counsel envisions his role as that of protecting the officials against such disclosure, he must consider it is quite proper and honorable for him to protect the officials' private interests against the public interest.

Surely the board of supervisors will set the counsel straight on this matter.

In those tactless days no one knew the word "underprivileged." Poor was poor. I remember feeling rather smug and sanctified but even then wondered if maybe our noblesse secretly humiliated the recipients. Our basket usually went to the family of the boy who weekly sold the Saturday Evening Post to my dad for a nickle. If he was humiliated he masked it gallantly with a "thank you."

Later, in WW II, we citizens were encouraged to open our homes to lonely servicemen on holiday feast days, and many of us did.

Has anyone tried to give anything away in Marin county lately?

Lady Bountiful I'm not, but sporadically I get these bizarre impulses. Traditions laid down in youth die hard. Like, a year ago Thanksgiving I had too big a turkey because some of the planned-for kinfolk couldn't come. So I phoned Hamilton AFB. Not only was there no Lonely Serviceman available, the official voice on the phone sounded faintly suspicious. Obviously there no longer was a standard operating procedure to handle offers like mine.

Last Christmas the I-J carried the story of a young woman on welfare whose house burned down leaving her and children bereft of home, belongings and presents. I sent off a small check, care of the I-J, which eventually was returned to me after an apologetic phone call from a representative of the Red Cross.

Did I learn anything last year? Nope. This week my son has harvested some of the down timber on the place, and we thought it would be nice to share a log or two. Today I phoned the senior citizens center. Did they have the names of maybe five elderly people in S.R. who had to conserve funds and energy and might like to have a log or two delivered before Christmas?

God rest ye merry.

THE PEOPLE'S SCHOOLS

School Boards Now Advocate Exclusive Bargaining Agents

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

California's school boards want exclusive union representation of employees.

This may come as a surprise to members of the public who have witnessed years of conflict between boards and teacher unions over this very concept. But the California School Boards Association's final "Sacramento Report" for 1973 discloses that CSBA will sponsor legislation for just such a purpose.

THE REPORT ANNOUNCES plans to seek a law providing for exclusive bargaining agents — one for certificated (teaching) and one for classified (non-certificated) employees in each district. The majority union to represent each class would be determined by an election.

As things now stand, boards sometimes are whipsawed by the rival California Teachers Association and California Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, especially in districts where membership of the two is nearly equal.

CSBA, according to its "Sacramento Report," hopes also to get rid of some other headaches of negotiations through its proposed legislation. It will seek to limit the area of negotiations to pay and fringe benefits, hours, leave policies, safety conditions, and grievance procedures. Under the existing Winton Act, "meeting and conferring" can cover everything that pertains to conduct of the schools and their educational programs.

In what appears almost a copy of SB 400, the Reagan-vetoed CTA-CFT bill which would permit agency shop contracts, CSBA proposes a state school employment relations board, with procedure for fact-finding and mediation under its auspices, although it would specifically rule out arbitration, except on grievance procedures.

UNLIKE SB 400, CSBA's proposal would outlaw "the strike or any other form of work stoppage that would close the schools." And it would prohibit any form of agency shop, union shop, or closed shop.

"The CSBA," says its report, "will insist that no employee be compelled to join an organization or pay dues or service fees to any organization as a condition of working for a school district."

However, the non-joiner — or the joiner of any but the majority union — would have no voice in negotiations under the proposed legislation.

Further, CSBA wants the law to provide that all negotiations be conducted behind closed doors.

Since salaries account for some 80 per cent of school budgets, this would mean that how $4 of every $5 of school taxes was spent would be decided where the public could not even view the process.

DESPITE ITS PROPOSAL for exclusive union representation, CSBA's planned legislation is unlikely to draw support from either CTA or CFT. They are putting their efforts behind AB 1243 by Assemblyman Bob Moretti, D-North Hollywood. This bill provides for exclusive union representation, but with the agency shop, with compulsory dues, with the right to strike, not only for school employees but for all public employees in California below the federal level.

The CTA "Legislative Advocate" which appeared about the same time as CSBA's "Sacramento Report" calls on teachers to contact members of the Senate Public Employment and Retirement Committee on behalf of AB 1 243. That committee now has the bill, which already has passed the Assembly.

CTA no doubt is counting on senators whom it helped in last year's election campaigns through the Association for Better Citizenship, which is the CTA version of the California Federation of Labor's Committee on Political Education. CTA has boasted that 11 of 16 ABC-supported Senate candidates won election in 1972. And no doubt it hopes that other senators, who come up for election in 1974, will want ABC money and support also.

CSBA has no such campaign chest to lure votes.

REMEMBER WHEN?

Britain ordered more troops into Cyprus as conflict between Greek and Turkish Cypriots threatened to involve Greece and Turkey in war.

The death toll in the sinking of the cruise ship Lakonia off the British Isles mounted to 89, with 42 still missing.

20 YEARS AGO

President Eisenhower announced that two Army divisions were being returned to the U.S. from Korea in the first step of a reduction of American forces there.

Twenty-three persons died in a panicked crush fleeing a church in Toluca, Mexico, after electric lights suddenly failed during a Christmas Mass.

WORTH SAYING AGAIN

So act that your principle of action might safely be made a law for the whole world. — Immanuel Kant.

No man is justified in doing evil on the ground of expediency. — Theodore Roosevelt.

SNOW ON SNOW

No, he's not crazy. He just happens to like ice cream. But with 16 inches of snow on the ground? For Bob Sherman of Montreal it's all taken in stride. A blizzard on Saturday left the city with 16 inches of snow. His ice cream cone is not made from the fluffy stuff, but purchased from a nearby ice cream parlor.

Couple Found Frozen After Power Cut Off

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (UPI) — An old man and woman, both in their 90s, tried to keep warm by huddling together on the cold living room floor of their apartment after the electric company cut off their power. They were found there— frozen to death—by a grandson on Christmas eve.

Frank Baker, 93, and his wife, Katherine, 91, were discovered by a grandson, Basil Heise, home on leave from the military, who went to their home to take them to a Christmas Eve dinner Monday night.

Detectives said the couple had been dead for about two days. A gas stove had been turned on in the kitchen, a detective said, but provided little warmth.

Elbert Watrous, Schenectady County district attorney, said he was considering handing the case to a grand jury.

A spokesman for the Niagara Mohawk Power Corp., which services the area with electricity and natural gas, said the company cut off power to the home because the couple declined to pay a five-month-old bill for $202. The company also tried to shut off gas to the home, the spokesman said, but the couple would not let a utility man in their home. A gas furnace in the home would have been made inoperative when electricity was shut off, though it would not have affected the use of a gas cooking stove.

Once before, the spokesman said, utilities were cut off, about six months ago, but were reinstated when a church paid half the delinquent bill of $250.

The spokesman said the company contacted the Bakers several times about their bill, but said the couple refused to discuss it.

A deputy county medical examiner, Dr. John Shields, said an autopsy would be made, but tentatively said death was brought on by exposure.

Thanks For The 'Memories'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — For the first Christmas in 23 years, Bob Hope didn't sing "Thanks for the Memories" to the troops. They sang for him instead.

Hope spent Christmas at home with his wife Delores, his children and four of his grandchildren.

It was his first Christmas at home since before the Korean War. Hope spent every Christmas for 22 years on the road with beauty queens, musicians and comedians, entertaining troops.

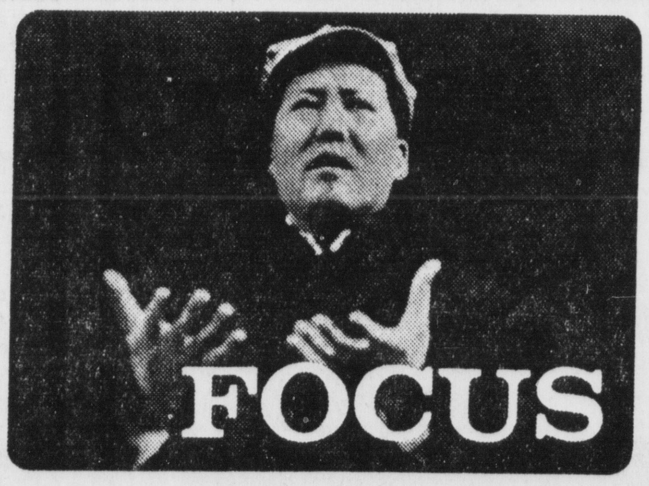
The highlight of the day: Col. J. Quincy Collins of San Francisco, a former prisoner of the North Vietnamese, telephoned and played for Hope a recording of a POW choir singing a parody of "Thanks for the Memories," Hope's theme song and traditional show closer.

Copters Will Harvest Timber

FORESTHILL (UPI) — Helicopter logging will be used for the first time in Tahoe National Forest when 7.88 million board feet are brought out by aircraft.

The timber is located in the steep area of Duncan Canyon near Foresthill.

The Tahoe National Forest auctioned the logging project to Erickson Air Crane Corp., Marysville, for $359,330.



Mao's Birthday

"Long live Chairman Mao!" is a frequently heard slogan in Communist China these days. Mao Tse-tung, shown here in a 1943 photo, today celebrates his 80th birthday. The seemingly ancient question of who will succeed him is just as much alive today as the Chairman himself. Premier Chou En-lai is generally considered next in line. But at age 75, he's no youthful Red Guard either. There are indications the Chinese Communist Party plans some kind of collective leadership after Mao and Chou are no longer on the scene. Meanwhile, despite the periodic rumors that his health is failing, Mao is planning a Long March into the 80s.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the 86-year-old leader of the Nationalist Chinese?

Lawyer's Loonie Prediction Fails

MC FARLAND, Wis. (UPI) — The world didn't end Christmas Day, but Edward Ben Elson, the man who sold tickets for a spaceship ride to escape the catastrophe, was not disappointed.

"I don't want to see the end of the world," he said today. "It's just a revelation that came to me and I gave voice to it."

Elson gained notoriety last week when he announced the world would end Christmas Day and that the Comet Kohoutek would act as a spaceship and rescue the selected few.

According to his revelation, Kohoutek would mix with the earth's atmosphere, sending the world "down in a sea of petroleum oil."

Elson, a lawyer who has drawn headlines before for his eccentric ways, said he was selected to choose 1,000 persons for the spaceship ride. The 1,000 were to be accompanied by 143,000 miniature humans he said he had in a state of suspended animation in bushel baskets in his basement.

He had 1,000 tickets printed, which he sold to buy his wife jewels to entice her aboard the ship. The sales enabled Elson to recover the cost of the printing bill, but his wife remained skeptical of the trip.

Elson, whose business cards say he is a "far out attorney specializing in loonie law", said his clients are heartened by his actions.

"I have a peculiar practice," he explained. "The people that I serve somehow are heartened by all of my shenanigans and escapades. They think that I'm one of them."

Vietnam Peace Talks To Resume

PARIS (UPI) — South Vietnamese negotiators agreed today to meet the Viet Cong again Friday although the Communists have walked out of the bilateral truce talks three times in recent weeks.

A South Vietnamese delegation spokesman said the two sides have agreed to meet at Friday at the suburban La Celle Saint Cloud chateau for stalemated talks on a political settlement in South Vietnam.

The meetings were started last March after the Jan. 27 Vietnam peace agreement.

SOME PRACTICAL TIPS IN BUYING Your Next Automobile

First, if you live - in Marin - you have an instant advantage. Marin dealers, with much lower overhead than "metropolitan" dealers, pass the savings on to you. And being local, they can service your car with far greater convenience. Saves the rat race, saves on sales tax, too (½% lower in Marin) . . . Better deal all around!!!

SOME PRACTICAL TIPS IN BUYING Your Next Automobile

First, if you live - in Marin - you have an instant advantage. Marin dealers, with much lower overhead than "metropolitan" dealers, pass the savings on to you. And being local, they can service your car with far greater convenience. Saves the rat race, saves on sales tax, too (½% lower in Marin) . . . Better deal all around!!!

A SHOVEL IS THE KEY

The occupant of this Denver apartment, who was away for the holidays when a storm dumped 11 inches of snow on the Colorado capital, will find he needs more than a key to get in when he returns home. A shovel is a more likely answer. After the storm wind blew the snow into drifts as much as 10 feet high.

Three Die In Alabama Collision

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — A public transit bus and a coal truck collided at a rainslicked intersection today, killing the truck driver and two bus passengers and injuring seven.

The bus, carrying a dozen early morning passengers, was ripped apart by the impact with the tractor-trailer truck. The victims were scattered over several hundred feet of roadway, said police in the suburb of Fairfield.

The driver of the bus was missing after the accident and police said they feared he might have been tossed into a rain-swollen stream and washed away.

The truck driver killed in the collision was identified by hospital officials as Paul L. Smith of Ironton, Ohio. His partner, Jerry Loudermilk, also of Ironton, escaped serious injury.

One passenger killed in the accident was identified as John E. Hatcher, 61, of Birmingham. The other person killed in the crash, a woman bus passenger, was not identified immediately.

The truck, owned by Matlock Trucking Co. of Ohio, and the Birmingham-Jefferson County Transit Authority bus collided at the intersection of an exit ramp from Interstate 59 and a street in front of the U.S. Steel Corp.'s Fairfield works.

Wallace Makes Surprise Call

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Twelve-year-old Chris Bochenek, a paraplegic who playfully made his wheel chair rear up while visiting George Wallace last September, received a Christmas telephone call and good news from the Alabama governor yesterday.

Wallace, himself paralyzed from the waist down by an assassin's bullet, told the boy he was naming him honorary chairman of a new group called Wheelchairs, established by the National Paraplegia Foundation to support research into regenerating spinal cords.

Chris, struck by a bullet while playing with a pistol last May, had visited Wallace in Montgomery, Ala.

Assassins' First Target: Kissinger

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The Arab guerrilla organization that killed 32 persons at Rome and Athens airports last week originally had planned to assassinate U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger in Beirut a day earlier but was thwarted, military and diplomatic sources said Wednesday.

The sources said Libya had ordered the submachinegun and grenade attempt on Kissinger's life at Beirut International Airport Dec. 16 but Lebanese authorities learned of it in time and ordered Kissinger's plane diverted to Rayak Air Base instead.

Rayak Air Base is 45 miles east of Beirut. The U.S. Embassy in the Lebanese capital said the Kissinger plane went there for security reasons. Security throughout his Middle East swing was intense because of what American officials described before his trip as threats against his life.

According to the sources, the Libyans told the group to attack instead at Rome, where they killed 31 persons at Leonardo da Vinci Airport Dec. 17 before hijacking a Lufthansa airliner and killing one more person during a stopover in Athens.

The sources said the airport attack was ordered to be carried out at all costs to coincide with the originally scheduled opening of the Arab-Israeli peace conference in Geneva Dec. 18.

They said the guerrillas were members of the National Youth for the Liberation of Palestine, a Libyan-financed and run arm of the Black September guerrilla organization.

The group split off from the Popular Front of the Liberation of Palestine about a year ago, and the sources said, linked up with Black September before launching its first operation in Nicosia April 9, an attack against an Israeli airliner and the Israeli ambassador's residence.

One of the attackers was killed and seven were arrested, later to be released by the Cypriot authorities.

Since then, the sources said the group has been responsible for killing four persons and wounding 55 at Athens International Airport Aug. 5 and for planning to use surface-to-air missiles against an Israeli airliner in Italy.

Italian police on Sept. 5 arrested five Arabs in the Rome area after finding two portable Soviet-made antiaircraft missiles in an appartment near Leonardo da Vinci Airport. The police said the missiles were to be used hours later against an El Al plane.

Two of the five arrested were released on provisional bail but did not turn up Dec. 17, the day of the airport attack, to join the other three for trial. The hearing was postponed.

New Director Of Shakespeare Festival Named

ASHLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Margaret Rubin, former actress and former bank vice president, has been named director of the new information and education coordinating office of the Oregon Shakespearean Festival, it was announced yesterday.

Miss Rubin, a theater graduate of the University of Texas, acted at the festival here in 1957 and 1959. She appeared on the New York stage and joined the First Western Bank of Los Angeles in 1964.

Before returning to the festival last summer she was head of the bank's public relations department and a vice president.

She replaces Robert Knoll in the festival post. He resigned to join U.S. National Bank in Portland.

Recovering From Possible Overdose

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jerome A. Pierce, a key figure in the influence-peddling scandal which led to the resignation of Morris E. Currey, a top aide to Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke, is recovering in the UCLA Medical Center from a possible drug overdose.

Sheriff's deputies said Pierce, 35, found by his father lying unconscious in an apartment, has been convicted on three counts of grand theft and insurance fraud and is scheduled to be sentenced Jan. 8.

Nixon Pens Emergency Israeli Aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon today signed a bill authorizing $2.2 billion in emergency aid for Israel.

The bill, signed by Nixon at the White House and called the 1973 Emergency Security Assistance Act, authorizes the aid in the fiscal year ending next June 30 and was for the full amount requested by Nixon.

Under provisions of the act, Nixon can provide the assistance either through credits, grants or a combination of each.

No more than $1.5 billion can be provided, however, unless the President determines such aid to be "important to our national interests" and unless Congress is notified 20 days before this additional money is obligated or spent. The 20-day restriction would not apply if war were to break out again in the Middle East.

The bill also authorizes payment of part of the $2.2 billion for the U.S. share of expenses for the United Nations Emergency Force in the Middle East. The White House said the U.S. assessment for the force's first full year of operations is expected to run about $17.3 million.

Young Getty Secluded In Austrian Alps

INNSBRUCK, Austria (UPI) — J. Paul Getty III, ransomed grandson of the oil billionaire, spent a quiet Christmas in a hotel in the Austrian Alps, sources in the tourist industry said yesterday.

They said 17-year-old youth, his mother, Gail Harris, two girls and another youngster arrived at the IglerHof hotel at Igls, five miles south of Innsbruck Monday night. The police would confirm only that Getty was somewhere in the Innsbruck area.

Young Getty had been held five months by alleged kidnapers who cut off his right ear to press payment of a $2.5 million ransom.

Hogan Quits New York DA's Post

NEW YORK (UPI) — Frank S. Hogan, elected despite failing health in November to an unprecedented ninth four-year term as New York County District Attorney, announced his retirement today.

Hogan, who will be 72 on Jan. 17, succeeded Thomas E. Dewey, the rackets-busting prosecutor who became governor of New York and ran unsuccessfully against Harry S. Truman for the presidency in 1948.

The announcement at a news conference said his resignation will take effect Feb. 6.

The announcement was made by Hogan's close personal friend and counselor, Bernard Botein, former presiding justice of the state Appellate Division and a former president of the City Bar Association.

His eyes welling with tears, Botein described Hogan, the son of an Irish immigrant, as "never a man to strain for the Last Hurrah.

"An era passes—an era in which his office has for 32 years been recognized as the country's showcase on how a prosecutor's office should be conducted."

Hogan, who took office in 1941 as the candidate of every recognized political party, was a reluctant entrant in this year's race after suffering a minor stroke Aug. 10 and undergoing surgery for removal of a lung tumor on Sept.7.

But he still soundly defeated his opponent, Board of Correction Chairman William Vanden Heuval, for an unprecedented ninth term as the county's chief prosecutor.

He said he was running again this year instead of retiring after a distinguished and unblemished career because "I thought my candidacy represented the best chance to retain...and hopefully to perpetuate...the non-political character of our office."

TEL AVIV (UPI) — U.S. Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., will arrive tomorrow for a tour of Israel, a government spokesman said today.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Rheumatoid Arthritis Painful And Restricting To Sufferer

Victims of rheumatoid arthritis need all the help they can get. Twenty-five per cent of them do poorly and lead a greatly restricted life due to deformities and pain. An equal percentage are partially incapacitated; the remainder have very little trouble and can lead normal lives. Life span is not affected and the cause of death is, with few exceptions, unrelated to the arthritis.

The disease usually begins in early adult life and involves the whole body. It just happens to manifest itself mainly in the joints. The internal manifestations are weakness, malaise, and loss of appetite. Anemia is common. Symptoms may develop gradually or rapidly.

THE JOINTS become painful, swollen, warm, and tender to the touch. Although any joint may be afflicted, those of the hands, wrists, and knees are usually involved. Oddly, the condition is symmetrical, in that involvement of the joints on one side often occurs along with that of the other.

Stiffness sets in after any period of inactivity and is especially marked in the morning. Wasting of the muscles occurs when the parts are not used. Small, hard nodules may also appear under the skin, especially over pressure points.

In rheumatoid arthritis, the synovial membranes are inflamed. Corrosive enzymes within the cells leak out and attack other cells in chain-reaction-type fashion. First, the destructive process strikes the soft tissues, and then the underlying cartilage and bone. The smooth surface of the joint becomes rough and pitted.

LACKING A CURE, the best remedy is to improve general health and prescribe anti-inflammatory agents (salicylates, indomethacin, phenylbutazone, and cortisone-type drugs). Physical therapy also is helpful.

Synovial membrane, the site of the trouble, is the basis behind the surgical treatment, in which the membrane is removed (synovectomy). The procedure is not a cure, but relieves pain, restores function, and enables the victim to take care of himself. An operation of this type may delay or arrest further destruction of a joint.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to Dr. Van Dellen, c/o the Independent-Journal, PO Box 330, 1040 B St., San Rafael, Ca. 94902.. Telephone inquiries will not be answered.

NECK ARTHRITIS

M. S. writes: My 69-year-old mother has osteoarthritis of the spine at the neck. This has caused gradual weakening of her arms and hands. She can't raise her arms above the head and drops things. Can anything be done for this condition?

REPLY

Heat, massage, and neck exercises may help to alleviate pressure on the nerves in this area. A neck brace also is recommended. But surgery may be the answer to her problem and, consequently, a consultation with an orthopedic surgeon is in order. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on neck exercises.

STAGHORNE STONE

P. K. writes: Will diet help a stone former? I formed a staghorn concretion recently and don't want another.

REPLY

Food is only one factor in the prevention of renal stones. For suggestions on this problem, send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on kidney stones.

A SHOVEL IS THE KEY

The occupant of this Denver apartment, who was away for the holidays when a storm dumped 11 inches of snow on the Colorado capital, will find he needs more than a key to get in when he returns home. A shovel is a more likely answer. After the storm wind blew the snow into drifts as much as 10 feet high.

Three Die In Alabama Collision

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — A public transit bus and a coal truck collided at a rainslicked intersection today, killing the truck driver and two bus passengers and injuring seven.

The bus, carrying a dozen early morning passengers, was ripped apart by the impact with the tractor-trailer truck. The victims were scattered over several hundred feet of roadway, said police in the suburb of Fairfield.

The driver of the bus was missing after the accident and police said they feared he might have been tossed into a rain-swollen stream and washed away.

The truck driver killed in the collision was identified by hospital officials as Paul L. Smith of Ironton, Ohio. His partner, Jerry Loudermilk, also of Ironton, escaped serious injury.

One passenger killed in the accident was identified as John E. Hatcher, 61, of Birmingham. The other person killed in the crash, a woman bus passenger, was not identified immediately.

The truck, owned by Matlock Trucking Co. of Ohio, and the Birmingham-Jefferson County Transit Authority bus collided at the intersection of an exit ramp from Interstate 59 and a street in front of the U.S. Steel Corp.'s Fairfield works.

Wallace Makes Surprise Call

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Twelve-year-old Chris Bochenek, a paraplegic who playfully made his wheel chair rear up while visiting George Wallace last September, received a Christmas telephone call and good news from the Alabama governor yesterday.

Wallace, himself paralyzed from the waist down by an assassin's bullet, told the boy he was naming him honorary chairman of a new group called Wheelchairs, established by the National Paraplegia Foundation to support research into regenerating spinal cords.

Chris, struck by a bullet while playing with a pistol last May, had visited Wallace in Montgomery, Ala.

Assassins' First Target: Kissinger

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The Arab guerrilla organization that killed 32 persons at Rome and Athens airports last week originally had planned to assassinate U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger in Beirut a day earlier but was thwarted, military and diplomatic sources said Wednesday.

The sources said Libya had ordered the submachinegun and grenade attempt on Kissinger's life at Beirut International Airport Dec. 16 but Lebanese authorities learned of it in time and ordered Kissinger's plane diverted to Rayak Air Base instead.

Rayak Air Base is 45 miles east of Beirut. The U.S. Embassy in the Lebanese capital said the Kissinger plane went there for security reasons. Security throughout his Middle East swing was intense because of what American officials described before his trip as threats against his life.

According to the sources, the Libyans told the group to attack instead at Rome, where they killed 31 persons at Leonardo da Vinci Airport Dec. 17 before hijacking a Lufthansa airliner and killing one more person during a stopover in Athens.

The sources said the airport attack was ordered to be carried out at all costs to coincide with the originally scheduled opening of the Arab-Israeli peace conference in Geneva Dec. 18.

They said the guerrillas were members of the National Youth for the Liberation of Palestine, a Libyan-financed and run arm of the Black September guerrilla organization.

The group split off from the Popular Front of the Liberation of Palestine about a year ago, and the sources said, linked up with Black September before launching its first operation in Nicosia April 9, an attack against an Israeli airliner and the Israeli ambassador's residence.

One of the attackers was killed and seven were arrested, later to be released by the Cypriot authorities.

Since then, the sources said the group has been responsible for killing four persons and wounding 55 at Athens International Airport Aug. 5 and for planning to use surface-to-air missiles against an Israeli airliner in Italy.

Italian police on Sept. 5 arrested five Arabs in the Rome area after finding two portable Soviet-made antiaircraft missiles in an appartment near Leonardo da Vinci Airport. The police said the missiles were to be used hours later against an El Al plane.

Two of the five arrested were released on provisional bail but did not turn up Dec. 17, the day of the airport attack, to join the other three for trial. The hearing was postponed.

New Director Of Shakespeare Festival Named

ASHLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Margaret Rubin, former actress and former bank vice president, has been named director of the new information and education coordinating office of the Oregon Shakespearean Festival, it was announced yesterday.

Miss Rubin, a theater graduate of the University of Texas, acted at the festival here in 1957 and 1959. She appeared on the New York stage and joined the First Western Bank of Los Angeles in 1964.

Before returning to the festival last summer she was head of the bank's public relations department and a vice president.

She replaces Robert Knoll in the festival post. He resigned to join U.S. National Bank in Portland.

Recovering From Possible Overdose

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jerome A. Pierce, a key figure in the influence-peddling scandal which led to the resignation of Morris E. Currey, a top aide to Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke, is recovering in the UCLA Medical Center from a possible drug overdose.

Sheriff's deputies said Pierce, 35, found by his father lying unconscious in an apartment, has been convicted on three counts of grand theft and insurance fraud and is scheduled to be sentenced Jan. 8.

Nixon Pens Emergency Israeli Aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon today signed a bill authorizing $2.2 billion in emergency aid for Israel.

The bill, signed by Nixon at the White House and called the 1973 Emergency Security Assistance Act, authorizes the aid in the fiscal year ending next June 30 and was for the full amount requested by Nixon.

Under provisions of the act, Nixon can provide the assistance either through credits, grants or a combination of each.

No more than $1.5 billion can be provided, however, unless the President determines such aid to be "important to our national interests" and unless Congress is notified 20 days before this additional money is obligated or spent. The 20-day restriction would not apply if war were to break out again in the Middle East.

The bill also authorizes payment of part of the $2.2 billion for the U.S. share of expenses for the United Nations Emergency Force in the Middle East. The White House said the U.S. assessment for the force's first full year of operations is expected to run about $17.3 million.

Young Getty Secluded In Austrian Alps

INNSBRUCK, Austria (UPI) — J. Paul Getty III, ransomed grandson of the oil billionaire, spent a quiet Christmas in a hotel in the Austrian Alps, sources in the tourist industry said yesterday.

They said 17-year-old youth, his mother, Gail Harris, two girls and another youngster arrived at the IglerHof hotel at Igls, five miles south of Innsbruck Monday night. The police would confirm only that Getty was somewhere in the Innsbruck area.

Young Getty had been held five months by alleged kidnapers who cut off his right ear to press payment of a $2.5 million ransom.

Hogan Quits New York DA's Post

NEW YORK (UPI) — Frank S. Hogan, elected despite failing health in November to an unprecedented ninth four-year term as New York County District Attorney, announced his retirement today.

Hogan, who will be 72 on Jan. 17, succeeded Thomas E. Dewey, the rackets-busting prosecutor who became governor of New York and ran unsuccessfully against Harry S. Truman for the presidency in 1948.

The announcement at a news conference said his resignation will take effect Feb. 6.

The announcement was made by Hogan's close personal friend and counselor, Bernard Botein, former presiding justice of the state Appellate Division and a former president of the City Bar Association.

His eyes welling with tears, Botein described Hogan, the son of an Irish immigrant, as "never a man to strain for the Last Hurrah.

"An era passes—an era in which his office has for 32 years been recognized as the country's showcase on how a prosecutor's office should be conducted."

Hogan, who took office in 1941 as the candidate of every recognized political party, was a reluctant entrant in this year's race after suffering a minor stroke Aug. 10 and undergoing surgery for removal of a lung tumor on Sept.7.

But he still soundly defeated his opponent, Board of Correction Chairman William Vanden Heuval, for an unprecedented ninth term as the county's chief prosecutor.

He said he was running again this year instead of retiring after a distinguished and unblemished career because "I thought my candidacy represented the best chance to retain...and hopefully to perpetuate...the non-political character of our office."

Eagleton Tour

TEL AVIV (UPI) — U.S. Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., will arrive tomorrow for a tour of Israel, a government spokesman said today.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Rheumatoid Arthritis Painful And Restricting To Sufferer

Victims of rheumatoid arthritis need all the help they can get. Twenty-five per cent of them do poorly and lead a greatly restricted life due to deformities and pain. An equal percentage are partially incapacitated; the remainder have very little trouble and can lead normal lives. Life span is not affected and the cause of death is, with few exceptions, unrelated to the arthritis.

The disease usually begins in early adult life and involves the whole body. It just happens to manifest itself mainly in the joints. The internal manifestations are weakness, malaise, and loss of appetite. Anemia is common. Symptoms may develop gradually or rapidly.

THE JOINTS become painful, swollen, warm, and tender to the touch. Although any joint may be afflicted, those of the hands, wrists, and knees are usually involved. Oddly, the condition is symmetrical, in that involvement of the joints on one side often occurs along with that of the other.

Stiffness sets in after any period of inactivity and is especially marked in the morning. Wasting of the muscles occurs when the parts are not used. Small, hard nodules may also appear under the skin, especially over pressure points.

In rheumatoid arthritis, the synovial membranes are inflamed. Corrosive enzymes within the cells leak out and attack other cells in chain-reaction-type fashion. First, the destructive process strikes the soft tissues, and then the underlying cartilage and bone. The smooth surface of the joint becomes rough and pitted.

LACKING A CURE, the best remedy is to improve general health and prescribe anti-inflammatory agents (salicylates, indomethacin, phenylbutazone, and cortisone-type drugs). Physical therapy also is helpful.

Synovial membrane, the site of the trouble, is the basis behind the surgical treatment, in which the membrane is removed (synovectomy). The procedure is not a cure, but relieves pain, restores function, and enables the victim to take care of himself. An operation of this type may delay or arrest further destruction of a joint.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to Dr. Van Dellen, c/o the Independent-Journal, PO Box 330, 1040 B St., San Rafael, Ca. 94902.. Telephone inquiries will not be answered.

STAGHORNE STONE

P. K. writes: Will diet help a stone former? I formed a staghorn concretion recently and don't want another.

REPLY

Food is only one factor in the prevention of renal stones. For suggestions on this problem, send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on kidney stones.

NECK ARTHRITIS

M. S. writes: My 69-year-old mother has osteoarthritis of the spine at the neck. This has caused gradual weakening of her arms and hands. She can't raise her arms above the head and drops things. Can anything be done for this condition?

REPLY

Heat, massage, and neck exercises may help to alleviate pressure on the nerves in this area. A neck brace also is recommended. But surgery may be the answer to her problem and, consequently, a consultation with an orthopedic surgeon is in order. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on neck exercises.

Anger A Tool For Hubbard

OAKLAND (UPI) — There's an old saying about nice guys not winning and Oakland running back Marv Hubbard believes in the philosophy.

"I'm convinced you've got to be mad when you play this game," Hubbard said yesterday following a light workout in preparation for the Raiders visit to Miami next Sunday for the American Football Conference title.

In Oakland's 33-14 drubbing of Pittsburgh in the playoffs "we were mad at everybody," said Hubbard. "We were mad at ourselves for losing the playoff game last year and we were mad at the Steelers because we'd lost three straight to them.

"You can't go around being a nice guy," he said. "You've got to knock them down. If you don't, you'll find yourself on your back."

The Raider team, meanwhile, got a welcome Christmas treat with the news that linebacker Phil Villapiano will be able to play against the Dolphins. Villapiano, who sprained his ankle in the Steeler game, has been an Oakland starter since his rookie season three years ago.

Villapiana said it doesn't matter to him what the oddsmakers say about the game with Miami, which is favored by six points.

"We like to hear all those things," he said. "Keep them coming. Let them say or do what they want it doesn't matter to us.

"I don't want to say anything about the game except that we're playing our best football of the year."

Center Jim Otto told newsmen yesterday he wasn't sure how much longer he'd play football, but related it to the attitude the team has taken for the conference championship game.

"I'm playing my seasons one at a time," said Otto, who's been with the club since 1960. "And you have to do the same thing with your playoff games."

East's Dietzel Salutes Talent

PALO ALTO, Calif. (UPI) — Coach Paul Dietzel hasn't decided on a starting quarterback for his East squad, and he can't say enough about his lineup.

"I've coached good ones before but never as many top athletes as I have on this team," Dietzel said yesterday of the squad that will meet the West in the 49th Shrine game Saturday at San Francisco's Candlestick Park.

Dietzel is particularly impressed by Tennessee State defensive end Edward Jones, who is expected to be the No. 1 draft choice in the NFL.

"Our athletes shake their heads over Jones," said Dietzel. "You can't believe what he can do."

Dietzel said that if he had to pick a quarterback right now, he'd split the playing time between Mississippi's Norris Weese and Gary Marangi of Boston College.

The East squad got together with the West players yesterday for the traditional turkey dinner with cranberries and cherries jubilee.

Jim Sweeney, head coach of the West, said he also hadn't chosen his starting quarterback yet, but it will probably be David Jaynes of Kansas or Stanford's Mike Boryla. He said there should also be room in the game for Arizona State quarterback Danny White.

The game is a benefit for the Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children and has so far raised more than $7 million for the institution.

AGAINST MINNESOTA

Rams Replay Seen By Dallas' Jordan

DALLAS (UPI) — Lee Roy Jordan sees Sunday's Dallas-Minnesota game as a replay of last weekend's National Football Conference playoff victory by the Cowboys over the Los Angeles Rams.

The breaks will decide it, and the Cowboys' middle linebacker is a man who knows about the breaks.

It was Jordan's interception of a John Hadl pass on the first play of the Los Angeles game that started Dallas in the right direction. He figures Minnesota has the same kind of team as the Rams.

"They are a lot like the Rams. They have a great defense, they have two good running backs (Chuck Foreman and Oscar Reed) and a real veteran line, so they are very similar to the Rams.

"I think it will be the same type of battle. But I feel like we will win it.

"Against Los Angeles we feel like we had a 47-man effort and we feel everyone did a great job. The offense came in and put the ball over the goal line. We got the turnovers, but that's what it is all about. But if they don't get the ball across the goal line, we don't win."

This will be the first time Dallas has faced Minnesota since the two met in a divisional playoff game two seasons ago —a contest which produced a 20-12 Dallas victory en route to the Super Bowl title.

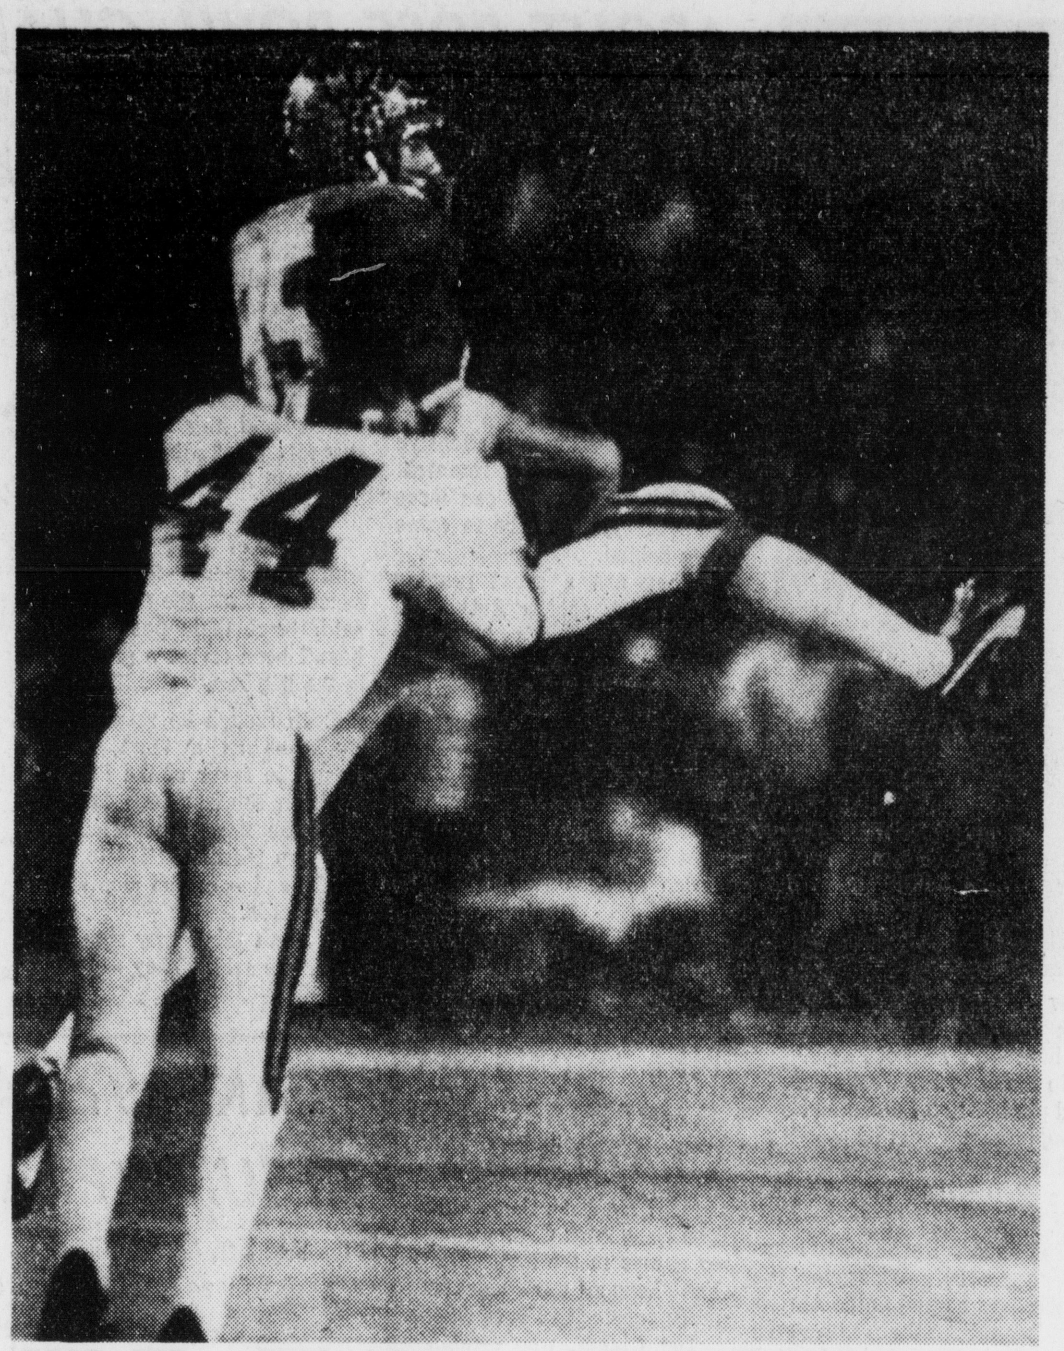
In that game, just as in Dallas' game with Los Angeles last week, the Cowboys seized on Viking mistakes —an early fumble by Dave Osborne and interceptions by linebacker Chuck Howley and safety Cliff Harris —to score 13 of their 20 points.

"We will have to play the same kind of defensive game against Minnesota as we did against Los Angeles," said Coach Tom Landry. "We will miss Calvin Hill, but I think we will be all right with Bobby Newhouse."

The post-Los Angeles injury report showed that, other than Hill's disabling dislocated elbow, outside linebacker D. D. Lewis also came up with a broken thumb.

Lewis, however, probably will start.

"We will have John Babinecz ready to go and we could play Rodrigo Barnes (the fanatical specialty team competitor who is being groomed to fill Jordan's spot when Jordan retires) in that spot. It might be a little tougher for D.D. to tackle."



GOOD HIT — South defensive back Vince Ancell (44) clobbered leaping North receiver Randy Grossman after the pass was completed last night in Miami during the North-South Shrine football game. The South utilized a hard-hitting defense for a 27-6 triumph.

South Defense Keys Shrine Football Win

North's Runners Throttled

MIAMI (UPI) — The North, with the nation's leading rusher and leading scorer, was supposed to be the big ground gaining team in the Christmas night Shrine All-star game, but it was the South that churned out the yardage.

While the Rebel defense held leading rusher Mark Kellar of Northern Illinois to 36 yards and top scorer J. J. Jennings of Rutgers to 29 yards—and no points — the South's offense clicked for a 27-6 victory in the Orange Bowl before a small crowd of 10,672.

SCORING

Breaking open a dull battle of defenses and errors, the South scored twice in the fourth quarter after Kentucky's Frank LeMaster fell on a Jennings fumble. Quarterback Don Woods of new Mexico passed 29 yards to Arkansas's Jack Ettinger and then followed with a 24-yeard scramble. Willie Burden of North Carolina State got the score on a one-yard plunge.

The South scored a final touchdown with the clock running out when Sam Johnson of North Carolina went over from the four capping a 34-yard drive.

FIELD GOALS

The North's only scores were field goals of 37 and 32 yards by John Phillips of Xavier.

The North turned over the ball three times on fumbles and three times on interceptions, and two of the fumbles led to touchdown and a field goal.

The South, piling up 136 net yards on the ground to 98 for the North, marched 31 yards on its second series capped by a four-yard scoring plunged by Alfred Thompson of Eastern Kentucky.

Phillips followed with his first field goal but Wake Forest's Chuck Ramsey booted a 36-yarder in the second quarter to give the South a 10-3 edge. Phillips came back with his second field goal just before the half to wind up the scoring for the North.

Ramsey, the game's leading scorer with nine points, kicked a 32-yarder in the third quarter and also converted after each of the three South touchdowns.

BALBOA WINS

Leading from the start, and never letting go, a balanced team from San Francisco's Balboa High School held off Novato Monday, 58-55, in a non-league basketball game on the losers' court.

Four Buccaneers scored in double figures, with Francois Wise leading with 16 points. King Wiley finished with 12 for Balboa, while James Gibson and Hubert Ward added 10 each.

Willie Barnes topped Novato scorers with 15 points, as the Hornets fell short on a fourth quarter rally. The final score was as close as Novato could get in the game. Tom Fisher tallied 12 points for the hosts in his most prolific scoring output this year.

Both teams shot 67 times from the floor, but the Bucs outshot the Hornets, 28-23, to overcome a 7-2 deficit from the free-throw line. Rebounds were also about even, with Balboa taking a 36-33 edge. Barnes led Novato with 12 rebounds, while teammate Curtis Saine had 10.

The loss was Novato's second in nine non-league starts.

Demonstrations For Sugar Bowl

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Disgruntled black leaders today will begin a series of demonstrations led by the Rev. Ralph Abernathy to protest their exclusion from the Sugar Bowl Committee.

But they said the protests would be peaceful and would probably stop short of asking black players on the to-pranked Alabama and Third-ranked Notre Dame Football teams, or on the four basketball tournament squads, to stage a boycott.

Abernathy, head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC), was to speak at a rally tonight to inaugurate the protests.

Protest leaders are demanding black membership on the prestigious executive committee of the mid-winter sports association, the Sugar Bowl sponsor. The association agreed under pressure and threat of legal action to accept six blacks as associate members but it steadfastly-refused to desegregate its executive committee.

Pickets definitely would be stationed outside Tulane Stadium before the New Year's Eve football game and at municipal auditorium during the basketball tournament Dec. 28-29, the leaders said.

Demonstrations at various other locations which are centers of Sugar Bowl activity were also being considered, they said.

"There are contingency plans for picketing elsewhere — hotels and such," said Dr. Guy Gipson, president of the New Orleans NAACP.

Dolphins Work Out, Receive Encouraging Injury Report

MIAMI (UPI) — The Miami Dolphins celebrated Christmas with a 45-minute workout, a couple of birthday observances and some good news on several injured players who may be back for Sunday's American Football Conference championship game with Oakland.

Coach Don Shula learned that tight end Jim Mandich, defensive tackle Manny Fernandez and defensive back Tim Foley should be available for duty against the Oakland Raiders at the Orange Bowl.

Mandich suffered a broken hand in last Sunday's 34-16 playoff win over Cincinnati. A pin was inserted into the broken area behind the knuckle of the little finger.

Shula said Mandich will wear a cast during the week and then the cast will be removed and the hand taped Sunday. Mandich has been filling in for Marv Fleming, who suffered a thigh injury Thanksgiving Day, and Shula hopes to have Fleming available also.

Fernandez, who has been out since tearing a hamdstring muscle in a 16-3 loss to Baltimore two weeks ago, is a possible starter against the Raiders.

Foley has been out for a month with a shoulder separation and Shula said he would still start Lloyd Mumphord at Foley's cornerback slot.

Celebrating birthdays Tuesday were fullback Larry Csonka, who is 27, and flanker Howard Twilley, who is 30.

Vikings Start Practice Today

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — The Minnesota Vikings began practice for their last hurdle to the Super Bowl today assured that, after a three-day Christmas break, they won't be "overprepared" for their playoff game with the Dallas Cowboys.

The Vikings were to practice at snowy Metropolitan Stadium today, but they planned to fly to Tulsa, Okla., and warmer weather tomorrow to get ready for Sunday's National Football Conference championship game at Texas stadium.

The Vikings' chief concern was their mental attitude, which some team members felt nearly cost them last week's playoff game with Washington. Minnesota eked out a 27-20 triumph but Redskins Coach George Allen said, "Minnesota will have to play better than that to beat Dallas."

"We took the field before the game with more emotion than at any time I can remember," said Grady Alderman, a Viking offensive tackle for the club's entire 13-year history.

Defensive end Carl Eller, who made a fiery, blackboard-kicking prep talk in the locker room at halftime, said the Vikings were so skyhigh at the start that "we couldn't play our game."

Coach Bud Grant was hoping to keep things on a lower key this week.

Injured Meloche Is Anxious To Return

By RON SUPINSKI

SAN LEANDRO (UPI) — When he's out of his pads and off the ice for prolonged periods, goalie Gilles Meloche of the California Golden Seals becomes a nervous wreck.

And for the past few weeks, he has been quite jittery. The 23-year-old netminder, unanimously voted the most valuable Seal last season, has been sidelined since Nov. 28 when teammate Reggie Leach sliced open the back of his right hand with a skate in practice.

"It's been very tough not playing," said the Montreal native. "For three weeks, I couldn't skate, run, ride a bike or take a sauna bath. I couldn't do anything except watch a lot of television and go shopping."

It took 18-20 stitches to close the gash Leach's skate made across the top of Meloche's right hand just below the wrist. Some tendons were cut.

Meloche wore a cast on the hand until last Thursday and is now finally able to skate and take exercises to strengthen the injured limb.

"But the doctor says no practice for about three more weeks. However, maybe I can start in a couple of weeks."

Meloche, Western Division Rookie of the Year in the National Hockey League in 1971-72 after coming to the Seals from Chicago as a "compensation" player in a controversial trade for goalie Gary Smith, said the accident occurred when he dived for the puck and his stick and glove flew off just before Leach flew over his right hand.

With Meloche and the veteran Marv Edwards guarding the nets, the Seals compiled a 5-14-1 record. Then, Edwards tore tendons in his right knee Dec. 5 and the Seals hurriedly recalled rookie goalies Bob Champoux and Ed Tucker from Salt Lake City.

Meloche and Edwards are both due to return to action during the middle of January. Since their departure, the Seals are 2-8-2.

"There's been a lot of pressure on Champoux and Tucker filling in for our top-line goalies," said coach Fred Glover. "They're playing in strange rinks where they don't know the bounces off the boards.

"But the team has been playing very well since our goaltenders got hurt. They've been playing better on the road than the records show. A break here and there turned a lot of those games around in favor of the home clubs."

Glover feels the Seals will make a strong bid for the playoffs after the first of the year when the team plays the bulk of their games in Oakland. And, he says the return of Meloche also should make a difference.

"Gilles is quick and can do everything well," said Glover. "When he was hurt, he was playing as well as any time in his career. And he's going to get better and stronger."

In 17 games this season, Meloche compiled a goals-against average of 3.78. Only in his third year in the NHL, he has established himself as one of the league's top goalies because of his lightning reactions and natural instinct to stop the puck.

Last scason, he spent 3,473 minutes on the ice, more than any other goalie in the NHL.

This season, Meloche is disheartened by the fact that the Seals dropped 18 of their first 19 games on the road.

"We started the season losing on the road, and I guess some of the guys have lost confidence," said the 5-10, 170-pound goalie. "We've also been on the road for long periods and, naturally, the home teams get psyched up by the cheers of a partisan crowd.

"But don't count us out of the playoffs yet. The Seals have the individual talent to make the playoffs once we get more confidence in ourselves.

"After the new year, we have a good schedule. We play two or three games at home (where California has been 6-4-4 through Dec. 24) and go on the road only for one or two games at a time. The players can give a little more when they know they're going to be on the road for only a short time."

When he was younger, Meloche said he admired Bobby Hull and veteran goalie Glenn Hall of the Chicago Black Hawks, Detroit Red Wings and St. Louis Blues.

"I liked Hall's spirit and style of going to his knees to stop a shot. But I never copied him. I like to stand up."

Meloche, who signed a three-year contract with the Seals last season after turning down offers from Edmonton, Chicago and Minnesota of the World Hockey Association, said "The NHL was the league I wanted to play in."

Right now he's itching to practice what he preaches.

Anger A Tool For Hubbard

OAKLAND (UPI) — There's an old saying about nice guys not winning and Oakland running back Marv Hubbard believes in the philosophy.

"I'm convinced you've got to be mad when you play this game," Hubbard said yesterday following a light workout in preparation for the Raiders visit to Miami next Sunday for the American Football Conference title.

In Oakland's 33-14 drubbing of Pittsburgh in the playoffs "we were mad at everybody," said Hubbard. "We were mad at ourselves for losing the playoff game last year and we were mad at the Steelers because we'd lost three straight to them.

"You can't go around being a nice guy," he said. "You've got to knock them down. If you don't, you'll find yourself on your back."

The Raider team, meanwhile, got a welcome Christmas treat with the news that linebacker Phil Villapiano will be able to play against the Dolphins. Villapiano, who sprained his ankle in the Steeler game, has been an Oakland starter since his rookie season three years ago.

Villapiana said it doesn't matter to him what the oddsmakers say about the game with Miami, which is favored by six points.

"We like to hear all those things," he said. "Keep them coming. Let them say or do what they want it doesn't matter to us.

"I don't want to say anything about the game except that we're playing our best football of the year."

Center Jim Otto told newsmen yesterday he wasn't sure how much longer he'd play football, but related it to the attitude the team has taken for the conference championship game.

"I'm playing my seasons one at a time," said Otto, who's been with the club since 1960. "And you have to do the same thing with your playoff games."

East's Dietzel Salutes Talent

PALO ALTO, Calif. (UPI) — Coach Paul Dietzel hasn't decided on a starting quarterback for his East squad, and he can't say enough about his lineup.

Dietzel is particularly impressed by Tennessee State defensive end Edward Jones, who is expected to be the No. 1 draft choice in the NFL.

Dolphins Work Out, Receive Encouraging Injury Report

MIAMI (UPI) — The Miami Dolphins celebrated Christmas with a 45-minute workout, a couple of birthday observances and some good news on several injured players who may be back for Sunday's American Football Conference championship game with Oakland.

Coach Don Shula learned that tight end Jim Mandich, defensive tackle Manny Fernandez and defensive back Tim Foley should be available for duty against the Oakland Raiders at the Orange Bowl.

Mandich suffered a broken hand in last Sunday's 34-16 playoff win over Cincinnati. A pin was inserted into the broken area behind the knuckle of the little finger.

Shula said Mandich will wear a cast during the week and then the cast will be removed and the hand taped Sunday. Mandich has been filling in for Marv Fleming, who suffered a thigh injury Thanksgiving Day, and Shula hopes to have Fleming available also.

Fernandez, who has been out since tearing a hamdstring muscle in a 16-3 loss to Baltimore two weeks ago, is a possible starter against the Raiders.

Foley has been out for a month with a shoulder separation and Shula said he would still start Lloyd Mumphord at Foley's cornerback slot.

Celebrating birthdays Tuesday were fullback Larry Csonka, who is 27, and flanker Howard Twilley, who is 30.

Injured Meloche Is Anxious To Return

By RON SUPINSKI

SAN LEANDRO (UPI) — When he's out of his pads and off the ice for prolonged periods, goalie Gilles Meloche of the California Golden Seals becomes a nervous wreck.

And for the past few weeks, he has been quite jittery. The 23-year-old netminder, unanimously voted the most valuable Seal last season, has been sidelined since Nov. 28 when teammate Reggie Leach sliced open the back of his right hand with a skate in practice.

"It's been very tough not playing," said the Montreal native. "For three weeks, I couldn't skate, run, ride a bike or take a sauna bath. I couldn't do anything except watch a lot of television and go shopping."

It took 18-20 stitches to close the gash Leach's skate made across the top of Meloche's right hand just below the wrist. Some tendons were cut.

Meloche wore a cast on the hand until last Thursday and is now finally able to skate and take exercises to strengthen the injured limb.

"But the doctor says no practice for about three more weeks. However, maybe I can start in a couple of weeks."

Meloche, Western Division Rookie of the Year in the National Hockey League in 1971-72 after coming to the Seals from Chicago as a "compensation" player in a controversial trade for goalie Gary Smith, said the accident occurred when he dived for the puck and his stick and glove flew off just before Leach flew over his right hand.

With Meloche and the veteran Marv Edwards guarding the nets, the Seals compiled a 5-14-1 record. Then, Edwards tore tendons in his right knee Dec. 5 and the Seals hurriedly recalled rookie goalies Bob Champoux and Ed Tucker from Salt Lake City.

Meloche and Edwards are both due to return to action during the middle of January. Since their departure, the Seals are 2-8-2.

"There's been a lot of pressure on Champoux and Tucker filling in for our top-line goalies," said coach Fred Glover. "They're playing in strange rinks where they don't know the bounces off the boards.

"But the team has been playing very well since our goaltenders got hurt. They've been playing better on the road than the records show. A break here and there turned a lot of those games around in favor of the home clubs."

Glover feels the Seals will make a strong bid for the playoffs after the first of the year when the team plays the bulk of their games in Oakland. And, he says the return of Meloche also should make a difference.

"Gilles is quick and can do everything well," said Glover. "When he was hurt, he was playing as well as any time in his career. And he's going to get better and stronger."

In 17 games this season, Meloche compiled a goals-against average of 3.78. Only in his third year in the NHL, he has established himself as one of the league's top goalies because of his lightning reactions and natural instinct to stop the puck.

Last season, he spent 3,473 minutes on the ice, more than any other goalie in the NHL.

This season, Meloche is disheartened by the fact that the Seals dropped 18 of their first 19 games on the road.

"We started the season losing on the road, and I guess some of the guys have lost confidence," said the 5-10, 170-pound goalie. "We've also been on the road for long periods and, naturally, the home teams get psyched up by the cheers of a partisan crowd.

"But don't count us out of the playoffs yet. The Seals have the individual talent to make the playoffs once we get more confidence in ourselves.

"After the new year, we have a good schedule. We play two or three games at home (where California has been 6-4-4 through Dec. 24) and go on the road only for one or two games at a time. The players can give a little more when they know they're going to be on the road for only a short time."

When he was younger, Meloche said he admired Bobby Hull and veteran goalie Glenn Hall of the Chicago Black Hawks, Detroit Red Wings and St. Louis Blues.

"I liked Hall's spirit and style of going to his knees to stop a shot. But I never copied him. I like to stand up."

Meloche, who signed a three-year contract with the Seals last season after turning down offers from Edmonton, Chicago and Minnesota of the World Hockey Association, said "The NHL was the league I wanted to play in."

Right now he's itching to practice what he preaches.

Yankees' Mantle Is Likely Pick

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — The only thing you can say for sure about baseball writers is that no one can ever say for sure what they're going to do, but sometime in the next few weeks I'm pretty sure they're going to vote Mickey Mantle into the Hall of Fame.

This will be his first time "up" insofar as his being eligible is concerned and only a half dozen others — Warren Spahn, Sandy Koufax, Ted Williams, Stan Musial, Bob Feller and the late Jackie Robinson — ever made it their first shot out of the box, but I'll be surprised if Mantle isn't No. 7.

Whitey Ford puts it well, I think.

"HE BELONGS"

"He belongs," says the Yankees' former lefty pitching ace and long-time teammate of Mantle's.

Even his first time around?

"I think so," says Ford, who missed being voted in by only 29 votes last year, the first time he was eligible, and finished second in the balloting to Spahn.

THREE QUALITIES

"To me, a hall of famer always had to have three things," Ford goes on. "He had to be around for a long time, at least 10 years, and I think the voting rules say that (they do); he should have done something really noteworthy, like in Mickey's case, he hit more than 500 home runs, and he should've been consistent. I'd say consistency is the main thing."

On that count Mantle certainly qualifies.

SPECTACULAR

He was consistently spectacular and when you consider he performed with the physical infirmities he did, his record becomes more meaningful yet.

"Can you imagine the kind of ballplayer he'd be if he had two good legs?" I can remember more than one manager asking.

When it comes right down to consistency, which I believe is as good a yardstick as there is, two other men also deserve to go into the hall of fame with Mantle. At least they do in my book.

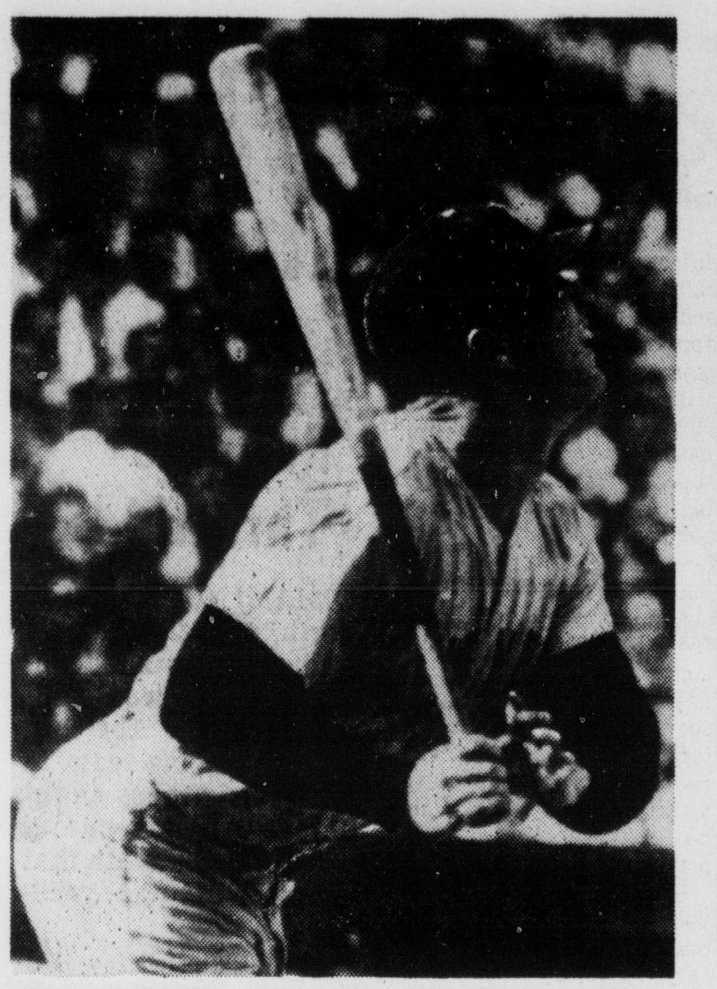
One of those two is Ford and the other is Bob Lemon.

Think of this for a moment: from 1953, really his first full year with the Yankees, through the next 13 years, Ford averaged 17 victories a season. He won 25 games in 1961 and 24 in 1963 and finished ith a season average of less than three earned runs per game in 11 of the 16 tears he pitched for the Yankees.

Ford wasn't too disappointed at not making it to Cooperstown last year.

FORD'S VIEWS

"I wasn't counting on it," he says. "I knew Spahn was going to get in. What surprised me was that 60 writers didn't vote for him. If I ever do get in, I'd like to make it the same year Mickey does. We talked about a whole lot of things when we were with the Yankees, but you know something, we never once ever discussed getting into the hall of fame."



THE CANDIDATE — Former New York Yankees' center field star Mickey Mantle (shown batting in 1961) is a leading candidate to be voted into baseball's Hall of Fame. Baseball writers will cast ballots in the next few weeks on such hopefuls as Mantle, Cleveland pitcher Bob Lemon and Yankee pitcher Whitey Ford, among others. (UPI Telephoto)

Lemon was fifth in last year's balloting and to my way of thinking he should've been voted in.

He could do everything and frequently did in his 12 seasons with Cleveland.

Lemon won 20 games seven times even though he broke in as a centerfielder with the Indians.

The former Kansas City manager won 207 games for the Tribe, was named to the American League All-Star team seven straight years, helped pitch Cleveland to two pennants, hurled a no-hitter, fielded his position as if he was a third baseman, which he was in the minors, and was one of the best hitting pitchers in the history of baseball.

Bob Lemon was the complete ballplayer, the kind I'd vote for in the hall of fame —and have.

ABOUT ROSE BOWL CHANCES

USC QB Haden Confident

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Ohio State may have a hard time recovering if they fall behind USC in the Rose Bowl, according to Trojan quarterback Pat Haden.

Haden, a 20-year-old junior, will be directing the offensive attack in the Jan. 1 rematch. And he's hopeful he can force the Buckeyes to have to come from behind.

"They are a great running team," he said. "But as a running team, it's hard for them to play catch-up. To be a truly great team, I think you have to be able to throw and run the ball."

His coach, John McKay, has said he has "never seen a passer with more accuracy than Pat Haden." In 11 games, Haden connected on 116 of 208 passes (56 per cent) for 13 touchdowns.

"We've actually thrown quite a bit this year, although few people realize it," said Haden. "We've averaged about 20 passes a game."

The intimidating Buckeye defense has stopped most running games cold this year. Haden suspects the Trojans will have to try out their defense against the pass.

"We'll, of course, go with whatever seems to be more successful at the time," he said. "But their pass defense hasn't been tested a great deal in the Big Ten."

Even though he respects the Buckeyes as a team, Haden wasn't in favor of the Big Ten decision sending Ohio State to the Rose Bowl over Michigan. The two teams battled to a 10-10 tie, and both had identical 9-0-1 records.

"I don't think they should be here," he said. "They were sent because the conference thought they'd have a better chance of beating us. But it's a question of fairness versus an over-emphasis on winning. And they probably do have a better balanced team than Michigan. Our coaches have been telling us that, too."

As an understudy to Mike Rae last season, Haden had seven touchdown passes. He played four minutes in the 1973 Rose Bowl after a 42-17 USC win over Ohio State was already decided.

Last season, USC breezed to a 12-0 record and a national championship. This year, things have been a little different; nine wins, a 7-7 tie with Oklahoma, and a 23-14 loss to Notre Dame in South Bend. After the Notre Dame game, USC won four in a row, including a 23-13 win over UCLA for the Pac-8 title and the Pacific-8 Rose Bowl bid.

"Since Notre Dame, we've really come back and played well together," said Haden.

"The biggest thing is that we've come back and we've been winning."

In addition to the confrontation on the field, the Rose Bowl will again oppose two different coaching styles: the low-keyed, businesslike approach of McKay vs. the emotional, life-or-death style of Woody Hayes. Haden is glad he's on McKay's side.

"It's more fun, that's for sure," said Haden. "After everything else, it's supposed to be a game, and coach Mckay feels that way too.

"We work hard in practice but we have our good times, too. It's important that we enjoy what we're doing."

NFL Giants Set Attendance Mark Of 470,273

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI) — The New York Giants won fewer games in the National Football League this year before more people than ever before.

The Giants, who established their second worst record, 2-11-1, in their history, played five games at Yale Bowl before a record 470,273, surpassing the 441,017 who witnessed seven games at Yankee Stadium in 1963.

Home and away attendance for the Giants also set a new mark in 1973. A total of 893,872 saw the Giants play, compared to 830,066 in 1970.

Yale Bowl, which seats 70,874, became the temporary home of the Giants this year when Yankee Stadium was closed for complete restoration.

Alabama Steps Up Preparations For Sugar Bowl

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — The Alabama Crimson Tide was to begin a stepped-up tempo today in preparation for the New Year's Eve clash with Notre Dame in the Sugar Bowl.

"We've got a lot of work to do on our passing because it has been cold and rainy," coach Paul "Bear" Bryant said yesterday.

It was cold and rainy enough yesterday to force the team inside for most of the session.

"We just walked through the game plan inside," Bryant said. "Then we went outside to warm up and get in some conditioning."

Coaches Selected

MOBILE, Ala. (UPI) — Mike McCormack of the Philadelphia Eagles and Don McCafferty of the Detroit Lions will be the coaches for the North and South in the 25th Senior Bowl football game, to be played here on Jan. 12.

NBA ROUNDUP

Bullets' Coach Jones Knows True Nature Of Basketball

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

K.C. Jones, former defensive standout with the Boston Celtics and now coach of the Capital Bullets, understands the true nature of basketball.

Jones' own players think they know what's going on on the court, but the National Basketball Association coach knows best.

Mike Riordan, for example, explained in cogent detail last night's 102-100 comeback victory over the New York Knicks after a 19-point first half deficit.

"We were patient," said Riordan, an ex-Knick. "We stacked our offense and cleared the way for our hot shooters. We started to do that toward the end of the first half when they were blowing us off the court. In the second half, it was mostly one-on-one basketball for us. We went to our big guns, Chenier, Clark and Hayes."

Riordan felt his explanation was plainly supported by the boxscore which showed Phil Chenier and Elvin Hayes with 24 points apiece and Archie Clark with 28.

"We got lucky as hell," said Jones. "The Knicks shot well in the first half, executed their plays to perfection. We tried several adjustments. Some worked but mostly we got lucky. It won't happen again."

Walt Frazier, still bothered by tendonitis in his left wrist, was expected to sit out as late as a half-hour before the game but said he felt all right in warmups and took the court. Frazier scored 13 of his 19 first half points in the first period, finished with 27, 10 rebounds and eight assists.

But it was the one that got away that Frazier remembered best after the game.

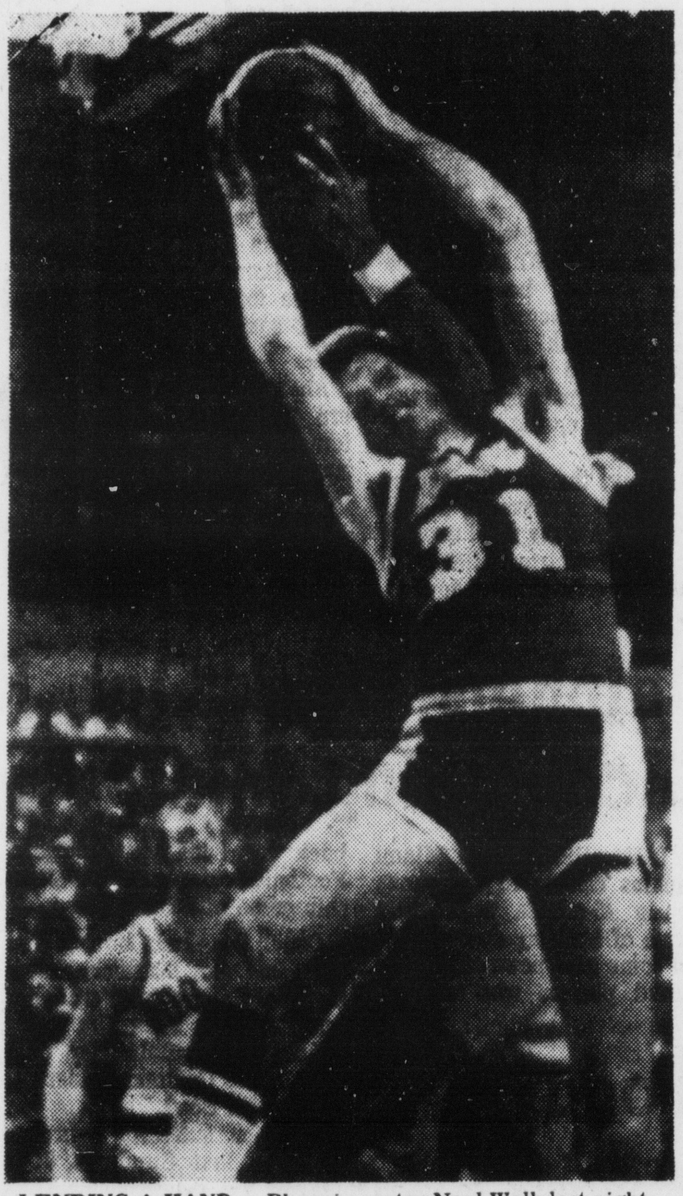
With four seconds remaining and the Bullets leading 102-100, "Clyde" intercepted a pass by Nick Weatherspoon and drove the middle for a layup that would have tied the game. But 6-foot 9 Elvin Hayes stretched himself to protect his goal and lefthanded scoop shot by Frazier failed to fall in. Hayes pulled down his 20th rebound to secure the game.

In the only other NBA game last night, the Phoenix Suns, with their sticky defense forcing Los Angeles into 26 turnovers, trounced the Lakers 135-100.

Charlie Scott, with 27 points, led the Suns, who trailed only during the opening minute of the game. Neal Walk had 20 and Mike Bantom and Corky Calhoun 19 each.

Pat Riley came off the bench to score 17 for the NBA Pacific Division-leading Lakers. Bill Bridges had 13 while Gail Goodrich, the league's fifth top scorer, and Elmore Smith had 12 each.

Phoenix, after leading 61-50 at halftime, broke away to a 99-73 margin in the third quarter when it hit 47 per cent from the field compared to a cool 30 per cent for the Lakers.



LENDING A HAND — Phoenix center Neal Walk last night tried unsuccessfully to wrest the basketball away from Los Angeles forward Mel Counts (31) who controlled a rebound underneath the Sun's basket in Phoenix. The Suns rolled to a 135-100 victory. (UPI Telephoto)

It was the second straight convincing win for the Suns over a division leader. They had defeated Milwaukee 121-112 Saturday night.

Los Angeles played without Coach Bill Sharman, who stayed home because of his wife's illness. Assistant coach John Barnhill ran the team.

Seals Attempt To Win First In Vancouver

VANCOUVER, B.C. (AP) — During three seasons in the National Hockey League, the California Golden Seals have failed to win a single game at Vancouver. They try again tonight.

The Seals, mired in last place in the West Division, have won only once on the road this season.

"Actually, we didn't play all that bad on the last trip," said Seals center Ivan Boldirev. California had a 0-3 record for the trip.

"We just missed winning in Toronto," he added. "Outside of the 11-2 to Detroit and 9-1 to Pittsburgh losses, we've not been disgraced."

Indiana, Providence In Tourneys

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Indiana Hoosiers are way out West and the Providence Friars are somewhere over the Rainbow.

They're among several highly-rated college basketball teams playing today in farflung holiday tournaments.

Indiana, the nation's seventh-ranked team, is favored to win the Far West Classic in Portland, Ore. Providence, No. 9, is the pick in the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu.

The tournament tempo picks up across the land and before the Christmas week is over, more than 600 teams will have played in over 125 affairs.

Such exotic names as the Winged Foot Classic and Blue Devil Classic are on the holiday menu.

Along with Indiana, the Far West field has Army, West Virginia, Brigham Young, Oregon State, Oregon, Texas and Washington.

The Rainbow, also an eight-team, four-day tourney, includes — along with Providence — Hawaii, Purdue, St. Joseph's, Pa., Santa Clara, Washington State, Tennessee and Sub-Pac.

Among the other major events are the All-College Tournament in Oklahoma City; the Big Eight Tournament in Kansas City; the ECAC Holiday Festival in New York, and the Quaker City Classic in Philadelphia.

Southern California, ranked No. 14, will be among the field in the All-College affair. Houston, Weber State, Oklahoma City, Oral Roberts, Rutgers, Southwest Texas and Virginia Tech, winner of the NIT last year, are the other All-College participants.

Alabama Steps Up Preparations For Sugar Bowl

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — The Alabama Crimson Tide was to begin a stepped-up tempo today in preparation for the New Year's Eve clash with Notre Dame in the Sugar Bowl.

"We've got a lot of work to do on our passing because it has been cold and rainy," coach Paul "Bear" Bryant said yesterday.

It was cold and rainy enough yesterday to force the team inside for most of the session.

"We just walked through the game plan inside," Bryant said. "Then we went outside to warm up and get in some conditioning."

MOBILE, Ala. (UPI) — Mike McCormack of the Philadelphia Eagles and Don McCafferty of the Detroit Lions will be the coaches for the North and South in the 25th Senior Bowl football game, to be played here on Jan. 12.

Bullets' Coach Jones Knows True Nature Of Basketball

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

K.C. Jones, former defensive standout with the Boston Celtics and now coach of the Capital Bullets, understands the true nature of basketball.

Jones' own players think they know what's going on on the court, but the National Basketball Association coach knows best.

Mike Riordan, for example, explained in cogent detail last night's 102-100 comeback victory over the New York Knicks after a 19-point first half deficit.

"We were patient," said Riordan, an ex-Knick. "We stacked our offense and cleared the way for our hot shooters. We started to do that toward the end of the first half when they were blowing us off the court. In the second half, it was mostly one-on-one basketball for us. We went to our big guns, Chenier, Clark and Hayes."

Riordan felt his explanation was plainly supported by the boxscore which showed Phil Chenier and Elvin Hayes with 24 points apiece and Archie Clark with 28.

"We got lucky as hell," said Jones. "The Knicks shot well in the first half, executed their plays to perfection. We tried several adjustments. Some worked but mostly we got lucky. It won't happen again."

Walt Frazier, still bothered by tendonitis in his left wrist, was expected to sit out as late as a half-hour before the game but said he felt all right in warmups and took the court. Frazier scored 13 of his 19 first half points in the first period, finished with 27, 10 rebounds and eight assists.

But it was the one that got away that Frazier remembered best after the game.

With four seconds remaining and the Bullets leading 102-100, "Clyde" intercepted a pass by Nick Weatherspoon and drove the middle for a layup that would have tied the game. But 6-foot 9 Elvin Hayes stretched himself to protect his goal and lefthanded scoop shot by Frazier failed to fall in. Hayes pulled down his 20th rebound to secure the game.

In the only other NBA game last night, the Phoenix Suns, with their sticky defense forcing Los Angeles into 26 turnovers, trounced the Lakers 135-100.

Charlie Scott, with 27 points, led the Suns, who trailed only during the opening minute of the game. Neal Walk had 20 and Mike Bantom and Corky Calhoun 19 each.

Pat Riley came off the bench to score 17 for the NBA Pacific Division-leading Lakers. Bill Bridges had 13 while Gail Goodrich, the league's fifth top scorer, and Elmore Smith had 12 each.

Phoenix, after leading 61-50 at halftime, broke away to a 99-73 margin in the third quarter when it hit 47 per cent from the field compared to a cool 30 per cent for the Lakers.

It was the second straight convincing win for the Suns over a division leader. They had defeated Milwaukee 121-112 Saturday night.

Los Angeles played without Coach Bill Sharman, who stayed home because of his wife's illness. Assistant coach John Barnhill ran the team.

Seals Attempt To Win First In Vancouver

VANCOUVER, B.C. (AP) — During three seasons in the National Hockey League, the California Golden Seals have failed to win a single game at Vancouver. They try again tonight.

The Seals, mired in last place in the West Division, have won only once on the road this season.

"Actually, we didn't play all that bad on the last trip," said Seals center Ivan Boldirev. California had a 0-3 record for the trip.

"We just missed winning in Toronto," he added. "Outside of the 11-2 to Detroit and 9-1 to Pittsburgh losses, we've not been disgraced."

Indiana, Providence In Tourneys

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Indiana Hoosiers are way out West and the Providence Friars are somewhere over the Rainbow.

They're among several highly-rated college basketball teams playing today in farflung holiday tournaments.

Indiana, the nation's seventh-ranked team, is favored to win the Far West Classic in Portland, Ore. Providence, No. 9, is the pick in the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu.

The tournament tempo picks up across the land and before the Christmas week is over, more than 600 teams will have played in over 125 affairs.

Such exotic names as the Winged Foot Classic and Blue Devil Classic are on the holiday menu.

Along with Indiana, the Far West field has Army, West Virginia, Brigham Young, Oregon State, Oregon, Texas and Washington.

The Rainbow, also an eight-team, four-day tourney, includes — along with Providence — Hawaii, Purdue, St. Joseph's, Pa., Santa Clara, Washington State, Tennessee and Sub-Pac.

Among the other major events are the All-College Tournament in Oklahoma City; the Big Eight Tournament in Kansas City; the ECAC Holiday Festival in New York, and the Quaker City Classic in Philadelphia.

Southern California, ranked No. 14, will be among the field in the All-College affair. Houston, Weber State, Oklahoma City, Oral Roberts, Rutgers, Southwest Texas and Virginia Tech, winner of the NIT last year, are the other All-College participants.

Optimistic Outlook For The Year 2000

The Fish and Game Department was recently asked for their projections to the year 2000 for fish and wildlife preservation and enhancement. The Department thinks there will be many pluses and a few minuses.

Predictions of this sort are subject, of course, to rapidly changing conditions, which have the effect of changing the baseline from which the projects are made.

Anyway, here are the Department projections:

The period between now and the year 2000 will be critical for many species of wildlife. The task of maintaining species now listed as rare or endangered will require the continued intensive effort of all Californians, not just those of us in the business of fish and wildlife conservation.

By the turn of the century, however, the necessary habitat for all species should have been acquired in an effort to preserve all species in perpuity.

WE EXPECT the quality of the marine environment to improve, and with it the populations of tidal invertebrates to increase. Improved water quality, habitat preservation and enforcement of regulations should help bring these developments about.

Man will more intensively utilize marine resources such as the squid, anchovy and hake. Mariculture practices now being developed will substantially increase the production of shellfish.

The sport angler will have better offshore fishing opportunities as man-made reefs and other devices are used to artificially improve fisheries habitat.

Zoning and maintaining lands for open space and recreation will be a reality.

However, the types of outdoor recreation use will be changed. Hunting opportunities will decrease as open space becomes a more critical factor in the total recreation picture.

At the same time, fishing opportunities will increase because of new water developments, improved water quality and new fisheries management techniques.

TO ACCOMPLISH these things and to avoid depletion of the wildlife resources of the state will require substantial participation by support from all the public, not just the fishermen and hunters who to date have been the primary financial underwriters of wildlife perpetuation.

The cornerstone of such a long-range program of fish and wildlife preservation and enhancement is the use of professional management techniques.

We cannot hope to lock up our fish and wildlife resources in the belief that this alone will assure their survival.

This generation will be remembered not only for what it saves of its fish and wildlife resources — as important, even vital, as preservation is — but for what it builds.

Our task is greater than this. We must also rebuild and improve and increase fish and wildlife resources.

AND THESE TASKS can be accomplished only through the use of professional fish and wildlife management techniques, one of which is regulated fishing and hunting to remove surpluses.

We can assure you that, whatever the future holds, fishing and hunting will continue to play a major role in fish and wildlife preservation and enhancement.

It was you who started us down the long road back from the near extinction of fish and wildlife resources, and we are not about to give up the struggle you so nobly started.

BOATING

Boat Lifts, Hoists Can Provide Shelter

A Puget Sound boatman writes to ask about the practicality of boat lifts, or hoists. During a visit to Detroit last summer, he was surprised to find hundreds of light, runabout-type boats suspended in slings supported by slender frames of angle iron or pipe.

The shores of the St. Clair River between Lake Huron and Lake St. Clair, are lined with boats moored in such a way. The boats are held a few feet above the water, yet can be lowered in a few seconds and made ready for action.

One will find boat hoists in another form along the canals and waterways of Florida. But there, they seem to prefer the davit type, mounted on a dock.

Boat lifts or hoists are very necessary on the St. Clair river because of the constant traffic of heavily laden iron-ore ships, some of them 25,000 tons and more. They bring ore from Duluth to the blast furnaces of Pennsylvania.

This traffic of heavy ships causes constant wave action along the shore which is very hard on boats. It causes incessant rubbing and chafing against dock or beach.

Boat lifts originated to combat this tendency.

They are little more than a rectangular scaffold of pipe or angle iron designed to allow fabric slings to be slipped under a boat to hoist it out of the water. A large wheel, frequently up to three or four feet in diameter, gives enough leverage, through a system of pulleys, to raise a fairly heavy craft.

On some sophisticated systems an electric motor does the work.

Lifts are also particularly useful in an area where the prevailing wind is onshore, and a sharp blow could raise waves big enough to damage a beached boat.

There are thousands of boat lifts around Lake Erie, and many water impoundments, created by dams, in other parts of the middle states.

The whole question of protecting a moored boat is an important one as some of the questions we got indicate:

Q. Who makes boat lifts?

A. There are many firms, but try Reimann and Georger Inc., Box 681, Buffalo, N.Y. 14240, or R. W. Nelson Structures Inc., 1700 Johnson Road, New Berlin Wis., 53151, or Boat Lifts Inc., 1666 W. 31st Place, Hialeah, Fla., 33012.

Q. Where can I find out the names of all firms making boat lifts and mooring equipment.

A. Get Boat Owners Buyers Guide, published by Yachting, 50 West 44th Street, New York, N. Y. 10036. It gives the name and address of everybody who does anything in boating and sailing.

Q. How much do boat lifts cost?

A. Depending on the size and weight of the boat to be handled, costs run from about $300 to more than $1,200.

Frosh Cagers To Play

The players who will be making headlines three years from now as seniors will be making baskets tomorrow through Saturday as freshmen in the Marin Catholic Frosh Invitational basketball tournament.

The eight-team affair, now in its fourth year, has been dubbed "Stars of the Future" by tournament director Dave Gonsalves, and small wonder.

Among the players who have appeared there in the past are Ricky Lee, who starred last year for Riordan High of San Francisco and now plays for Lincoln; Greg Bond, another Riordan star; and Marin headliners Darrell Elder (Redwood), Neil Hennessy (Redwood) and Mike Mahoney (Marin Catholic).

Tomorrow's schedule calls for St. Joseph's of Alameda vs. Sacred Heart of San Francisco, 3 p.m.; Tamalpais vs. Moreau of Hayward, 4:30 p.m.; Cardinal Newman of Santa Rosa vs. St. Elizabeth's of Oakland, 6 p.m.; and Marin Catholic vs. Redwood, 7:30 p.m.

Winners meet at 6 and 7:30 p.m. Friday, with losers playing at 3 and 4:30. Play continues at the same times Saturday, with the 7:30 p.m. game being for the championship.

St. Joseph's, St. Elizabeth's, Tamalpais and Redwood are new this year, replacing San Rafael, Bishop O'Dowd of Oakland, St. Patrick's of Vallejo and St. Ignatius of San Francisco.

Petaluma originally was included, but withdrew last week because North Bay League rules forbid its participation, Gonsalves said. Redwood replaced Petaluma. Ordinarily, only one Marin County Athletic League school (a different one each year) joins the host Wildcats.

Tickets cost $1.25 for adults and 75 cents for students and are available at the gate, as is a pass for all three days costing $2.50.

ROMANIA'S ILIE NASTASE

High Strung On Tennis Court

By PHIL ELDERKIN
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

Ilie Nastase is often strung tighter than his racket. A tennis tournament to him is more like a war. And when things don't suit him, he has been known to (1) throw towels at officials; (2) hit balls at linesmen; (3) bite the net; and (4) get into shouting matches with the paying customers.

Then, the moment he is fined for actions unbecoming a professional tennis player, he wants to know why? If he ever decides to do an autobiography, it will have to be written on asbestos.

Two years ago he shocked the British Empire by yelling to a friend during the middle of a Wimbledon final to race back to the locker room and get him a different racket. And he didn't calm down until the racket was delivered. In Macon, Ga., he appeared on court in polka-dot pajamas.

In a game which is just beginning to break some of its old molds, Nastase has become a superstar — a brooding, pouting, undisciplined, flamboyant personality — but a superstar nevertheless. His tennis earnings this year topped $225,000.

Although the best way to play Ilie is probably with a whip and a chair, the rules forbid it. And, anyway, most crowds have shown a tendency to quickly forgive his emotional displays and applaud his good shots. For above all else, this Romanian hot dog is a superb tennis player.

His isn't just a serve and volley game. He also has the basic ground strokes so necessary for today's slow-playing synthetic surface. And what he doesn't run after isn't worth trying to get. You measure his quickness in terms of a flash camera.

Asked about his personality, Nastase replied: "My personality is all me. What you see; what you hear is me. Why be like everybody else when you can be different. I like me the way I am.

"I also like crowds. But I no like it when they no like me . . . Really, I not bad guy, like some people say I am."

ILIE NASTASE
Tennis like war

Ilie's wife, a stunning Brussels brunette who looks as though she might have stepped off the cover of a fashion magazine, often travels with her husband and attends his matches. But usually she sits only in the back of the stands or in the balcony where she won't be noticed.

She comes from a wealthy family (bankers), is named Dominique, but prefers to be called Niki. They met exactly the way you'd expect two young, attractive Europeans to discover each other.

Nastase was playing in the U. Y. when he spotted Niki (on vacation) watching from the stands. So much for the theory that the pros never concentrate on anything except the ball.

After the match Ilie pointed the girl out to a friend and asked if he knew her. When the answer was yes, an immediate introduction was arranged.

They were married twice in December of 1972 — once in Brussels; the second time in France. One was a civil ceremony; the other religious.

Except for his extreme quickness and anticipation, there is no one part of Nastase's game which could be considered in a class by itself.

Like most Europeans, he learned to play on clay. He is not known as a particularly hard hitter and is generally content to return service and start the point from there.

But he does have great range, uses a lot of topspin, and makes an extremely high number of off-balance shots. And he often returns service well off his backhand.

Ilie always seems to be where the ball is, and he doesn't really have a weakness. His game is built mostly on speed, timing, agility and quickness, plus that inherent anticipation which makes him seem like he's in two places at once.

As for his temper and low-boiling point, Ilie admits that not all his reactions are completely spontaneous — that he sometimes puts people on a little with his show-biz antics.

"I like to act sometimes," he says. "It's in the blood."

hasn't been running tire ads in the last 2 months, been too busy selling tires, to run an ad so we could sell more tires.

A lot of other Tire Co. have been advertising and they have mostly been featuring steel radial tires.

We see a lot of Nonsense & flim flam in some of these ads.

Michelin made the steel radial tires famous. When their patents ran out in 1970 the door was open for anyone to build a "STEEL RADIAL" tire. Everyone has & there are some bad ones on the market.

Steel Radials and tires for imported cars are nothing new to Cain's Tire - We foresaw the trend in 1963 when we dumped Goodyear & signed with Michelin. Our peers said we would flop badly.

Instead of failing we grew to a 2 million dollar a year business. Along the years we added Dunlap - Semperit - Bridgestone - Pirelli - Continental.

We have quality line-up of tires you can't match in Marin - Plus - we know what tire & what size is best for what car and we will always level with you.

PEOPLE: Please don't over size the radial Tires on your car - on the recommendations of some tire Salesman who has only been selling radials for less than a year.

PEOPLE: There is a right way and a wrong way to mount radial Tires - Also to rotate - balance - and align them.

It took me about 5 yrs. to learn all there was to know about radial Tires & why they act and perform like they do.

Boat Lifts, Hoists Can Provide Shelter

A Puget Sound boatman writes to ask about the practicality of boat lifts, or hoists. During a visit to Detroit last summer, he was surprised to find hundreds of light, runabout-type boats suspended in slings supported by slender frames of angle iron or pipe.

The shores of the St. Clair River between Lake Huron and Lake St. Clair, are lined with boats moored in such a way. The boats are held a few feet above the water, yet can be lowered in a few seconds and made ready for action.

One will find boat hoists in another form along the canals and waterways of Florida. But there, they seem to prefer the davit type, mounted on a dock.

Boat lifts or hoists are very necessary on the St. Clair river because of the constant traffic of heavily laden iron-ore ships, some of them 25,000 tons and more. They bring ore from Duluth to the blast furnaces of Pennsylvania.

This traffic of heavy ships causes constant wave action along the shore which is very hard on boats. It causes incessant rubbing and chafing against dock or beach.

Boat lifts originated to combat this tendency.

They are little more than a rectangular scaffold of pipe or angle iron designed to allow fabric slings to be slipped under a boat to hoist it out of the water. A large wheel, frequently up to three or four feet in diameter, gives enough leverage, through a system of pulleys, to raise a fairly heavy craft.

On some sophisticated systems an electric motor does the work.

Lifts are also particularly useful in an area where the prevailing wind is onshore, and a sharp blow could raise waves big enough to damage a beached boat.

There are thousands of boat lifts around Lake Erie, and many water impoundments, created by dams, in other parts of the middle states.

The whole question of protecting a moored boat is an important one as some of the questions we got indicate:

Q. Who makes boat lifts?

A. There are many firms, but try Reimann and Georger Inc., Box 681, Buffalo, N.Y. 14240, or R. W. Nelson Structures Inc., 1700 Johnson Road, New Berlin Wis., 53151, or Boat Lifts Inc., 1666 W. 31st Place, Hialeah, Fla., 33012.

Q. Where can I find out the names of all firms making boat lifts and mooring equipment.

A. Get Boat Owners Buyers Guide, published by Yachting, 50 West 44th Street, New York, N. Y. 10036. It gives the name and address of everybody who does anything in boating and sailing.

Q. How much do boat lifts cost?

A. Depending on the size and weight of the boat to be handled, costs run from about $300 to more than $1,200.

Frosh Cagers To Play

The players who will be making headlines three years from now as seniors will be making baskets tomorrow through Saturday as freshmen in the Marin Catholic Frosh Invitational basketball tournament.

The eight-team affair, now in its fourth year, has been dubbed "Stars of the Future" by tournament director Dave Gonsalves, and small wonder.

Among the players who have appeared there in the past are Ricky Lee, who starred last year for Riordan High of San Francisco and now plays for Lincoln; Greg Bond, another Riordan star; and Marin headliners Darrell Elder (Redwood), Neil Hennessy (Redwood) and Mike Mahoney (Marin Catholic).

Tomorrow's schedule calls for St. Joseph's of Alameda vs. Sacred Heart of San Francisco, 3 p.m.; Tamalpais vs. Moreau of Hayward, 4:30 p.m.; Cardinal Newman of Santa Rosa vs. St. Elizabeth's of Oakland, 6 p.m.; and Marin Catholic vs. Redwood, 7:30 p.m.

Winners meet at 6 and 7:30 p.m. Friday, with losers playing at 3 and 4:30. Play continues at the same times Saturday, with the 7:30 p.m. game being for the championship.

St. Joseph's, St. Elizabeth's, Tamalpais and Redwood are new this year, replacing San Rafael, Bishop O'Dowd of Oakland, St. Patrick's of Vallejo and St. Ignatius of San Francisco.

Petaluma originally was included, but withdrew last week because North Bay League rules forbid its participation, Gonsalves said. Redwood replaced Petaluma. Ordinarily, only one Marin County Athletic League school (a different one each year) joins the host Wildcats.

Tickets cost $1.25 for adults and 75 cents for students and are available at the gate, as is a pass for all three days costing $2.50.

ROMANIA'S ILIE NASTASE

High Strung On Tennis Court

By PHIL ELDERKIN
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

Ilie Nastase is often strung tighter than his racket. A tennis tournament to him is more like a war. And when things don't suit him, he has been known to (1) throw towels at officials; (2) hit balls at linesmen; (3) bite the net; and (4) get into shouting matches with the paying customers.

Then, the moment he is fined for actions unbecoming a professional tennis player, he wants to know why? If he ever decides to do an autobiography, it will have to be written on asbestos.

Two years ago he shocked the British Empire by yelling to a friend during the middle of a Wimbledon final to race back to the locker room and get him a different racket. And he didn't calm down until the racket was delivered. In Macon, Ga., he appeared on court in polka-dot pajamas.

In a game which is just beginning to break some of its old molds, Nastase has become a superstar — a brooding, pouting, undisciplined, flamboyant personality — but a superstar nevertheless. His tennis earnings this year topped $225,000.

Although the best way to play Ilie is probably with a whip and a chair, the rules forbid it. And, anyway, most crowds have shown a tendency to quickly forgive his emotional displays and applaud his good shots. For above all else, this Romanian hot dog is a superb tennis player.

His isn't just a serve and volley game. He also has the basic ground strokes so necessary for today's slow-playing synthetic surface. And what he doesn't run after isn't worth trying to get. You measure his quickness in terms of a flash camera.

Asked about his personality, Nastase replied: "My personality is all me. What you see; what you hear is me. Why be like everybody else when you can be different. I like me the way I am.

"I also like crowds. But I no like it when they no like me . . . Really, I not bad guy, like some people say I am."

ILIE NASTASE
Tennis like war

Ilie's wife, a stunning Brussels brunette who looks as though she might have stepped off the cover of a fashion magazine, often travels with her husband and attends his matches. But usually she sits only in the back of the stands or in the balcony where she won't be noticed.

She comes from a wealthy family (bankers), is named Dominique, but prefers to be called Niki. They met exactly the way you'd expect two young, attractive Europeans to discover each other.

Nastase was playing in the U. Y. when he spotted Niki (on vacation) watching from the stands. So much for the theory that the pros never concentrate on anything except the ball.

After the match Ilie pointed the girl out to a friend and asked if he knew her. When the answer was yes, an immediate introduction was arranged.

They were married twice in December of 1972 — once in Brussels; the second time in France. One was a civil ceremony; the other religious.

Except for his extreme quickness and anticipation, there is no one part of Nastase's game which could be considered in a class by itself.

Like most Europeans, he learned to play on clay. He is not known as a particularly hard hitter and is generally content to return service and start the point from there.

But he does have great range, uses a lot of topspin, and makes an extremely high number of off-balance shots. And he often returns service well off his backhand.

Ilie always seems to be where the ball is, and he doesn't really have a weakness. His game is built mostly on speed, timing, agility and quickness, plus that inherent anticipation which makes him seem like he's in two places at once.

As for his temper and low-boiling point, Ilie admits that not all his reactions are completely spontaneous — that he sometimes puts people on a little with his show-biz antics.

"I like to act sometimes," he says. "It's in the blood."

CAIN'S TIRE

hasn't been running tire ads in the last 2 months, been too busy selling tires, to run an ad so we could sell more tires.

A lot of other Tire Co. have been advertising and they have mostly been featuring steel radial tires.

We see a lot of Nonsense & flim flam in some of these ads.

Michelin made the steel radial tires famous. When their patents ran out in 1970 the door was open for anyone to build a "STEEL RADIAL" tire. Everyone has & there are some bad ones on the market.

Steel Radials and tires for imported cars are nothing new to Cain's Tire - We foresaw the trend in 1963 when we dumped Goodyear & signed with Michelin. Our peers said we would flop badly.

Instead of failing we grew to a 2 million dollar a year business. Along the years we added Dunlap - Semperit - Bridgestone - Pirelli - Continental.

We have quality line-up of tires you can't match in Marin - Plus - we know what tire & what size is best for what car and we will always level with you.

PEOPLE: Please don't over size the radial Tires on your car - on the recommendations of some tire Salesman who has only been selling radials for less than a year.

PEOPLE: There is a right way and a wrong way to mount radial Tires - Also to rotate - balance - and align them.

It took me about 5 yrs. to learn all there was to know about radial Tires & why they act and perform like they do.

Happy Holiday Season and in the New Year if you want a knowledgeable answer to your tire problems - Call the experts at Cain's. I think you will recognize quickly, we know what we're talking about.

Bank Takes Look At '74 Economy

Despite growing shortages of energy and industrial raw materials, a Bank of America economic study foresees moderate real growth in the U.S. economy in 1974 and no recession.

Bank of America's forecast, "Focus on the U.S. Economy: 1974," hinges on two basic assumptions.

The first, Middle East oil production and exports will return to preconflict levels in the first quarter of 1974. Should this not occur, the report says, then the possibility of a domestic recession would increase.

The second assumption is that government programs to allocate available supplies of petroleum products will favor agriculture and industry.

"Given those conditions, Gross National Product in current prices should advance in 1974 by somewhat more than $100 billion or 8 per cent," the B of A study says. "About three-fourths of the gain will be due to inflation, and about one-fourth will be a real increase in goods and services."

Energy shortages, the report points out, will nonetheless cause "inconveniences and some economic dislocation." Inflation, too, the bank says, will continue as an "overriding economic concern in the United States."

Consumer spending for nondurable goods and services will show gains next year, the report says. A significant share of these increases will be due to higher prices for nondurable goods, such as food and clothing, and the higher costs of services. Offsetting this, personal income will increase due to modest employment gains and higher wage rates, the study forecasts.

Bank of America predicts that consumer spending on durable goods will decline more than 5 per cent next year. Current and prospective energy shortages could decrease spending on automobiles, boats, snowmobiles and other vehicles. A dip in completions of new residential structures could dampen the demand for furniture and appliances.

Automobile sales are projected to decline from 11.5 million units in 1973 to 10.5 million units next year and the report says this projection "could prove optimistic if actions are taken to ration or otherwise restrict gasoline availability."

The bank estimates completions of new residences in 1974 will total 1.7 to 1.8 million units. This is a drop from a total of about 2.1 million units in 1973. This downturn has been caused by construction exceeding long-term demand for housing and recent increases in mortgage interest rates, the report says.

Other areas of the economy will show gains.

Business investment spending, adding productive capacity and equipment for environmental control, will increase more than 15 per cent to about $157 billion, the report says.

Stocks Get Lift From Oil Easing

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stock prices got a powerful lift on the New York Stock Exchange today from news the Arabs had eased their oil embargo against Japan and much of western Europe.

Some analysts commented the market is in an extremely emotional state and any sign of improvement in the energy news probably would spark a powerful upswing.

A number of stocks also benefitted from speculation administration energy czar William E. Simon will rule out gas rationing for the time being at a news conference scheduled for tomorrow. In auto travel-related stocks, McDonald's Corp. added 3 ⅝, Ponderosa Systems 2 ⅛, Walt Disney 1 ⅞, Holiday Inns 1 ⅝.

Sony Corp. led the actives, adding 4 to 26 ¾ on 106,700 shares, reacting to the easing of the Arab oil embargo against Japan.

On the American Exchange, stocks also rallied in active trading. Amic Corp. was the volume leader, and gained ⅛ to 8 ½ on 56,900 shares.

Big Board glamor issues, hard hit for several months, rose sharply. Burroughs advanced 10 ¼, IBM 8, Xerox 4 ¾, Texas instruments and Avon Products 4 ¼ each.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

More Conservative Fund Suggested For Investor

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. Since last Feburary I have invested $100 monthly in IDS Growth Fund. I am in my late 50's and wonder if this was a wise choice. — I.H.

A. Because the fund is relatively new, a meaningful performance record has not yet been established. However, the parent company manages over $6 billion in assets for seven other mutual funds, all of which have performed acceptably within the limits of their stated objectives. In choosing a mutual fund it is essential that the potential investor select a fund which matches his individual investment goals. IDS growth has an excellent but semi-speculative portfolio of junior growth issues better suited to the younger investor. In your case one of the more conservative funds in the IDS group would be more suitable.

Q. I own 250 shares of Trans Union Corp. (NYSE). Do you foresee the shares moving up much from the current price of about $42? — A.Z.

A. Aside from the advantages Trans Union may derive from the energy crisis, the company's railroad tank car leasing business should continue to spearhead earnings growth. Sales were up 20 per cent in the first nine months this year while earnings were at a record level. Final quarter results should continue this pattern and for the year $2.90 a share appears attainable. With the backlog of orders in all areas at a high level, earnings could reach a new peak in 1974.

With more than one-third of revenues from the leasing and sale of railroad cars and 16 per cent contributed by TU's shipping subsidiary, the company stands to benefit from the tight oil situation. Earlier problems of devaluation and flooding which reduced contributions from Central Gulf, TU's shipping arm, are now behind. This subsidiary is planning a 60 per cent expansion of capacity in order to capitalize on the rising demand for transportation of freight and oil cargoes. The increased utilization of railroads as freight forwarders — as an alternative to trucking cargo — should continue to push Trans Union's sales to new levels. Shares are well worth holding.

Loretta Lullwitz Calling It Quits

Loretta Lullwitz, secretary and office manager for the late Jacob Albert and his heirs for 48 years, will retire at the end of this month as property manager of the Albert holdings in San Rafael.

Her retirement marks the end of an era, which began with Jake Albert's first store, opened in 1893 at the corner of Fourth and B Streets in San Rafael, and continued for 80 years under the personal supervision of Albert's successors and close staff members. With Miss Lullwitz' retirement, management of the Albert properties will be turned over to the Trust Department of Bank of America in Santa Rosa.

Miss Lullwitz, who will turn 73 next March, will continue living at her home on Blossom Drive in Bret Harte Terrace, San Rafael. "I'm going to enjoy my house and garden and do a little traveling," said Miss Lullwitz. "I'll have time to entertain friends and may even go back to studying piano."

She admitted she would miss her work and her office on the third floor of the Albert Building at 1010 B Street, from where she managed and kept books on Albert holdings including the Albert Building, the adjacent building where The Great Store is located, Burns Florist building and parking area, the Merrill's Drug building, Scandinavian Design warehouse building on C Street, La Petite Auberge building, Paul's Liquors on Tamalpais Avenue, and the Sherman Clay building at Fourth and C Streets, which was just sold.

Born in Passaic, N.J., in 1901, Miss Lullwitz came to San Francisco at age 4. She moved with her parents just before the 1906 earthquake to San Rafael, where her father, Edward Lullwitz, started the barber shop where Al Workman's shop is now located.

She attended San Rafael schools, graduating from San Rafael High School in 1918. She then went to Heald's College in San Francisco and stayed on as instructor in accounting and commercial courses. She was also in charge of the accounting department at the Munson Secretarial School until 1925, when she first joined Albert's department store at Fourth and B Street in San Rafael where James L. Callan & Sons jewelers is now located.

In 1930, Jake Albert built the present Albert Building across the street from Callan's, and in 1942 completed Albert's store at the corner of Fourth and Court, where Macy's is now located.

When Jake Albert died in 1946, his son Harry Albert became president of the company. When Harry Albert passed away in 1963, his brother-in-law, Charles Marcus, took over as property manager. Miss Lullwitz became property manager when Marcus passed away on May 26, 1968. Harry Albert's widow, Rose, lives in San Rafael; and his sisters, Mrs. Charles Marcus in Greenbrae and Mrs. Bertha Grossman in Napa, but they are not personally involved in the management of the Albert properties.

Novato Chamber Saving Energy

The Greater Novato Chamber of Commerce has joined the nationwide effort to conserve energy.

Gordon L. Lee, president, said the Novato Chamber urges the community to join the energy conservation program by overall reduction of lights, turning out lights in unused areas and minimized night lighting.

"Lighted signs should also be reviewed to determine if changes could be made," said Lee. "In general, an inspection of your business or home will point out the areas in which energy could be conserved."

DYNASTY FASHIONS Inc., a new firm engaged in the direct selling of fine fashion jewelry, will have a grand opening this Friday at 4050 Redwood Highway in San Rafael, in the same building as the Golden Venus health spa.

Principals in the new business are former executives of Holiday Magic Inc. President and chairman of the board of Dynasty Fashions Inc. is Roland Nocera. Executive vice president is Henry Scarpelli, and director of marketing and distributorships is Thomas Scarpelli.

The company sells fashion jewelry through distributors and home parties. Thomas Scarpelli said his company has other offices in Dallas, New York, and Los Angeles.

The lease of space for Dynasty Fashions Inc. in San Rafael was arranged by National Properties of Marin at 5710 Paradise Drive in Corte Madera, near Big 4 Rents. National Properties of Marin is also a new firm, established in October by broker Rene Nogara of Woodacre. Nogara's staff includes Frank Marino of Terra Linda and Klaus Edler of Tiburon.

L. P. (HAP) PROCTOR of Fairfax has joined the sales staff of Jane Forster Realty, Fairfax.

A retired Navy pilot, Proctor has been in the real estate business for four years.

THE BUTCHERY breakfast and sandwich shop at 175 Paul Drive in Northgate Industrial Park will change hands as of New Year's Day, but the services will continue without change.

Dan Campbell of Terra Linda, who has operated The Butchery for two years, will sell it to James J. and Sheron Makin of Terra Linda. Makin, who has been in the food business for six years, owns a delicatessen in San Francisco. He will operate The Butchery from 6:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and half a day on Saturday.

Campbell, the present owner, said he will devote full time to his other business, Positively Fourth Street Saloon at 711 Fourth Street in San Rafael, which he and Tom Batch of Novato opened last October. Campbell also hopes to open a full line dinner house somewhere in Marin.

PETALUMA CO-OPERATIVE Creamery announced that its new cheese plant in Tracy is now 40 per cent complete. The plant, scheduled to open in mid-1974, will be able to produce 60 tons of Mozzarella cheese per operating day when at full capacity. The 54,000-square-foot plant will cost nearly $3 million to build.

Anderson bought the shop this month from a corporation headed by Robert Buchholz of San Rafael. In the past, Eastside Auto carried mostly domestic parts, but Anderson hopes to increase his stock of parts for foreign cars.

Anderson at one time worked at Eastside Auto, but transferred to Novato Auto Sales where he was parts manager for the past five years.

Bank Takes Look At '74 Economy

Despite growing shortages of energy and industrial raw materials, a Bank of America economic study foresees moderate real growth in the U.S. economy in 1974 and no recession.

Bank of America's forecast, "Focus on the U.S. Economy: 1974," hinges on two basic assumptions.

The first, Middle East oil production and exports will return to preconflict levels in the first quarter of 1974. Should this not occur, the report says, then the possibility of a domestic recession would increase.

The second assumption is that government programs to allocate available supplies of petroleum products will favor agriculture and industry.

"Given those conditions, Gross National Product in current prices should advance in 1974 by somewhat more than $100 billion or 8 per cent," the B of A study says. "About three-fourths of the gain will be due to inflation, and about one-fourth will be a real increase in goods and services."

Energy shortages, the report points out, will nonetheless cause "inconveniences and some economic dislocation." Inflation, too, the bank says, will continue as an "overriding economic concern in the United States."

Consumer spending for nondurable goods and services will show gains next year, the report says. A significant share of these increases will be due to higher prices for nondurable goods, such as food and clothing, and the higher costs of services. Offsetting this, personal income will increase due to modest employment gains and higher wage rates, the study forecasts.

Bank of America predicts that consumer spending on durable goods will decline more than 5 per cent next year. Current and prospective energy shortages could decrease spending on automobiles, boats, snowmobiles and other vehicles. A dip in completions of new residential structures could dampen the demand for furniture and appliances.

Automobile sales are projected to decline from 11.5 million units in 1973 to 10.5 million units next year and the report says this projection "could prove optimistic if actions are taken to ration or otherwise restrict gasoline availability."

The bank estimates completions of new residences in 1974 will total 1.7 to 1.8 million units. This is a drop from a total of about 2.1 million units in 1973. This downturn has been caused by construction exceeding long-term demand for housing and recent increases in mortgage interest rates, the report says.

Other areas of the economy will show gains.

Business investment spending, adding productive capacity and equipment for environmental control, will increase more than 15 per cent to about $157 billion, the report says.

Stocks Get Lift From Oil Easing

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stock prices got a powerful lift on the New York Stock Exchange today from news the Arabs had eased their oil embargo against Japan and much of western Europe.

Some analysts commented the market is in an extremely emotional state and any sign of improvement in the energy news probably would spark a powerful upswing.

A number of stocks also benefitted from speculation administration energy czar William E. Simon will rule out gas rationing for the time being at a news conference scheduled for tomorrow. In auto travel-related stocks, McDonald's Corp. added 3 ⅝, Ponderosa Systems 2 ⅛, Walt Disney 1 ⅞, Holiday Inns 1 ⅝.

Sony Corp. led the actives, adding 4 to 26 ¾ on 106,700 shares, reacting to the easing of the Arab oil embargo against Japan.

On the American Exchange, stocks also rallied in active trading. Amic Corp. was the volume leader, and gained ⅛ to 8 ½ on 56,900 shares.

Big Board glamor issues, hard hit for several months, rose sharply. Burroughs advanced 10 ¼, IBM 8, Xerox 4 ¾, Texas instruments and Avon Products 4 ¼ each.

48 YEARS OF SERVICE — Loretta Lullwitz, who worked for Albert Inc. and Albert Estate in San Rafael since 1925, reviews old photographs and mementos accumulated over the years. She retires at the end of this month after 48 years.

Loretta Lullwitz Calling It Quits

Loretta Lullwitz, secretary and office manager for the late Jacob Albert and his heirs for 48 years, will retire at the end of this month as property manager of the Albert holdings in San Rafael.

Her retirement marks the end of an era, which began with Jake Albert's first store, opened in 1893 at the corner of Fourth and B Streets in San Rafael, and continued for 80 years under the personal supervision of Albert's successors and close staff members. With Miss Lullwitz' retirement, management of the Albert properties will be turned over to the Trust Department of Bank of America in Santa Rosa.

Miss Lullwitz, who will turn 73 next March, will continue living at her home on Blossom Drive in Bret Harte Terrace, San Rafael. "I'm going to enjoy my house and garden and do a little traveling," said Miss Lullwitz. "I'll have time to entertain friends and may even go back to studying piano."

She admitted she would miss her work and her office on the third floor of the Albert Building at 1010 B Street, from where she managed and kept books on Albert holdings including the Albert Building, the adjacent building where The Great Store is located, Burns Florist building and parking area, the Merrill's Drug building, Scandinavian Design warehouse building on C Street, La Petite Auberge building, Paul's Liquors on Tamalpais Avenue, and the Sherman Clay building at Fourth and C Streets, which was just sold.

Born in Passaic, N.J., in 1901, Miss Lullwitz came to San Francisco at age 4. She moved with her parents just before the 1906 earthquake to San Rafael, where her father, Edward Lullwitz, started the barber shop where Al Workman's shop is now located.

She attended San Rafael schools, graduating from San Rafael High School in 1918. She then went to Heald's College in San Francisco and stayed on as instructor in accounting and commercial courses. She was also in charge of the accounting department at the Munson Secretarial School until 1925, when she first joined Albert's department store at Fourth and B Street in San Rafael where James L. Callan & Sons jewelers is now located.

In 1930, Jake Albert built the present Albert Building across the street from Callan's, and in 1942 completed Albert's store at the corner of Fourth and Court, where Macy's is now located.

When Jake Albert died in 1946, his son Harry Albert became president of the company. When Harry Albert passed away in 1963, his brother-in-law, Charles Marcus, took over as property manager. Miss Lullwitz became property manager when Marcus passed away on May 26, 1968. Harry Albert's widow, Rose, lives in San Rafael; and his sisters, Mrs. Charles Marcus in Greenbrae and Mrs. Bertha Grossman in Napa, but they are not personally involved in the management of the Albert properties.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

More Conservative Fund Suggested For Investor

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. Since last Feburary I have invested $100 monthly in IDS Growth Fund. I am in my late 50's and wonder if this was a wise choice. — I.H.

A. Because the fund is relatively new, a meaningful performance record has not yet been established. However, the parent company manages over $6 billion in assets for seven other mutual funds, all of which have performed acceptably within the limits of their stated objectives. In choosing a mutual fund it is essential that the potential investor select a fund which matches his individual investment goals. IDS growth has an excellent but semi-speculative portfolio of junior growth issues better suited to the younger investor. In your case one of the more conservative funds in the IDS group would be more suitable.

Q. I own 250 shares of Trans Union Corp. (NYSE). Do you foresee the shares moving up much from the current price of about $42? — A.Z.

A. Aside from the advantages Trans Union may derive from the energy crisis, the company's railroad tank car leasing business should continue to spearhead earnings growth. Sales were up 20 per cent in the first nine months this year while earnings were at a record level. Final quarter results should continue this pattern and for the year $2.90 a share appears attainable. With the backlog of orders in all areas at a high level, earnings could reach a new peak in 1974.

With more than one-third of revenues from the leasing and sale of railroad cars and 16 per cent contributed by TU's shipping subsidiary, the company stands to benefit from the tight oil situation. Earlier problems of devaluation and flooding which reduced contributions from Central Gulf, TU's shipping arm, are now behind. This subsidiary is planning a 60 per cent expansion of capacity in order to capitalize on the rising demand for transportation of freight and oil cargoes. The increased utilization of railroads as freight forwarders — as an alternative to trucking cargo — should continue to push Trans Union's sales to new levels. Shares are well worth holding.

News Syndicate Promotes Reed

Robert S. Reed, formerly of San Anselmo, will start the New Year as president of the Chicago Tribune-New York News Syndicate, succeeding Arthur Laro, who will retire.

Reed has been Eastern general manager for Publishers-Hall Syndicate, New York. During the 1960's when he was sales representative for Post-Hall Syndicate over 15 western states, Reed lived in San Anselmo.

Novato Chamber Saving Energy

The Greater Novato Chamber of Commerce has joined the nationwide effort to conserve energy.

Gordon L. Lee, president, said the Novato Chamber urges the community to join the energy conservation program by overall reduction of lights, turning out lights in unused areas and minimized night lighting.

"Lighted signs should also be reviewed to determine if changes could be made," said Lee. "In general, an inspection of your business or home will point out the areas in which energy could be conserved."

ALASKAN PARKLANDS

83.5 Million Acres Of Alaska Proposed For National Parks

By ROBERT CAHN
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The future of one-fifth of Alaska — 83.5 million acres — now is in the lap of Congress.

Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton has placed it there in the form of a package of 21 proposed national parks, national wildlife refuges, and national forests, three big additions to existing national units, plus four new wild and scenic rivers.

As expected, the plan was attacked immediately on several fronts. Some Alaskans say it is overly oriented to single-use parks and wildlife areas.

Conservation leaders also express opposition because too much land is slated for multiple-use, nonpark areas, in natural forests or under Bureau of Land Management control.

Most controversial are proposals in the spectacularly scenic Wrangell-St. Elias-Chugach Mountain area of south-central Alaska, east of Anchorage, and the bird-breeding area of the interior Yukon River north of Fairbanks.

Even though Morton's recommendations for an 8.6-million acre Wrangell-St. Elias national park would be three times the size of Yellowstone, the largest existing national park, the proposal has met strong criticism from environmental groups.

They had envisioned the Wrangell park as the jewel of the Alaska parks. They say the area just proposed for a park is mostly ice and snow, while most of the valley and lowland areas were proposed for two national forest units of 5.5 million acres which would sandwich in the national park.

National parks have the strictest use regulations of all the systems, barring mining, hunting, logging, and any kind of commercial development that could prevent the preservation of the scenic and recreation values.

National forests are managed under the Multiple Use-Sustained Yield Act of 1960 which requires the forest service to give equal consideration to timber production, mining, preservation of grazing lands, watershed protection, and wildlife management, as well as recreation.

In practice, the pressures for timber production sometimes threaten preservation of the natural values, although the forest service can, and does, manage much of its domain for wilderness values.

The interior Yukon area in dispute is the most prolific duck-nesting area in the nation, and has 130 species of birds of all kinds. In the area as proposed, which is split between a national forest and a wildlife refuge, the Fish and Wildlife Service now has control of less than 20 per cent of the prime waterfowl-nesting habitat. Some of the area also has been reserved for selection by native villages.

Among other proposals in the package are these recommendations:

A seven-million-acre "Gates of the Artic" national park in the Brooks Range.

A 7.6-million-acre Noatak national arctic range, just west of the Gates area.

Additions of 3.2 million acres on the north and south of Mt. McKinley, more than doubling the size of the national park.

Another large (2.6 million acres) national park, Lake Clark, near Anchorage, and four new national monuments.

A 2-million-acre national river around the Charley and Upper Yukon Rivers.

Representatives of the Senate and House Interior Committees, which will handle the proposed legislation unless it is split into bills for separate national parks, forest, and refuges, said they expected a little action on the proposals during 1974.

Ferry Sinks Off Ecuador; 143 Die

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador (UPI) — Some survivors of a crowded ferry that sank in the Pacific with about 300 persons aboard said today the crew was drunk, the ship was overloaded and the vessel had been condemned.

Authorities said more than half the passengers died when the ferry Jambeli sank in shark-infested waters 36 miles from Guayaquil and about one-half mile from Puna Island.

Naval officials said 143 bodies had been recovered by yesterday afternoon and 142 persons managed to reach safety. Navy frogmen said they feared more bodies were trapped in the hull of the vessel under 25 feet of water.

Naval authorities said the sinking of the 100-foot, 167-ton ferry Monday was the worst marine disaster in Ecuadorean history. The vessel went down during a scheduled trip from Puerto Bolivar in southern Ecuador to Guayaquil.

The victims, including women and children doing Christmas shopping and soldiers en route home for holiday leave, were given a mass burial yesterday.

The survivors said the ship began leaking off Puna island and went down in about 30 minutes. Most of the survivors swam the mile and a half to the island in the dark. Others floated for hours on debris from the ship until being picked out of the water by rescue boats.

Naval authorities opened an investigation yesterday into allegations by some surviving passengers that crewmembers were drinking and overloaded the vessel to double its capacity.

Some passengers said they complained before the trip to authorities at Puerto Bolivar of the ship being overloaded, but the vessel was permitted to leave anyway.

Captain Juan Nieto and first mate Jorge Contreras died in the disaster, but crewman Francisco Quinde survived and was being questioned by authorities.

Survivors from Puerto Bolivar said the Ecuadorean Social Security Institute condemned the vessel a few months ago because of "precarious conditions."

Happy Ending For Christmas

DETROIT (UPI) — A slum-born former convict and his buddy played Santa Claus to 14 orphaned children in Detroit because they remembered "what it's like not to get much for Christmas."

Gary Wright of Fraser and Gary Hutchins of Roseville bought 18 bicycles from a police auction and worked two months to repair them. The freshly painted bikes brought screams of delight from the 14 grandchildren of a Detroit couple. The grandparents took over care of the children after their widowed mother died in childbirth.

"Just watching their faces gives me a new lease on life," Wright said. "It's like betting on a horse and winning."

Area Flooded By Water Main

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Thousands of gallons of water flooded a residential intersection Christmas when a 16-inch water main burst, leaving 1,000 homes without water.

"The damned thing breaks once a year," said an angry homeowner. "I just wish they would figure out what's wrong and fix it."

Ed Brodie, a Water Department foreman, confirmed that the water main at Clarendon Avenue and Laguna Honda Boulevard does burst almost annually, but said no one seems to know why.

Ford Spends Holiday Skiing

VAIL, Colo. (UPI) — Vice President Gerald Ford spent two hours skiing in the Colorado mountains Christmas Day and then returned to his condominium to stay with his family.

Ford and ski instructor Dennie Hoeger, a longtime friend, have been skiing every day since he arrived in the mountain community of 2,000 people early Saturday.

"It's hard on my old legs," Ford said, "but it's just great to ski. It is nice to be up here and have some time to relax and enjoy the beautiful country."

Ford attended a late Christmas Eve mass at the Vail chapel and spent a leisurely Christmas Day with his family.

The Holiday Lights Missed

BETHLEHEM, Pa. (UPI) — A former prisoner of war, spending his first Christmas at home in eight years, said yesterday his biggest disappointment during the holiday season was a lack of outdoor lights.

Air Force Lt. Arthur Black, 29, Bethlehem, who spent eight years in a North Vietnamese prison, said in the past his hometown, known as Pennsylvania's Christmas City, sparkled with outdoor decorations and lighting.

"I used to dream about the lights in town during Christmas," Black said. "Unfortunately, this year with the energy crisis, I can't see them."

Yes, There Is Really Some Holiday Spirit

ST. LOUIS, Mo (UPI) — Two St. Louis crime victims benefited from the Christmas spirit yesterday.

It started out as a sad Christmas for Ema Miller, 29, and her six children. The family awoke to find someone had broken into their house and stolen all their Christmas presents— about $285 worth of toys and clothes.

However, when a St. Louis county resident heard news accounts of the robbery, he handed over a check for the full value of the stolen presents to the family. The good samaritan asked that he not be identified.

In a second incident, robbers forced their way into the apartment of a 25-year-old woman and robbed her of $7, and demanded more. But when the woman explained that was all she had, the robbers handed back the money and left.

Ferry Sinks Off Ecuador; 143 Die

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador (UPI) — Some survivors of a crowded ferry that sank in the Pacific with about 300 persons aboard said today the crew was drunk, the ship was overloaded and the vessel had been condemned.

Authorities said more than half the passengers died when the ferry Jambeli sank in shark-infested waters 36 miles from Guayaquil and about one-half mile from Puna Island.

Naval officials said 143 bodies had been recovered by yesterday afternoon and 142 persons managed to reach safety. Navy frogmen said they feared more bodies were trapped in the hull of the vessel under 25 feet of water.

Naval authorities said the sinking of the 100-foot, 167-ton ferry Monday was the worst marine disaster in Ecuadorean history. The vessel went down during a scheduled trip from Puerto Bolivar in southern Ecuador to Guayaquil.

The victims, including women and children doing Christmas shopping and soldiers en route home for holiday leave, were given a mass burial yesterday.

The survivors said the ship began leaking off Puna island and went down in about 30 minutes. Most of the survivors swam the mile and a half to the island in the dark. Others floated for hours on debris from the ship until being picked out of the water by rescue boats.

Naval authorities opened an investigation yesterday into allegations by some surviving passengers that crewmembers were drinking and overloaded the vessel to double its capacity.

Some passengers said they complained before the trip to authorities at Puerto Bolivar of the ship being overloaded, but the vessel was permitted to leave anyway.

Captain Juan Nieto and first mate Jorge Contreras died in the disaster, but crewman Francisco Quinde survived and was being questioned by authorities.

Survivors from Puerto Bolivar said the Ecuadorean Social Security Institute condemned the vessel a few months ago because of "precarious conditions."

Happy Ending For Christmas

DETROIT (UPI) — A slum-born former convict and his buddy played Santa Claus to 14 orphaned children in Detroit because they remembered "what it's like not to get much for Christmas."

Gary Wright of Fraser and Gary Hutchins of Roseville bought 18 bicycles from a police auction and worked two months to repair them. The freshly painted bikes brought screams of delight from the 14 grandchildren of a Detroit couple. The grandparents took over care of the children after their widowed mother died in childbirth.

"Just watching their faces gives me a new lease on life," Wright said. "It's like betting on a horse and winning."

Area Flooded By Water Main

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Thousands of gallons of water flooded a residential intersection Christmas when a 16-inch water main burst, leaving 1,000 homes without water.

"The damned thing breaks once a year," said an angry homeowner. "I just wish they would figure out what's wrong and fix it."

Ed Brodie, a Water Department foreman, confirmed that the water main at Clarendon Avenue and Laguna Honda Boulevard does burst almost annually, but said no one seems to know why.

Ford Spends Holiday Skiing

VAIL, Colo. (UPI) — Vice President Gerald Ford spent two hours skiing in the Colorado mountains Christmas Day and then returned to his condominium to stay with his family.

Ford and ski instructor Dennie Hoeger, a longtime friend, have been skiing every day since he arrived in the mountain community of 2,000 people early Saturday.

"It's hard on my old legs," Ford said, "but it's just great to ski. It is nice to be up here and have some time to relax and enjoy the beautiful country."

Ford attended a late Christmas Eve mass at the Vail chapel and spent a leisurely Christmas Day with his family.

Young Agency Tackles Job For Consumers

By RICHARD O. SIMPSON
Written for UPI

(EDITOR'S NOTE: UPI asked various government officials most directly concerned with the consumer to discuss the major issues they see ahead in 1974. The following dispatch was written by the chairman of the new Consumer Product Safety Commission.)

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It is difficult enough trying to predict where an "established" federal regulatory agency is headed over the next year. But that task is even more difficult for an agency — such as the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission — which is only seven months old.

To some degree, therefore, it might be helpful to look back over these seven months to better forecast where the commission is headed.

Since its activation May 14, 1973, the commission has devoted considerable time to development of a comprehensive set of policies which will guide our actions over the next several months and years.

In September, we issued our Consumer Product Hazard Index which ranks approximately 400 product categories in order of their risk of injury to consumers. That listing was based primarily on the frequency and severity of injuries as reported to the commission through our National Electronic Injury Surveillance System — which monitors 119 hospital emergency rooms nationwide.

It will guide our actions in setting mandatory product safety standards but does not rule out the commission's dealing with imminent hazards and other problems which arise from time to time and which may be lower on the Consumer Product Hazard Index.

The Consumer Product Hazard Index pinpoints a variety of products, many of which are integral components of the home, as posing the greatest threat of injury to consumers. Recognizing that fact the commission is beginning a careful analysis of "the home as a consumer product" and we expect a wide variety of activities in this area over the next several months.

In 1974, the commission will trigger standards development on many products. Included are football equipment and apparel; architectural glass; swimming pool slides, pools and related equipment; power mowers; and matches, all of which rank high on the Product Hazard Index.

Additionally, the commission will issue final mandatory safety standards on bicycles, children's sleepwear sizes 7 to 14; upholstered furniture and toys earlier in 1974.

Standards development, however, represents only a portion of the commission's activity. A unique provision of the Consumer Product Safety Act requires notification to the commission by manufacturers, distributors and retailers of all product defects which could pose substantial product hazards to consumers.

So far, the commission has received defect notices covering well over 5 million individual products —including nearly 100,000 television sets, over 60,000 dishwashers, and thousands of bicycles, lawn mowers, and kitchen ranges. Nearly all of those products have either been repaired, replaced or repurchased at no cost to consumers.

Defect notifications undoubtedly will continue to come into the commission — and — we blieve — at an even greater rate than in our first few months of operation.

We also expect consumers and other interested parties to continue using the commission's toll-free product safety hotline — 800,638-2666 (except in Maryland, 800-492-2937) to receive product safety information and to report severe product safety problems to us.

In addition, the commission welcomes full participation of all interested groups. We have opened all commission meetings to public participation with the sole exception of executive sessions of the five commissioners. Anyone may receive copies of our public calendar. Simply write the secretary, Consumer Product Safety Commission, Washington, D.C. 20207 to be added to the mailing list.

Finally, we hope that the public will watch us carefully and will comment on our activities. Where consumers or others believe we've gone astray, say so.

For our part, we pledge continued efforts to substantially reduce the unreasonable risk of injury to consumers from consumer products.

New California Laws To Take Effect On 1st

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Capital punishment will be reinstated, welfare grants will go up and the maximum speed limit will go down when hundreds of new California laws take effect New Year's Day.

Anticorruption measures prompted by Watergate, a bill requiring prices of the top 100 prescription drugs to be posted publicly, and legislation permitting less beer per bottle also will become law Tuesday.

Other bills range from designating the prehistoric sabretooth tiger as the official state fossil to granting women equal community property rights and credit opportunities.

The measures are the product of the first half of the new two-year, congressional-style legislature — which Assembly and Senate leaders have praised as highly successful. The second half of the 1973-74 legislature convenes Jan. 7.

Gov. Ronald Reagan signed 1,217 bills during 1973, and most of them take effect Jan. 1.

The maximum speed limit will be reduced from 65 miles an hour to 55 m.p.h. on New Year's Day under a bill by Democratic Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti.

The measure sped through the legislature during a December "mini-session" in reaction to the national energy shortage. It is expected to save 300 million gallons of gas annually.

Another law passed during the December session will provide hefty welfare increases to 5,000,000 blind, aged and disabled Californians.

The increase, average $38 per recipient, is coupled with a new federal law which will result in the Social Security Administration issuing aid checks to adult recipients from Washington starting Jan. 2.

The death penalty will be restored in California for 11 categories of murder under a bill by Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach. The restoration was authorized 14 months ago by voter passage of a constitutional amendment calling for the ultimate penalty. A spokesman for the state Department of Corrections said the apple-green San Quentin gas chamber has been maintained in working condition and is ready for use at any time. However, he said there are no plans to institute another "death row" — at least for a while.

Some 105 prisoners were on "death row" awaiting execution when the state Supreme Court ruled in February, 1972, that capital punishment was unconstitutional. A subsequent U.S. Supreme Court ruling indicated the death penalty could be reinstated if applied on a mandatory basis.

Beginning Tuesday, capital punishment will apply to hired assassins, police slayers, lifeterm convicts who kill guards, mass and repeat murderers, train wreckers, killers of witnesses to crime, and persons who commit murder during rape, robbery, kidnaping, burglary and lewd acts involving children.

Politicians will have to disclose more about their financial holdings to the public under two Watergate-spawned bills.

Already more than a dozen local officials have quit instead of complying with the new conflict-of-interest bill. A companion bill will require candidates in the 1974 elections to disclose more details on their campaign contributions and expenses.

Some 5,000 pharmacies in California will begin posting the prices of the 100 most widely used prescription drugs under another new law. The posters, prepared by the state Department of Consumer Affairs, will display the names and the costs of the drugs so consumers can compare prices more easily.

Beer cans and bottles will be allowed to contain less of the frothy beverage than their labels say they do under a new law by Assemblyman Ray E. Johnson, R-Chico.

The law permits beer containers to have only about 11½ ounces of the liquid when the label declares the contents weigh 12 ounces. Sponsors said the law was needed because beer brewers' measuring machines are not accurate enough to measure any closer than that, and they otherwise would face harsh penalties.

Rained Out

HALIFAX (AP) — Heavy rains this summer helped reduce the number of forest fires in Nova Scotia. Forest officials report 396 fires burned 5,500 acres of woodland the summer of 1973. In 1970, 800 fires destroyed 14,000 acres.

New California Laws To Take Effect On 1st

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Capital punishment will be reinstated, welfare grants will go up and the maximum speed limit will go down when hundreds of new California laws take effect New Year's Day.

Anticorruption measures prompted by Watergate, a bill requiring prices of the top 100 prescription drugs to be posted publicly, and legislation permitting less beer per bottle also will become law Tuesday.

Other bills range from designating the prehistoric sabretooth tiger as the official state fossil to granting women equal community property rights and credit opportunities.

The measures are the product of the first half of the new two-year, congressional-style legislature — which Assembly and Senate leaders have praised as highly successful. The second half of the 1973-74 legislature convenes Jan. 7.

Gov. Ronald Reagan signed 1,217 bills during 1973, and most of them take effect Jan. 1.

The maximum speed limit will be reduced from 65 miles an hour to 55 m.p.h. on New Year's Day under a bill by Democratic Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti.

The measure sped through the legislature during a December "mini-session" in reaction to the national energy shortage. It is expected to save 300 million gallons of gas annually.

Another law passed during the December session will provide hefty welfare increases to 5,000,000 blind, aged and disabled Californians.

The increase, average $38 per recipient, is coupled with a new federal law which will result in the Social Security Administration issuing aid checks to adult recipients from Washington starting Jan. 2.

The death penalty will be restored in California for 11 categories of murder under a bill by Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach. The restoration was authorized 14 months ago by voter passage of a constitutional amendment calling for the ultimate penalty. A spokesman for the state Department of Corrections said the apple-green San Quentin gas chamber has been maintained in working condition and is ready for use at any time. However, he said there are no plans to institute another "death row" — at least for a while.

Some 105 prisoners were on "death row" awaiting execution when the state Supreme Court ruled in February, 1972, that capital punishment was unconstitutional. A subsequent U.S. Supreme Court ruling indicated the death penalty could be reinstated if applied on a mandatory basis.

Beginning Tuesday, capital punishment will apply to hired assassins, police slayers, lifeterm convicts who kill guards, mass and repeat murderers, train wreckers, killers of witnesses to crime, and persons who commit murder during rape, robbery, kidnaping, burglary and lewd acts involving children.

Politicians will have to disclose more about their financial holdings to the public under two Watergate-spawned bills.

Already more than a dozen local officials have quit instead of complying with the new conflict-of-interest bill. A companion bill will require candidates in the 1974 elections to disclose more details on their campaign contributions and expenses.

Some 5,000 pharmacies in California will begin posting the prices of the 100 most widely used prescription drugs under another new law. The posters, prepared by the state Department of Consumer Affairs, will display the names and the costs of the drugs so consumers can compare prices more easily.

Beer cans and bottles will be allowed to contain less of the frothy beverage than their labels say they do under a new law by Assemblyman Ray E. Johnson, R-Chico.

The law permits beer containers to have only about 11½ ounces of the liquid when the label declares the contents weigh 12 ounces. Sponsors said the law was needed because beer brewers' measuring machines are not accurate enough to measure any closer than that, and they otherwise would face harsh penalties.

Rained Out

HALIFAX (AP) — Heavy rains this summer helped reduce the number of forest fires in Nova Scotia. Forest officials report 396 fires burned 5,500 acres of woodland the summer of 1973. In 1970, 800 fires destroyed 14,000 acres.

Buses Get New Image In Minneapolis

COMMUTER CAR — The Metropolitan Transit Commission in Minneapolis-St. Paul has decorated its buses with "pop art" paintings of autos to attract riders. (Christian Science Monitor Photo)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — More people like accountant Eric Wilson are riding the bus here these days — and the fuel crisis is not the only reason.

Early last week, Wilson hung a "for sale" sign on his 1972 Mustang and stopped driving 16 miles each morning from his home in suburban Burnsville to his office in downtown Minneapolis.

He claims he no longer needs the second car since he has joined "The Greater Metropolitan Car Pool," which now carries him to and from work.

This newly conceived "car pool" is becoming a Twin Cities euphemism for bus. The Metropolitan Transit Commission (MTC) bus formerly was an anathema to middle- and upper income people here, where automobile usage is the highest per capita in the country, and where more money per family is spent on cars than on food.

The Greater Metropolitan Car Pool, a slogan coined by a local advertising agency in an attempt to woo Twin Cities drivers from their cars and into buses, is creating a new image of the bus and its potential riders.

Buses here are painted to look like cars. Some have the classic Deusenberg painted on the sides. Others have station wagons or Volkswagens. The gimmick, according to Frank Kroncke, a spokesman for the agency handling the campaign, is that bus riders still can have "their" car, while riding the bus.

Doubtless the fuel shortage has contributed to increased ridership here, but significantly, many professionals say they are no longer embarrassed to be seen riding the bus.

"I guess I could have taken the bus before, but like a lot of other people, I assumed buses were for the poor, the old, or the handicapped," said Eric Wilson.

"I started using the bus because I saw a neighbor riding one. He owns his own business and there are three cars in his family. Seeing him ride the bus helped me get rid of the stigma attached to them. Now I wouldn't go back to driving — fuel shortage or not. It's more convenient and cheaper by bus."

While riders have increased on several Twin Cities runs in recent weeks, other metropolitan companies report little noticeable increases.

Kroncke says this is due to the negative attitude most Americans have toward public mass transit and buses in particular.

"People with good jobs, especially, are concerned about losing status if they ride a bus," he says. "The guy riding the bus is on the skids, they think. Market research shows this time and again. What our agency has done is simply to try and upgrade the image of the bus and the rider."

A television campaign geared to undermine the commuter's love affair with his car has been underway for several weeks.

Commercials show executives, suburban housewives, and dancing girls singing the praises of the Greater Metropolitan Car Pool, and providing the audience with the phone number where information concerning stops and schedules may be obtained.

A public corporation since 1970, the MTC has gone beyond advertising promotions, initiated with a "we're getting there," campaign, which told bus patrons new buses would be arriving with more comfortable seating and more convenient schedules and that expanded service could be expected.

The MTC has moved into the suburbs and doubled its route miles to almost 2,400. Several express buses run from suburbs along normally crowded freeways and soon will be given preference over automobiles.

Cars will be metered according to traffic load and not allowed on certain entrance ramps until the existing load diminishes.

Harry Springer, general manager of the MTC says, "It's difficult to know exactly how effective advertising has been in getting more people to ride the bus, but it had to have made some inroads. It has certainly helped form public opinion about bus service."

Eastern European Nations Eager For More Population

By ERIC BOURNE
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

BUDAPEST — While much of the world is concerned these days to curb population growth, Eastern Europe is anxiously looking for more people.

Most governments in the area are sounding serious alarm signals over declining birthrates, some of the world's highest abortion figures, and the ever faster incidence of broken marriages.

Another-related-problem is in the casual attitudes of so much of East European youth toward more stable life styles.

For years, administrations took an ostrich-like attitude, with a built-in doctrinaire tendency to disregard such social problems as lingering phenomena of capitalist-bourgeois society which in time would disappear in a new ideological millenium.

In economics, the lesson has been learned. Dogma has been yielding to logic and reform since the 1960's. Now outlooks on previously ignored sociological questions are changing.

One by one, Communist regimes are refocusing increasingly serious attention on stagnant birthrates and aging population, on the escalating divorce rates and alcoholism and evidence of other frustrations among the young.

Paradoxically, the problems are in many cases worse in those countries which in recent years have achieved a solid advance in living standards.

Czechoslovakia, for example, with one of the world's best medicare services, also has both one of its lowest birthrates and highest figures on abortion. And it is, too, a nation of heavy liquor drinkers. Alcoholism figures in 15 per cent of divorces and in 20 per cent of criminal cases involving minors.

Here in welfare-minded Hungary, where there has been a measure of political-cultural "liberalization" as well, abortions last year were greatly in excess of live births. In a population of only 10 million, a million Hungarian couples are childless. The country stands fourth in the world's divorce chart.

Romania, on the other hand, with still the all-too-evident lowest advance in living standards in the area, has its current highest birthrate — higher even than in Poland, which, with the continued strong influence of the Roman Catholic Church, especially in the rural areas, does not have all its allies' population problems.

Domestically, Romania also maintains the ideologically most restrictive Communist system —Russia and Czechoslovakia apart — in the bloc. And its birthrate recovery was accompanied only by ultraconservative legislation on marriage and family much resented by Romanian women.

Abortion was made illegal, save in the most extreme health circumstances, six years ago. More usual means of contraception are frowned upon almost as much and, as part of the policy, kept in short supply. Yet a current birthrate of 19 per thousand is still regarded as unsatisfactory.

"Demographically," a Western diplomat in Bucharest observed, "it may be looking ahead to those ambitious industrial goals of a rather distant future. In effect, however, it is shortsighted because it has set up all sorts of resentments, particularly among young people, and adds all the time to the general frustrations in the continued shortcomings of ordinary living standards."

It seems not surprising, therefore, that there has been a recurrence of illegal, backstairs abortion, to which official response has been only a threat of still stiffer sanctions.

In Hungary, Czechoslovakia, and Bulgaria emphasis is almost entirely on financial encouragement and support for families — higher real wages, greatly increased maternity leaves and benefits, progressively meaningful allowances for second and third children (or more, though three seems generally to be viewed as the "ideal" family).

In Czechoslovakia, a woman can take as much as two years paid maternity leave from work, with job and everything else legally assured.

Courage Has Its Uses For Executing A Good Defense

A FORCE OUT

West opened the nine of hearts, dummy covered with the queen and East's king forced out the ace. Declarer led a trump to dummy and returned the singleton diamond through East.

East timorously grabbed his ace of diamonds for fear of losing it. This play allowed South to make the contract.

INTO HAND

East returned the ten of hearts to dummy's jack, and South got to his hand with a trump. South then led the jack of diamonds from his hand. West played low (it would have done him no good to cover with the king), and declarer discarded the losing heart from dummy.

South eventually lost two club tricks to East, but his contract was safe.

SHOULD PLAY LOW

East should play low when the singleton diamond is led through him. South would play the jack of diamonds, and West would win with the king. South would be unable to set up a diamond trick, and he would have to lose a diamond, a heart and two clubs.

If South had the king of diamonds, East might lose the ace. In exchange, however, he would get a heart trick. East couldn't get a heart trick if he took the ace of diamonds, for then South would be able to discard the losing heart from dummy on the king of diamonds.

COSTS NOTHING

In other words, it costs East nothing to play a low diamond when his partner has the king. East breaks even when South has the king.

Here in welfare-minded Hungary, where there has been a measure of political-cultural "liberalization" as well, abortions last year were greatly in excess of live births. In a population of only 10 million, a million Hungarian couples are childless. The country stands fourth in the world's divorce chart.

Romania, on the other hand, with still the all-too-evident lowest advance in living standards in the area, has its current highest birthrate — higher even than in Poland, which, with the continued strong influence of the Roman Catholic Church, especially in the rural areas, does not have all its allies' population problems.

Domestically, Romania also maintains the ideologically most restrictive Communist system —Russia and Czechoslovakia apart — in the bloc. And its birthrate recovery was accompanied only by ultraconservative legislation on marriage and family much resented by Romanian women.

Abortion was made illegal, save in the most extreme health circumstances, six years ago. More usual means of contraception are frowned upon almost as much and, as part of the policy, kept in short supply. Yet a current birthrate of 19 per thousand is still regarded as unsatisfactory.

"Demographically," a Western diplomat in Bucharest observed, "it may be looking ahead to those ambitious industrial goals of a rather distant future. In effect, however, it is shortsighted because it has set up all sorts of resentments, particularly among young people, and adds all the time to the general frustrations in the continued shortcomings of ordinary living standards."

It seems not surprising, therefore, that there has been a recurrence of illegal, backstairs abortion, to which official response has been only a threat of still stiffer sanctions.

In Hungary, Czechoslovakia, and Bulgaria emphasis is almost entirely on financial encouragement and support for families — higher real wages, greatly increased maternity leaves and benefits, progressively meaningful allowances for second and third children (or more, though three seems generally to be viewed as the "ideal" family).

In Czechoslovakia, a woman can take as much as two years paid maternity leave from work, with job and everything else legally assured.

Courage Has Its Uses For Executing A Good Defense

Defense is not an exact science. A clever declarer can put you to the guess and make you show the red badge or the white feather. Mind you, it doesn't always pay to be brave, but courage has its uses.

A FORCE OUT

West opened the nine of hearts, dummy covered with the queen and East's king forced out the ace. Declarer led a trump to dummy and returned the singleton diamond through East.

East timorously grabbed his ace of diamonds for fear of losing it. This play allowed South to make the contract.

INTO HAND

East returned the ten of hearts to dummy's jack, and South got to his hand with a trump. South then led the jack of diamonds from his hand. West played low (it would have done him no good to cover with the king), and declarer discarded the losing heart from dummy.

South eventually lost two club tricks to East, but his contract was safe.

SHOULD PLAY LOW

East should play low when the singleton diamond is led through him. South would play the jack of diamonds, and West would win with the king. South would be unable to set up a diamond trick, and he would have to lose a diamond, a heart and two clubs.

If South had the king of diamonds, East might lose the ace. In exchange, however, he would get a heart trick. East couldn't get a heart trick if he took the ace of diamonds, for then South would be able to discard the losing heart from dummy on the king of diamonds.

COSTS NOTHING

In other words, it costs East nothing to play a low diamond when his partner has the king. East breaks even when South has the king.

SAFETY STUDY — Ford safety men wire a dummy for a crash test in a study to determine the dangers of small cars in highway crashes. (Christian Science Monitor Photo)

Small Cars Studied For Wreck Dangers

By GUY HALVERSON
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Many U.S. highway safety experts are concerned that the increased sales spurt in small cars, impelled by the energy crisis, may boost the nation's accident rates.

At issue in the small-car debate:

Small-car design structure: Is it too lightweight?

The compact area of the small-car passenger section.

Small-car engine durability.

The very dimension of small cars: Does this smallness — particularly in hazardous driving conditions — make them more risky than larger cars?

Some car safety experts argue that there is a need to renew the push for such technical innovations as air bags and stiffer fuel tank standards in the wake of the small-car boom.

Production of small U.S. cars, even apart from the energy crunch, has been soaring — up to about 40 per cent of all new cars this year compared with 26 per cent of all new cars in 1970.

Within the next year or two compacts and subcompacts may well reach 50 per cent of all sales, a startling change away from a 30- to 40-year tend of large passenger cars in the U.S.

Many tests, whatever their validity, suggest that small cars are particularly susceptible to serious injuries to occupants in accidents.

The Washington-based Insurance Institute for Highway Safety several years ago test-crashed four domestic U.S. small cars against four large cars made by the same manufacturers — Ford, General Motors, Chrysler, and American Motors.

In each case, the passenger compartment of the smaller car was substantially penetrated. This never happened to the larger car in the front-end tests.

Statistics compiled recently by the Highway Loss Data Institute show that small cars have a greater frequency of claims for insurance than large luxury cars. This is a measure of the crash frequency of each model, some experts argue.

A report recently prepared by the University of Michigan's Highway Safety Research Institute concluded that the upsurge in small cars "will lead to a greater number of injuries. . ." As to small cars, the report held that, "once involved in an accident, the chance of injury in this car increases at the rate of about 2.5 per cent for each decrease of 100 pounds in vehicle weight."

Main causes for the dangers, the report suggested, were the lower car weight and the lack of protection from the interior size.

Many car design engineers, however, stress that the present danger in subcompacts comes from the very mix of the road itself.

"A small car is obviously at a temporary disadvantage in the present car mix," says Dr. Patrick M. Miller, a project engineer who heads up crash worthiness studies for the Buffalo, N.Y.-based Calspan, the former Cornell University Aeronautical Laboratory.

Has History Been Unfair To Ptolemy?

By ROBERT C. COWEN
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

History has been unfair to Ptolemy. It has chided that ancient Greek for his theory of an earth-centered solar system. And it has lionized Copernicus for restoring the sun to its rightful place.

"Rightful" place? From the perspective of Einstein's theory of relativity, the sun's claim to primacy seems no better than that of earth.

In an intriguing new book at the Copernican saga, Britain's famed astromer Sir Fred Hoyle explains why modern science finds no meaningful difference between the two views.

It's still simpler to make the sun central, Sir Fred says. But you could chart a course to the moon from an earth-centered view. In relativity, the two long-opposed ways of looking at the world are reconciled.

The mathematical distinction between them is such that the relativity theory recognizes no physical difference. The Renaissance uproar over the Copernican theory then turns out to have been a dispute without a real point of controversy.

Actually, Ptolemy's theory described the planets' celestial dance more accurately than did the Copernican scheme. But the latter simplified calculation. It enabled scientists to move ahead in planetary research.

This opened the way for Newton's system of mechanics. And, in that system, the sun has to be at the center. You can't work out planetary orbits using Newton's law of gravity otherwise.

Many churchmen, by Copernicus's time, had become deeply attached to the Ptolemaic view. They could accept Copernican theory as convenient. But, to challenge the "reality" of the earth-centered picture, this they considered heresy.

When Newton's mechanics had made nonsense of this, physicists became equally dogmatic. Then Einstein's relativity cut away their ground, too.

As Sir Fred notes in his essay ("Nicolaus Copernicus," by Fred Hoyle: Harper & Row), Copernicus deserves his honors for finding what, in his day, was the most scientifically fruitful line of attack.

Yet Sir Fred explains, "today we cannot say that the Copernican theory is 'right' and the Ptolemaic theory 'wrong' in any meaningful physical sense. The two theories . . . are physically equivalent to one another."

So, after five centuries, Copernicus and his critics could meet on common ground. It's a warning against taking any dogma too seriously. Yet men still make that old error.

The dogma of the goodness of economic growth is giving way for some environmentalists to the dogma that all growth is bad. The dogma of man over nature is yielding to the dogma that technology is evil and nature should be left alone. It would be as foolish to base policy on such extreme notions today as it was to make Ptolemy's view an article of religious faith or Newton's system an unquestioned certainty.

INDEPENDENCE (UPI) — An unidentified UC Irvine student died and another was hospitalized in satisfactory condition after falling from Mount Whitney during a climbing expedition with six other students northwest of here.

Inyo County sheriff's officials said yesterday the incident occurred Dec. 20, but was not reported by the other members of the party until Monday.

The injured man was identified as Donald Pfirrmann.

A spokesman for the sheriff's office said a military helicopter was scheduled to fly to the east face of Mt. Whitney today to pick up the dead man.

French Aviation Pioneer Is Dead

TOURNUS, France (UPI) — Aviation pioneer and automobile builder Gabriel Voisin died yesterday at his home near here at the age of 93, friends said today.

The Voisin biplane flew an officially recorded kilometer in 1908 and Voisin said this was a better performance than that of the Wright brothers who, he said, "never flew by their own means."

He said: "To get into the air they had to be catapulted. Such flights have no practical value."

18 Seeking Appointment As Redevelop Advisers

Some 18 San Rafael residents have applied for appointment to the city's citizens advisory committee on redevelopment.

The city council will consider the applicants at 8 p.m. Jan. 7 in city hall.

The council agreed to appoint such an advisory group as part of a compromise that ended litigation over the redevelopment project, and has already agreed to appoint Joaquin Gallardo to the committee.

Gallardo for several weeks challenged the redevelopment plan as a lone citizen, but dropped his suit when assured of a berth on the committee, among other things.

Bomb Is Thrown Into Berlin Bank

BERLIN (UPI) — A gasoline bomb was thrown through the window of a bank in the American sector early today but did little damage, police said.

A note left at the bank said, "A commando of the revolutionary people's army has carried out a punishment action against an institution of the enemies of the people."

Americans See How Fuel Lack Will Hurt

By HARRY B. ELLIS
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Americans now have a clearer idea how their pocketbooks and life styles will be affected by the nation's all-enveloping energy shortage.

Each family is asked to "buy 10 gallons of gasoline and make it last all week" and to "pick two days a week when you won't use your car."

U.S. Energy Administrator William E. Simon urges service stations across the country to sell only 10 gallons of gas to each customer.

This is not rationing, for each driver is free to go to another service station and buy more gas. But, stresses Simon, "If the American people comply with the 10-gallon limit, we will not need gas rationing."

Voluntary efforts to save fuel, he notes, cut total demand for petroleum in the four weeks ending Dec. 7 by 1 million barrels a day. Shortfall during the period was 1.5 million barrels daily.

Other factors allowed the U.S. totally to close the gap in the four-week period and actually add 200,000 barrels a day to the nation's petroleum stocks.

Oil imports were 700,000 barrels a day higher than had been expected. This, together with the 1 million barrel per day reduction in use, overcame the 1.5 million barrel per day shortfall and allowed reserves to build up.

"Old" oil — oil from U.S. wells long in production, 80 per cent of domestic output — is subject to the Cost of Living Council ceiling. To stimulate more production, the government exempted from controls "new" oil brought on stream, as well as oil from "stripper wells," averaging less than 10 barrels per day.

It is this "new" and "stripper well" oil, plus all petroleum that is imported from abroad, which now is pushing up the market price for oil.

The aim of the Nixon administration is to find a price level for oil that will encourage U.S. firms to increase production, without bringing them undue, or windfall profits.

Simon also announced he will provide 1.5 million barrels of military jet fuel to U.S. international airlines, "to help them through a crisis period until the end of January." This diversion will reduce military stockpiles to about 95 per cent of requirements.

French Aviation Pioneer Is Dead

TOURNUS, France (UPI) — Aviation pioneer and automobile builder Gabriel Voisin died yesterday at his home near here at the age of 93, friends said today.

The Voisin biplane flew an officially recorded kilometer in 1908 and Voisin said this was a better performance than that of the Wright brothers who, he said, "never flew by their own means."

He said: "To get into the air they had to be catapulted. Such flights have no practical value."

18 Seeking Appointment As Redevelop Advisers

Some 18 San Rafael residents have applied for appointment to the city's citizens advisory committee on redevelopment.

The council agreed to appoint such an advisory group as part of a compromise that ended litigation over the redevelopment project, and has already agreed to appoint Joaquin Gallardo to the committee.

Gallardo for several weeks challenged the redevelopment plan as a lone citizen, but dropped his suit when assured of a berth on the committee, among other things.

Americans See How Fuel Lack Will Hurt

By HARRY B. ELLIS
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Americans now have a clearer idea how their pocketbooks and life styles will be affected by the nation's all-enveloping energy shortage.

Each family is asked to "buy 10 gallons of gasoline and make it last all week" and to "pick two days a week when you won't use your car."

U.S. Energy Administrator William E. Simon urges service stations across the country to sell only 10 gallons of gas to each customer.

This is not rationing, for each driver is free to go to another service station and buy more gas. But, stresses Simon, "If the American people comply with the 10-gallon limit, we will not need gas rationing."

Voluntary efforts to save fuel, he notes, cut total demand for petroleum in the four weeks ending Dec. 7 by 1 million barrels a day. Shortfall during the period was 1.5 million barrels daily.

Other factors allowed the U.S. totally to close the gap in the four-week period and actually add 200,000 barrels a day to the nation's petroleum stocks.

Oil imports were 700,000 barrels a day higher than had been expected. This, together with the 1 million barrel per day reduction in use, overcame the 1.5 million barrel per day shortfall and allowed reserves to build up.

"Old" oil — oil from U.S. wells long in production, 80 per cent of domestic output — is subject to the Cost of Living Council ceiling. To stimulate more production, the government exempted from controls "new" oil brought on stream, as well as oil from "stripper wells," averaging less than 10 barrels per day.

It is this "new" and "stripper well" oil, plus all petroleum that is imported from abroad, which now is pushing up the market price for oil.

The aim of the Nixon administration is to find a price level for oil that will encourage U.S. firms to increase production, without bringing them undue, or windfall profits.

Simon also announced he will provide 1.5 million barrels of military jet fuel to U.S. international airlines, "to help them through a crisis period until the end of January." This diversion will reduce military stockpiles to about 95 per cent of requirements.

School Grading Systems Rapped

By KENNETH G. GEHRET
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

BOSTON — Grades are meaningless, even harmful. And they should be abolished, says Dr. Sidney Simon of the University of Massachusetts (UMass).

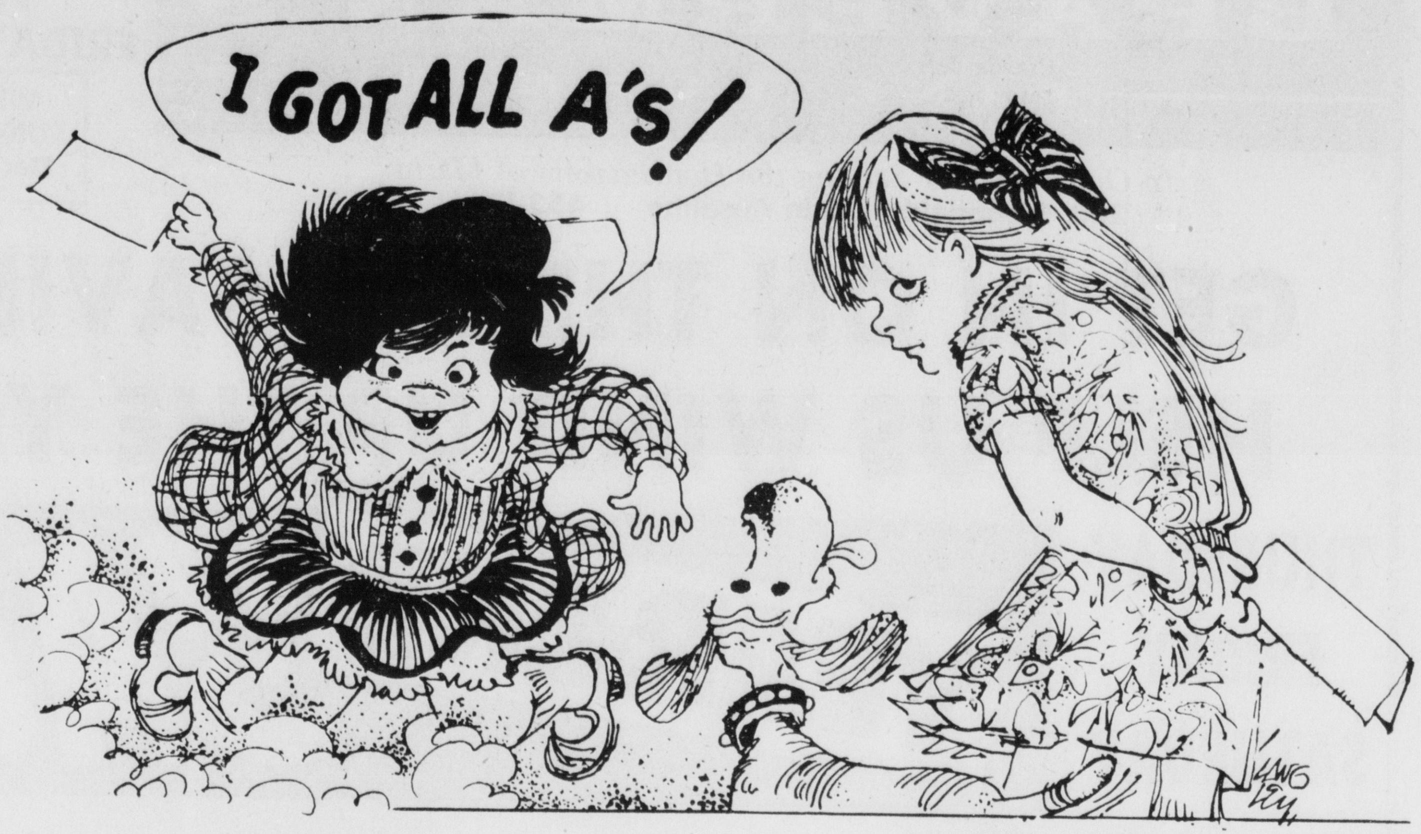
He brushes aside the traditional arguments in favor of grades: that they motivate and reward, indicate to students and parents the progress that is being made, meet the requirements for admission to college.

Although most schools still use the customary letter or percentage grading system, other forms of evaluation are in use and coming under increasing discussion.

Dr. Simon explains his position by saying: "Grades do severe damage to people by affecting their self-image. One student says, 'I'm only a 2.7; I can't do any better.' To an A student, they are harmful because he learns the rules of the game and excels without learning to think on his own."

He continues, "It's a proven fact that the ability to get high grades bears no correlation to success in one's career."

Dr. Simon, a professor at the UMass Center for Humanistic Education and a prolific writer and speaker on educational reform, finds no justification for grades or marks at any level of schooling. He describes them, first of all, as subjective and unfair. As proof in a nutshell, he tells of an experiment in which a student's paper was circulated among 100 teachers for grading. The marks ran the gamut from the top of the scale to the bottom.



(Christian Science Monitor sketch by Gene Langley)

With such divergence in grading, Dr. Simon asks, how can marks be compared between classes or in college admission offices?

A further indictment of grades is the competition it fosters and what this does to the educative process. Dr. Simon and others who think like him on this subject claim that high marks become the student's goal in education. The aim thus is not to learn the fundamentals but to discover what gets a good grade in a given class.

Dr. Howard Kirschenbaum, director of the Adirondack Mountain Humanistic Education Center and co-author with Dr. Simon of "Wad-ja-get?", spelled out some major methods of evaluating students' work without resorting to grades.

Written evaluations by teachers. "Teachers need training in this, and it takes time," Dr. Kirschenbaum acknowledges. "It shouldn't be the equivalent of grades in sentence form. It means looking at each student as an individual. It's not an easy system to make work, but it relieves pressures on the student."

Self-grading. This can be done by the student alone, or together with his peers or teacher. Dr. Kirschenbaum claims this approach can work for a time "if the conditions are right. But over the long haul, students get unrealistic about the grades they give themselves."

Self-evaluation. This is not the same as self-grading. It can be applied at the elementary level, Dr. Kirschenbaum maintains, by guiding the student to ask: "What did I like best about this semester? What did I have the most trouble with? What can I do to make this class a better experience?"

The point is to change the student's attitude to "a recognition that he is partly responsible for what goes on and can help to change the situation."

Learning contracts, which stipulate what individual students are expected to accomplish. "These can produce a very exciting learning environment but can also be a mishmash if too vague or ambiguous," the educator says. Standards of quantity and quality of work must be carefully set up, and decisions made as to who will do the evaluating.

Mastery approach. This is a "composite concept," as Dr. Kirschenbaum describes it, which tries to define what constitutes a body of knowledge or skills, then divides it into segments and objectives. Students select the level of mastery to which they aspire, knowing then what is expected of them.

Dr. Kirschbaum expands the list by adding pass-fail, honors-pass-fail, and credit-no credit marking systems.

He does not advocate any single alternative to letter or numerical grades. "I am not convinced that there is an ideal grading and evaluation system, one that suits all students," he comments.

Nobody Wants Navy's Antenna Installation In State Borders

By TOM DAMMANN
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

IRON MOUNTAIN, Mich. — The U. S. Navy is seeking a home for a 40-mile-square grid antenna, which nobody wants for a neighbor.

Both Wisconsin and Texas are unwilling to have the billion-dollar Navy installation, called Project Sanguine, within their borders, and now attention is focusing in Michigan.

The submarines could only receive, they could not reply. So critics say the message would be command to fire — a doomsday button — and make the transmitter site the prime target of an enemy.

The complex would utilize extremely low-frequency radio waves transmitted from an elaborate underground antenna grid. According to some Navy reports, antenna cables would be laid at five-mile intervals running 40 miles east-west and north-south.

Transmitters would be erected at each intersection point, with a fenced-in enclosure of about an acre. Swaths would have to be cut through woods and fields above each cable for installation and maintenance.

Northern Wisconsin, Michigan's Upper Peninsula, and an area in west central Texas lie over pre-cambrian rock, characterized by the low conductivity required for Sanguine transmissions.

Initially northern Wisconsin was chosen for the site and in 1968 the Navy installed a test transmitter, which is still operating, four miles outside Clam Lake, a northern Wisconsin hamlet.

That year Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., began publicly questioning the project. Opposition developed quickly in Texas along the same lines as that in Wisconsin. Sen. John R. Tower, R-Tex., wrote the Navy that while he might agree that Sanguine is important to national defense it should not be located in Texas. For one reason he suggested that much of the proposed site is privately owned. He urged the Navy to reconsider Wisconsin where it could use publicly owned land.

Citizens in Upper Michigan became alarmed that now their region would become the Navy's chief target and in September the "Upper Peninsula Citizens and Concerned about Sanguine" (UPCCAS) was organized.

Sen. Robert P. Griffin, R-Mich., minority whip, has indicated in letters to Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger and the Senate Appropriation Committee that he will oppose Project Sanguine until environmental questions have been answered.

Fire In Florida Home Kills Four

GIBSONIA, Fla. (UPI) — A burning cigarette may have ignited a predawn Christmas blaze that killed three children and their 74-year-old grandfather in a mobile home, fire officials said yesterday.

The blaze began in the bedroom occupied by Leroy Crosby, 74, who was visiting the family for Christmas. He was killed along with three children, Lorina, 3, David, 4, and Cynthia, 6, who were asleep in the next room.

A neighbor told firemen he ran out when he noticed the flames and found the children's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Crosby, on the lawn overcome by smoke. They were treated for minor injuries.

Judge Named

FAIRFIELD (UPI) — Superior Court Judge Victor M. Castagnetto has been named presiding judge of the Solano County Supeerior Court, succeeding Judge Raymond J. Sherwin.

Reinecke Sees Energy Benefit

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Californis hard-hit aerospace industry may get a lift from the energy-crisis, Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke says.

Reinecke, chairman of the state Energy Planning Council, said the energy crisis opens a "whole new horizon for California industry in particular."

He said he couldn't name specific projects which California's aerospace industry should begin. But he cited solar energy and rapid transit as examples of how technology can help the nation maintain its current standard of living using less energy.

The point is to change the student's attitude to "a recognition that he is partly responsible for what goes on and can help to change the situation."

Learning contracts, which stipulate what individual students are expected to accomplish. "These can produce a very exciting learning environment but can also be a mish-mash if too vague or ambiguous," the educator says. Standards of quantity and quality of work must be carefully set up, and decisions made as to who will do the evaluating.

Mastery approach. This is a "composite concept," as Dr. Kirschenbaum describes it, which tries to define what constitutes a body of knowledge or skills, then divides it into segments and objectives. Students select the level of mastery to which they aspire, knowing then what is expected of them.

Dr. Kirschbaum expands the list by adding pass-fail, honors-pass-fail, and credit-no credit marking systems.

He does not advocate any single alternative to letter or numerical grades. "I am not convinced that there is an ideal grading and evaluation system, one that suits all students," he comments.

Nobody Wants Navy's Antenna Installation In State Borders

By TOM DAMMANN
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

IRON MOUNTAIN, Mich. — The U. S. Navy is seeking a home for a 40-mile-square grid antenna, which nobody wants for a neighbor.

Both Wisconsin and Texas are unwilling to have the billion-dollar Navy installation, called Project Sanguine, within their borders, and now attention is focusing in Michigan.

The submarines could only receive, they could not reply. So critics say the message would be command to fire — a doomsday button — and make the transmitter site the prime target of an enemy.

The complex would utilize extremely low-frequency radio waves transmitted from an elaborate underground antenna grid. According to some Navy reports, antenna cables would be laid at five-mile intervals running 40 miles east-west and north-south.

Transmitters would be erected at each intersection point, with a fenced-in enclosure of about an acre. Swaths would have to be cut through woods and fields above each cable for installation and maintenance.

Northern Wisconsin, Michigan's Upper Peninsula, and an area in west central Texas lie over pre-cambrian rock, characterized by the low conductivity required for Sanguine transmissions.

Initially northern Wisconsin was chosen for the site and in 1968 the Navy installed a test transmitter, which is still operating, four miles outside Clam Lake, a northern Wisconsin hamlet.

That year Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., began publicly questioning the project. Opposition developed quickly in Texas along the same lines as that in Wisconsin. Sen. John R. Tower, R-Tex., wrote the Navy that while he might agree that Sanguine is important to national defense it should not be located in Texas. For one reason he suggested that much of the proposed site is privately owned. He urged the Navy to reconsider Wisconsin where it could use publicly owned land.

Citizens in Upper Michigan became alarmed that now their region would become the Navy's chief target and in September the "Upper Peninsula Citizens and Concerned about Sanguine" (UPCCAS) was organized.

Sen. Robert P. Griffin, R-Mich., minority whip, has indicated in letters to Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger and the Senate Appropriation Committee that he will oppose Project Sanguine until environmental questions have been answered.

Fire In Florida Home Kills Four

GIBSONIA, Fla. (UPI) — A burning cigarette may have ignited a predawn Christmas blaze that killed three children and their 74-year-old grandfather in a mobile home, fire officials said yesterday.

The blaze began in the bedroom occupied by Leroy Crosby, 74, who was visiting the family for Christmas. He was killed along with three children, Lorina, 3, David, 4, and Cynthia, 6, who were asleep in the next room.

A neighbor told firemen he ran out when he noticed the flames and found the children's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Crosby, on the lawn overcome by smoke. They were treated for minor injuries.

Judge Named

FAIRFIELD (UPI) — Superior Court Judge Victor M. Castagnetto has been named presiding judge of the Solano County Supeerior Court, succeeding Judge Raymond J. Sherwin.

Reinecke Sees Energy Benefit

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Californis hard-hit aerospace industry may get a lift from the energy-crisis, Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke says.

Reinecke, chairman of the state Energy Planning Council, said the energy crisis opens a "whole new horizon for California industry in particular."

He said he couldn't name specific projects which California's aerospace industry should begin. But he cited solar energy and rapid transit as examples of how technology can help the nation maintain its current standard of living using less energy.

Congress Seeks Equality With Executive Branch

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After decades of subservience, Congress reached beyond rhetoric in 1973 and began the slow ascent to equality with the executive branch. The 1974 elections may fashion a "veto-proof" Congress and render President Nixon all but impotent domestically during the last two years of his administration.

Despite some significant Congressional gains in 1973, however, Nixon retained the capacity to control most domestic programs—using the magic of one-third plus one to bend Capitol Hill to his will.

In effect, the Democratic-controlled 93rd Congress has the votes to juggle priorities and push its programs, but it lacks the two-thirds majority needed to override vetoes or ignore Presidential veto threats.

But as a result of the Watergate scandals, the mathematics could change when the 94th Congress convenes in 1975.

Pollster George Gallup told Republican governors last month any belief that Watergate has not done broad damage to the party was "wishful thinking."

Gallup said that if the election were held then, Republican membership in the Senate and the House could fall below the one-third plus one level needed to sustain Presidential vetos.

An analysis of the first eight Presidential vetoes this year indicates that the shift in most cases would not even have had to be dramatic or substantial to rob Nixon of his veto power.

The Senate, more liberal of the two chambers, sustained Nixon on three vetoes—one was by four votes and another by six. Only the 20-vote margin by which the Senate failed to override his veto of the USIA authorization bill is beyond reach of what a 1974 Democratic election sweep could overturn.

The House upheld Nixon on five vetoes—two of which had been overriden by the Senate—by margins of 10, 22, 29, 29 and 51 votes.

The ninth time Nixon tried to impose his will with a veto, Congress said no.

By 284-135 in the House and 75-18 in the Senate, Congress rejected the veto of the War Powers Bill which placed restrictions on a President's ability to engage U.S. forces in combat.

It was a startling defeat for Nixon and many observers traced it directly to continuing disenchantment by Republicans as new Watergate bombshells exploded.

The Minimum Wage Bill is the most graphic example of how the 1974 elections could shift the balance of power between Nixon and Congress.

The House and Senate passed a bill raising the minimum wage from $1.60 to $2 shortly after enactment, and to $2.20 one year later.

Nixon vetoed the bill Sept. 6, calling the speed of the increase inflationary and rejecting inclusion of domestic workers and employes of small retailers. He also insisted on a differential for teen-age workers.

On Sept. 19, the House sustained the veto, 259-164, 22 short of the two-thirds necessary to override.

Unable to compromise between the White House and organized labor on the question of equal pay for youths, backers of the bill shelved further moves until they see whether the elections will provide those 22 votes.

The constant battle for supremacy and the Watergate scandals obscured both the accomplishments and the failures of the first session of the 93rd Congress.

The exchanges of criticism between Nixon and Democratic Congressional leaders have vied for attention with the hearings of the Senate Watergate Committee; the inquiry into Nixon's impeachment; the battle over a special Watergate prosecutor; and the confirmation of House GOP Leader Gerald R. Ford to succeed Spiro T. Agnew as Vice President.

Congress can claim two major legislative victories over Nixon—both in the area of foreign relations, where there usually is a greater degree of bipartisan harmony.

Over his bitter opposition, Congress finally approved and forced Nixon to accept an end to the Indochina war by cutting odf funds for all military activities there.

Second, Congress overrode Nixon's veto of the War Powers Bill.

In addition, Congress legitimately can claim it has been numerically prodigious — approving many bills, sending many others toward passage. And Congress showed again that, faced with a crisis, it can move with dispatch.

After Nixon outlined the dimensions of the energy crisis, Congress gave him sweeping emergency powers and ended protracted haggling to speed final passage of the Trans-Alaska Pipeline Bill and mandatory allocations of fuel.

In an assertion of new-found independence, Congress refused to wait for an administration farm program and passed its own, which was first opposed, then accepted, by the White House.

But in other major areas, Congress again hesitated to go ahead before the administration was ready.

The 93rd was trumpeted as a "health Congress," but there was no action on comprehensive health insurance.

WARDS FINEST NON-BELTED TIRE: POLY-TRACK CUSHION RIDE

- 4 polyester plies for durability and smooth ride
- With 30-month tread wear guarantee

WARDS TREAD WEAR GUARANTEE

Montgomery Ward guarantees its passenger car tires to the original purchaser against premature tread wear-out with the exclusion of tires used commercially*—as follows:

PREMATURE TREAD WEAR-OUT

If a Montgomery Ward passenger tire wears down to the top of the tread wear indicators (to 2/32" tread depth) within the period of months or number of miles stated for a given quality of tire, Montgomery Ward will replace the tire for a prorated charge determined by the months or miles of use, whichever serves as basis for the guarantee.

Premature tread wear-out due to malfunction of the suspension system is excluded.

All prorated charges will be based on actual selling price in effect at the time of adjustment at the retail store to which returned or the catalog price in effect at the store or agency to which returned, in either case, including Federal Excise Tax.

For adjustments under this guarantee, return tire with the guarantee booklet issued at the time of purchase to any Montgomery Ward branch.

*Commercial use is defined as use on any vehicle for other than family or personal use.

- Due to the importance of proper vehicle maintenance in delivering stated mileage, Montgomery Ward will rotate tires purchased at retail or catalog stores having installation facilities free of charge, every 5,000 miles. Wheel alignment and wheel balance may be checked at that time.
- Montgomery Ward will repair nail punctures free of charge for the full term of the tread wear-out guarantee.
